CHANCE TO GAIN GLORY, DECLARES PRESIDENT

Mr. Wilson Says United States Owe it to Mankind to Help Rest of Mankind

Washington, August 3.—President Wilson to-day appealed to the people of the United States to remain calm during the war in Europe. He declared the United States owes it to mankind to help the rest of the world during the present crisis.

The President said the United States could gain great and permanent glory during the present trouble, providing no one lost his head. He urged that nothing be done in America to add to the excitement of the world. There is sure to be inconvenience to the financial institution of the country, he told callers, but added that the Administration is fully prepared to help in all difficulties. He asked that no credence be given unconfirmed reports of a sensational nature.

The President declared there was no cause for any serious alarm in the United States. The administration is bending every effort, he said, toward getting ships to carry the foodstuffs and other products of the United States to all the world and to bring home Americans stranded in Europe.

A proclamation of neutrality, Mr. Wilson said, will be issued as soon as it can be completed by the State

WESTERN COUNTIES HAVE BEEN VISITED

SENATORIAL CANDIDATES MEET AT AIKEN AND EDGEFIELD.

TO TOUR PEE DEE SECTION

Fourteen More Counties to Hear Aspirants For Seat in the Senate.

There were only two meetings of the senatorial candidates the past week, one being held at Edgefield Wednesday and the other taking place at Aiken Thursday. Both meetings were without any particular features, with the exception of the reception of W. P. Pollock at Edgefield and the hearing he received at the Aiken meeting, together with the enthusiasm displayed by the adherents of Gov. Blease at Aiken. He was carried in a banner bedecked vehicle at the head of a procession to the speaker's stand and received much applause. Senator Smith met with a hearty welcome at Edgefield and L. D. Jennings was given closest attention at both places, although he was heckled considerably at the Aiken meeting. There was practically nothing new in the county. He cited the failure of the governor to abide the results of the primary by his not appointing as auditor of Bamberg county H. C. Folk, who had been nominated by the people. He gave the governor's record as regards appointments upon his staff and replying to the chief executive's statement from day to day in regard to "Haskelites" he cited the naming by the governor of the son of a Republican upon his staff; of the appointment of the governor to his staff of J. P. Gibson, who ran on the red Republican ticket in 1880 along with negroes, and his appointment of James Sot'llie as a member of his staff. He said that white boys of South Carolina had to march in review before this "sawed off Dago," and before these men who had before been affiliated with Republicans. He said that the father of one of the governor's colonels had as a law partner a negro. He said that it was a pity that the state troops did not have to go to Mexico, as the sight of the governor with his "little dago colonel" being taken care of by the Mexicans would have been a glorious one to many people, but that this treatment would be nothing to what the people of this state would do for Blease and for Bleasism the twenty-fifth of August. He received much applause and calls for a continuance when he had concluded.

Jennings Makes Good Speech.

L. D. Jennings made perhaps one of the best speeches he has made during the campaign. He took the record of the governor to task and said that his efforts were being made to open the eyes of a good many misguided people who found themselves of a procession of his followers. Aiken county is a Blease county, and the governor there took a shot at practically everything and everybody. He criticized the recent Democratic state convention for passing a set of rules which would disfranchise the poor man, he said. He said his side, however had enrolled while the other side were asleep, and that he would win out in August by 8,000 to 13,000 majority. He paid his respects to a caucus which had been called by the members of the Aiken county delegation to the recent convention, this caucus to meet in the capital city soon. He said it would be a "rump" convention and asked the question, "Why do they want to eliminate anybody from the governor's race, if they are not whipped?" This was in reference to the call which was to eliminate some of the anti-administration candidates so as to centre upon one man and elect an anti-Blease candidate to the governorship. The governor took his usual rap at the newspaper men and said that they had to tell a lie in their reports in order to hold their jobs, and that if they sent in an honest report of the meetings it was changed in the office by the editors so as to make it appear that the crowd in the various parts of the state where meetings had been held were in favor of his opponents. He said that everybody could see for themselves that the Aiken crowd was a Blease crowd. He was presented with a gold-headed can given by the street car men who he said appreciated the fact that he did not send a military company against them when they had labor troubles. He was applauded to the echo when he com-

Some Choice Expressions

The following choice bits from a gentleman's (?) speech. I'll make you so sick you will have to hunt Dr. McIntosh" alluding to a physician who has been shot down by a midnight assassin with the remark "You will not bother Colie tomorrow." "We beat the hound out of you two years ago, and are going to beat the dog out of you this year." "If anybody starts something lots of you will be carried out, for we are here prepared."

Citizens of South Carolina, these were some of the remarks of your governor, during his speech in the opera house in Columbia; and the last remark shows the governor was there with an armed band ready to shoot to the death if occasion demanded it. What a spectacle for the governor of this proud State to make of himself. These remarks sound like they were made by one of the Mexican chiefs in Mexico, where the people are semi-civilized.—York News.

