Prohibition is now one of the leading questions in several of the states and all eyes are turned upon Georgia for it is she, that has been elected to set an example.
South Carolina and Alabama will probably take this question up next January and vote upon it. We hope they will, it will be a good deal easier, if the three states are dry.
We are glad that the experiment is to be made right at our very doors, so that the people can observe and see the good results of prohibition.

Public sentiment when backed by a just and righteous cause is a powerful factor in the adjustment of the conditions, and we believe it is a question of time when the people will see the whole country dry.—North Augusta
