The Great Temptation

"No," said the woman who was telling the story. "I did not have the time to do as I did - I took There was plenty of the time. good reasons why I should have taken it.

"At least 17 insistent duties glared at me from various corners of the They glared at me accusinghouse. ly, as one who would willingly neglect them. They glared at me indignantly, as one who lightly assumed duties with no idea of discharging them. They glared at me pityingly, as one who had been slackly brought up and . didn't know any better. But I turned my back on them all, dressed the children and went.

"This is why I went. I had taken a perfectly green girl from the intelligence office and trained her steadily for two months. I had trained her so that she understood what I was saying and could do the housework more than fairly well. Any one who has trained a green girl for two months at a stretch knows that a rest cure is due the trainer, but I'll never be able to introduce rest cures into my curriculum, so I didn't feel abused.

"And then one Thursday evening a tall, gaunt woman with a fairly good knowledge of English appeared and Stasia and she went up to Stasia's When they reappeared Auntie room. Wandaluski-for that was the gaunt one's name-held Stasia's papier mache suit case in her hand. Stasia, clutching her month's pay, acquired but two hours previously, brought up the rear.

· Stasia was about to leave, at once!

"No, the work was not too hard. No; she didn't want more money. She was about to be married, and, as the girl next door expressed it, I didn't even know she 'was keepin' company.'

"She went in the middle of the spring cleaning. She went when a sister-in-law whom I had never met was on her way from the Pacific coast to visit me. The three intelligence offices which constituted the first aid to the suburbs could send me no one for a and woke up sick.

"It was as I drank the tea that the great temptation teared its head. "Isn't it a lovely day?' said the great temptation, enticingly. 'You ought to be out of doors on such a day. Oh. well. I know the work isa't done and you have no girl, but the work will keep and the world is fall of girls.'

"At this point the duties that I have mentioned before stalled from their respective corners and tried the eifect of withering the great temptation, but it was waterproof.

Mercy an Arab Showed.

Abd-El-Kader, who died in 1883, is one of the noted patriots of Algiers. In 1833 when the Arabs rose up and tried to free themselves from the French Abd-El-Kader as sultan led his people against the French armies.

For fourteen years the war was waged, and though he had but few followers, his methods of attack and ingenious maneuvers, together with the wonderful power he held over his people, made it necessary for the French to send one hundred thousand soldiers into that country before they could conquer it. Before Abd-El-Kader's time the Arabs killed their prisoners. He treated them kindly, as guests, sending them money, clothes and food! Some women were once captured and brought to him, and as he set them free he exclaimed:

"Lions attack strong animals; jackals fall upon the weak."

Useful Article Missing.

Dr. William Tindall says that the published accounts of the reputed antagonism of a member of congress to the use of the toothbrush reminds him of an incident which occurred a number of years ago on a steamboat which ran from Galveston to Houston.

One morning, while the passengers were at breakfast, one of the travelers, who was somewhat belated in perfecting his toilet, and who, obviously, was one of those who are somewhat unfamiliar with the etiquette of the toothbrush, appeared at the door of his stateroom, which opened into the hall that served as a dining room. and called out with a drawl such as might have been expected from a primitive denizen of the back country: "Say, cap'n, whar'l I find the toothbrush that belongs to the boat?"

COOD FRIEMD OF THE FARMER

Valuable Work Done by Humble Earthworm Has Not Bean Sufficiently Appreciated.

The humble earthworm is one of man's best friends. The farmer and the gardener could not spare him. Dr. J Newton Friend tells about him in Science Progress. From Dr. , appointed chairman of the publicity Friends observations if apprart that worms aerate the coll in a variety of

There are at present in daily use in Venezuela three different systems of monetary standards. One is that based on the bolivar (equal to 19.3 cents) as the unit. This is in use by the government in its reports and transactions and is the official system, if it may be so called. Quotations in this system are in bolivars and centimos, a bolivar being divided into 100 centimos, although the smaller coin in this system has a value of 5 centimos.

The second system has the "peso fuerte" or "dollar" as its unit, the units being commonly referred to simply as "fuertes." This "fuerte" is taken to be equal to 5 bolivars and to be divided into 100 centavos.

The third system has the "peso macuquina," usually simply termed "pesos," as its unit. This "peso" has a value of 4 bolivars and is considered to be equal to 80 centavos, and to be divided into 8 reals, while the "fuerte" is considered to have 10 reals.

Some few of the mercantile houses keep their accounts with their customers in "fuertes." but most of the establishments render their bills in the "peso."

When accounts kept in the last two units are paid, they are transformed into bolivars by manipulating by five or four, as the case may be, payments being made by Venezuelan currency, coined gold and silver on the bolivar basis, or bank notes issued on the same system, although some foreign gold is in general acceptance at conventional rates.

Among the humbler classes making their purchases at the market, an article which would be worth 75 centimos of a bolivar, or 15 centavos of a "fuerte," will almost invariably be quoted at "a real and a half," or a purchase will be actually paid for by offering 6 bolivars, 621/2 centimos in coin, while the seller has stated the value to be "131/4 reals."