County Campaign Starts Today

The first of the series of meetings for county candidates to address the people will be held today at Brock's Mill. Tonight the candidates will address the citizens of Cheraw in the town hall.

Following is the date and place at which they will speak:

- Patrick—August 7.
- Cheraw—August 6 (at night).
- McBee—August 8.
- Jefferson—August 18.
- Pageland—August 19.
- Mt. Croghan—August 20.
- Ruby—August 20 (at night).
- Odom's Mill—August 21.
- Chesterfield—August 22.

department. He does not believe there will be any necessity for Congress to remain in session because of the situation in Europe.

Flattering to Lawyers.

Francis J. Kilkenny, Chicago Irishman who has been the means of sending hundreds of Irish boys and girls back to the green isle for a visit to the old folks, says that in the ancient city of Cork there is a street named Hell. During a recent sojourn in Cork he was amused by coming upon the following notice:

APARTMENTS TO LET IN HELL; SUI"ABLE TO LAWYERS.

"Despite its name," says Mr. Kilkenny, "the place is rather attractive; but I will agree with the landlord that as a headquarters for the legal profession it is not only suitable but appropriate."

speeches of any of the candidates, with the exception of the statement by Governor Blease that "the newspaper reporters had to lie to hold their jobs, and if they did send in the truth the editors would change it so that it would read against him and his candidacy," or words to that effect.

Pollocks Scores Blease.

This meeting was marked by strong speeches of W. P. Pollock in scoring the governor's record. Mr. Pollock said that there were three candidates in the race for the senatorship who he knew would keep their campaign pledges, but that he could not vouch for the governor's keeping his pledge. He said that he had violated his pledge to support the nominees of the primary when he refused to appoint J. E. Murray as master but appointed L. M. C. Oliveros, who was spoken of as the pardon broker of Aiken in a class headed by the governor and in which class there were the blind tigers and gamblers. He said he didn't hope to change these people, but only wanted to tell the misguided people of the company they were in. He said that the governor had stated at the Edgefield meeting that he had saved the state $92,000 by vetoes, and stated that in this number were the payments which should have been made for the stenographers in the recent asylum investigation, and the "governor wanted to close up the entire investigation" because it reflected upon him, that he had in that investigation cast aspersions upon the good name of a pure woman. He cited the Emerson case at Anderson where the father was slain in defense of his daughter's honor and the slayer was pardoned by the governor after a petition had been sent him signed by four thousand people not to grant the pardon. His rhetorical questions elicited much applause and when he concluded he was cheered to the echo.

Senator Smith Has No Apology.

Senator Smith made a tall tale speech in favor of his record. He said that he had been accused of being a man of but one idea, and that he had been abused for giving all his time to the farmers. He said he had no apology to make to anyone for giving all of his time towards remedying conditions in the agricultural districts of the South. In speaking of factionalism, he said that he was not trying to array class against class, but that his object was to work for that class which is the foundation to all prosperity, referring to the farmers. He spoke of his activity in aiding the administration at Washington, and his efforts in behalf of the farmers. He told of his work in getting an amendment to the currency bill recently passed by Congress which would aid the farmer materially. When the Senator took his seat he was given deafening applause and his friends crowded around him to shake his hand.

Bleasites Work, Others Sleep.

The next speaker was the governor who arrived at the stand at the head pleted his speech.

Meet at Edgefield.

The meeting at Edgefield Wednesday was distinctly an anti-Blease meeting, and few developments out of the ordinary transpired. The governor made what is considered a tame speech for him, and in it he referred to J. Wm. Thurmond, paying him compliments. Mr. Thurmond, it will be remembered, was the campaign manager of Judge Jones, who ran against the governor the last time and was defeated. He referred to the appointments made possible, he said, by the endorsement of Senator Smith. He said the senator did not go out and get a good farmer for United States marshal, but instead secured a newspaper man. He criticized the appointment of F. H. Weston as district attorney. W. P. Pollock scored the governor and received much applause. L. D. Jennings made his usual attack upon the record of the governor and Senator Smith spoke of his record in the senate. The crowd, it is said, was a Smith crowd.

Four Times This Week.

The candidates will speak next week to four audiences, opening up Tuesday at Camden. They will speak in the Pee Dee section of the state, there being fourteen more counties to be visited. The campaign is drawing to a close and each day there is added interest to the standing of the respective candidates.

Nothing new has developed in the McIntosh incident, with the exception of the affidavit of W. R. Richey, brother of R. A. Aichey, convicted of statutory rape and pardoned by the governor. W. R. Richey made affidavits that the signature of Dr. McIntosh to the recommendation for a pardon was genuine so far as he knew and that it was handed him by Dr. A. B. Knowlton, who has since died.
