follow-up clinic to inoculate those who missed the county-wide inoculation in October is planned.

Mrs. Rufus Sadler, Jr. is adult advisor for the Teen Action Program of which Mary Beth Manley and Sammy McCrary are teen chairmen. Other chairmen for the classes at Clinton High School will be announced soon and a variety of activities is being planned by Clinton teen-agers to secure funds for the battle against birth defects.

The mothers canvassing the residential areas will assume an added responsibility this year - that of taking a door count to determine how many of the children of this area have been inoculated against Rubella (German Measles). Rubella has proved to be one of the most frequent causes of defective babies when the pregnant mother contacts the disease, and a

Pressau Article Published

"Emotional Reactions to Innovations in Church Music" is the title of the lead article by Dr. Jack R. Pressau, Presbyterian College professor of religion and psychology, appearing in the January issue of MUSIC MINISTRY.

The article attempts to give a psychological explanation of why changes in church music arouse both positive and negative emotions, and it offers suggestions, based on psychological theory, for making changes with less stress. The article is based on a paper he read at the most recent South Carolina chapter meeting of the American Academy of Religion.

Art Exhibits Open At PC

Two exciting group exhibitions will be featured in the art showing scheduled to open in Presbyterian College's Douglas House Gallery on January 5.

They are the reproductions of the great masters from Columbia Museum of Art and the special Tri-centennial exhibition of the South Carolina Association of Schools of Art. The latter is composed of the works of 27 participating artists from 13 institutions utilizing such media as painting, printmaking, sculpture, ceramics, drawing and batik.

Institutions besides PC whose faculty are represented in the Exhibition are: Bob Jones, Clemson, College of Charleston, Columbia College, Furman, Gibbes Gallery, Greenville Museum School of Art, Newberry, Richland Art School, USC Coastal Carolina and the University of South Carolina.

Mrs. Alta Alberga, PC art instructor who coordinates the art exhibits on campus, said the many painting media in this showing include acrylic, oil, polymer, watercolor, lacquer as well as mixed media. An unusual item in the show is a batik, in which a piece of cloth is dyed with certain areas blocked out in advance with hot wax.
