nace, smoldered and then burst into flames.

I have read news articles and even written editorials encouraging families to plan for fire emergencies and know what each member of the family is to do in case of such an emergency. Unfortunately, we hadn't even discussed it since moving into this house. We have now discussed it thoroughly.

In setting up your emergency program, I would suggest that one of the first steps would be to give serious consideration to putting on your pants or at least grabbing a blanket. Either that or select a neighbor who is very nearly your size.

JAMES P. SLOAN

Sloan Named Panel Member At Meeting

James P. Sloan, instructor at the University of South Carolina Regional Campuses in Union and Spartanburg, will take part in the program of the twentieth annual Industrial Editing Institute, sponsored by the Appalachian Industrial Editors Association and the School of Journalism of the University of Tennessee, in Knoxville, Friday and Saturday.

The Appalachian Editors group, one of ten affiliates of the American Association of Industrial Editors, of which national organization Sloan was president in 1960-61, is celebrating its twentieth anniversary.

Among the highlights of the Institute is a discussion of "Communications 20 Years Ago, Now, and 20 Years Ahead," to which Sloan will bring experience as director of industrial relations and guiding hand of an industrial publication for 15 years. During this time, the textile employes publication he directed won two George Washington Honor Medals of the Freedoms Foundation, Valley Forge, Pa. for "outstanding achievement in bringing about a better understanding of the American Way of Life," several citations from the same group, and regional awards for general excellence.

Sloan is now teaching political science, business communications, and related subjects in the university of South Carolina system. He is increased $232,660,233 during the nine-month period and at the end of September stood at a company high of $3,714,690, 481.
