The legislature met last Tuesday. We give the Governor's message in a supplement to-day.

The Hon. James Hemphill, one of Chester's oldest and most distinguished citizens, died suddenly Sunday night. He was the father of the Hon. John J. Hemphill.

Will We Have No Court?

The Supreme Court has pronounced the jury law of this State unconstitutional on account of there being different laws for different counties while the constitution provides that there shall be uniform laws throughout the State. Under existing conditions it is possible that we may have no jury cases at this term of court unless counsel on both sides agree for the case to go on.

Farmers' Day at the Exposition.

The Spring meeting of the State Agricultural and Mechanical Society will be held in the Auditorium on the Exposition Grounds, Charleston, on the 5th day of February next at 12 o'clock M. In consequence of this meeting, this day has been set aside by the Exposition authorities as "Farmers' Day," and the general attendance of the farmers of the State is expected.

In addition to the interest attaching to the meeting and the Exposition, the Good Roads Convention will convene in Charleston on the 3rd and continue through the 7th, February next, and those attending the meetings of the Society can also take in the meetings of the Good Roads Congress. This will be quite an interesting convention and one well worth the attendance of all farmers.

Don't Be Too Quick to Blame the Postmaster.

Don't blame the postmaster always if you fail to get the mail you expect. There are many causes which may prevent it reaching you exactly on the minute you may look for it. For instance:

Sometime early in the month of December last year a very valuable mail pouch was lost on the railroad near Columbia. The pouch was enroute from Charleston to the north via the Columbia division of the Southern and mysteriously disappeared. It was a valuable pouch and had a number of money letter remittances in it. One day last week a negro fisherman found the pouch on the side of the road near the canal locks. He turned it over to the postoffice authorities, who, after investigation, found that every letter in the bag had been opened. Those left in the pouch were personal letters and utterly useless to any one else except to those to whom they were directed.

Mail was received in Camden this week which was recovered from this pouch. So if you fail to get the letter or paper you may be looking for, don't be too quick to blame the postmaster. As a rule they do their work well, and the marvel sometimes is that the mails are handled with the dispatch and accuracy that they are.

Some great inventions I will relate. The most remarkable is the camera telegraph invented by Marconi. It is used to send messages without the aid of wires and wire. The electric type is another invention of great importance. It is used to print without ink.

Some other important inventions are such as the submarine boat, which floats under water. One sank the other day stayed fifteen hours under and came up again with the crew; the invention of a street car that travels 100 miles an hour; the invention of a balloon that can be guided, by Santos Dumont.

The year 1901 shows that the people of the world are becoming more enlightened every year.

All matter intended for this department should be addressed to Mr. L. J. McKenney, Antioch, S. C.

At the close of 1901 the Grangers find themselves in critical circumstances for they have not escaped the general catastrophe. Indeed it seems to have fallen heaviest upon the agriculturist. This condition is deplorable, but we cannot expect better as long as agriculture remains in its present state.

The getting of money for present use seems to be the all-absorbing purpose of the farmer of to-day. "Cotton presents the easiest way," and in the delusive hope the farmer has turned away from those things which are sources of his wealth and his maintenance. The price of cotton is not on an equality with the prices of provisions and fertilizers. The farmer makes his yearly calculations on his cotton average generally to his fall extent. An unfavorable year leaves him in debt often without corn to sustain his farm animals or wheat to sustain his family.

Brother Grangers, it is our humble opinion that as long as there exists an inequality between our products and those that we buy we need not expect a better state of affairs. Look after those things that will make the farm self-sustaining and to the improving of the land. In fact to buy less and produce more farm necessities; to buy less unguaranteed fertilizers and look more to the diversification of crops. Plant no more than can be worked with ease and calculate closely and intelligently on probabilities of unfavorable crops.

These suggestions appear to us to be our present help for we are not hemmed in on the one side by the greedy trusts and on the other side by the cotton speculator, and flanked by the credit system? Do not these things gradually drift the farmer toward final bankruptcy? Legislation could do much towards final bankruptcy? Legislation could do much towards equalizing prices, but until the farmer systemizes his work, encourages home markets and snatches himself from the clutches of the cotton monster we cannot hope for prosperity and equitable prices. Brother Granger, you know our order champions higher agriculture and education. If we will listen closely and act in accordance with its teachings we can raise agriculture to its rightful sphere, and through its educating influence broaden the farmers' life.

Let us pause and think deeply before we begin another year in the same old groove. Think not alone of self interest but of the interest of general agriculture as well.

I. J. M.

The State Grange held its annual meeting at Bishopville. It was well attended and much interest manifested. Among the delegates were many of our most wide-awake Grangers and from their words and actions had the cause of husbandry at heart. Our state Master, Bro. Thompson gave a report of the proceedings of the National Grange. It was instructive and proved to be the most skeptical mind that the Grange is a power. It showed that the Grange held the key to the farmers' advancement and that every farmer who wished to better himself and elevate agriculture should associate himself with it.

The Kershaw Poisons met at Antioch school house, Jan'y 8, 1902. The Grangers were a little slow gathering but when all arrived work was commenced with a zeal. The new officers were quickly installed; the other business that generally comes up and makes a fellow hungry were disposed of. The motion to have dinner was not rejected. All filed out to the table which was laden with good things in abundance. It was in the afternoon session that the interest rose to its highest. It was indeed interesting and instructive. Discussions were lively and to the point. Several old Grangers were there adding interest to the meeting by their advice and suggestions. The worthy master, J. C. Rollins is indeed a walking grange encyclopedia and nobly so. His cheerful face always inspires one. He is going to Darlington county to organize granges in those sections that have been without Grange influence so long.

A grange was organized at Ionia on the night of Jan'y 8th, with 19 members.
