

ELECTRIC CAR—Visitors to the 1967 Southern Farm Show, scheduled for today through Saturday in the Atlanta Civic Center's Convention Hall, will view a converted Renault R-10, named the Mars II. The Georgia Farm Electrification Council will sponsor the car exhibit. Shown is the electric car's power plant, a 30-kilowatt, lead-cobalt battery. The car, produced by Electric Fuel Propulsion, Inc., of Ferndale, Mich., has a range of from 70 to 120 miles when fully charged. The battery will take some 800 full charges before replacement—the equivalent of from 56,000 to 96,000 miles.

COMMENTS ON MEN AND THINGS

Would you consult your oil man about fabrics? Others do and they tell us of the marvelous fabrics made from oil.

Ponder this: "Petroleum chemicals, among the fastest-growing industries in the United States, has a rate of increase three and a half times that of the national industrial average. There are 10,000 different petroleum chemicals now used for innumerable products, and the list grows by 400 new chemicals or more every year. The most useful of all the basic petrochemicals are methane, ethylene, butylene, propylene and benzene. Although these five account for two-thirds of all the organic chemicals used in the United States; supply more than half the plastics, two-thirds of all the synthetic rubbers and detergents, and are a part of nearly all cosmetics, pharmaceuticals and insecticides from petrochemicals, they represent only 3%—a tiny fraction—of the output of American refineries. And it is from the five basic petrochemicals that over half of our synthetic fibers and fabrics are derived.

"Synthetic fibers and fabrics are not new—chemists have been at work inventing them for more than a hundred years. At the turn of the century, many were made from cellulose or coal tar or some hydrocarbon source other than oil. A great many still are made from these sources. The great growth of the recent past, however, has been in both inventing and manufacturing such chemicals from petroleum. Extraction from petroleum of the chemical substances is generally more economical and can be conducted on a mass scale not possible with the output of steel mills and coke ovens. Oil naturally lends itself to continuous systems and conversion of its hydrocarbon molecules into a myriad of forms . . ."

NATURAL GAS
Nature seems to do so much for us. You've heard quite a bit about natural gas; well, here's something more:

"Over the past two years the North Sea between Great Britain and the Continent has become one of the strangest-looking bodies of water on earth. By day its surface is peppered with ungainly oil rigs, like great pre-historic monsters on stilts. At night, passengers on low-lying planes and passing ships see tongues of fire that appear to be burning just above the surface of the water. Coming from the tops of the gas rigs, they are excess natural gas being flared (or burned) off. Over the past few months, the number of flares lighting up the surface of the water has been growing at a fantastic rate . . ."

The reserves of natural gas uncovered by all the oil companies in the North Sea add up to figures that are even more startling. At this stage of the game, with fields still beyond proven, estimates vary widely. But it is generally agreed that, barely two years after the sparring in the first well in British waters, drilling in the North Sea has turned up recoverable reserves of 30 trillion standard cubic feet of natural gas . . ."

"Does anyone know even remotely the amount in millions wasted by our government? Very few have anything beyond a mere dream of all the waste. Outraged Congressmen and Senators periodically complain of waste in administrative agencies, citing specific instances where the taxpayer has been fleeced through government bungling. But almost always, the snafu is quickly forgotten after a round or two of sensational notices in the press.

Not so with Rep. Otis G. Pike, the New York Democrat who is currently delivering to his colleagues in Congress a lesson in showmanship. Mr. Pike, of course, is the fellow who has taken a handful of bolts, nuts, screws, and knobs, added a masterful sense of timing and drama, and used them all to send nervous tremors through the Department of Defense.

His continuous revelations of DOD buying blunders—spending hundreds and thousands of dollars for items worth nickels and dimes—have embarrassed Defense Secretary Robert S. McNamara, moved the super-slouches of the General Accounting Office (GAO) into action, inspired forthcoming congressional hearings, and shaken the entire system of defense procurement, which buys $45 billion a year, into a major self-re-examination.

Mental Health Meeting Set

The 14th Annual Meeting of the South Carolina Mental Health Association has been scheduled for Nov. 7 and 8 at the Jack Tar Poinsett Hotel, Greenville.

Making this announcement was SCMHA Board Member and chairman of the annual meeting, Probate Judge Ralph W. Drake of Greenville. Judge Drake stated that the Program Committee had selected the theme "There is a Star in Your Future" which refers to the Comprehensive Community Mental Health Center. Fourteen such centers are planned for South Carolina. The five points of the star represent the five required services for a Comprehensive Center: in-patient, out-patient, consultation and education, patient hospitalization, and emergency services.

Commenting upon the meeting, Judge Drake said, "Our Program Committee, headed by Dr. Kenneth Warren and Mr. Tom Hall, have done an outstanding job in obtaining professional people to participate in the program."

Approximately 50 psychiatrists, psychologists, psychiatric social workers, professors, teachers, and judges will serve as resource people for the Workshop sessions.

Judge Drake added that approximately 350 delegates and Mental Health workers from every county in South Carolina are expected for the two-day convention.

Veterans Reminded Convert Insurance

Veterans of Vietnam and all servicemen recently separated from active duty are reminded by Stanley Zuk, manager of the Columbia Veterans Administration Regional Office, of the right to apply for an individual life insurance policy within 120 days after separation from service.

More than 99 percent of the servicemen participate in the Servicemen's Group Life Insurance program and are eligible to convert to private insurance when they are discharged, Zuk added. Veterans are covered by the group policy for 120 days after separation, without further payment of premiums.

The purchaser to pay for papers, stamps and recording. No personal or deficiency judgment is demanded and the bidding will not remain open after the sale but compliance with the bid may be made immediately.

Dated this 16th day of October, 1967.
