THE "YELL-OH" MAN And One of His Ways,

To call a man a liar seems rude, so we will let the reader select this own term.

Some time ago the Manager of "Collier's Weekly" got very cross with us because we would not continue to advertise in his paper.

We have occasionally been attacked by editors who have tried to force us to advertise in their papers at their own prices, and, on their own conditions, failing in which we were to be attacked through their editorial columns. The reader can fit a name to that tribe. We had understood that the edifor of "Collier's" was a wild cat of the Sinclair "Jungle bungle" type, a person with curdled gray matter, but it seems strange that the owners would descend to using their editorial columns, yellow as they are, for such rank out and out falsehoods as appear in their issue of July 27th, where the editor goes out of his way to attack us, and the reason will appear tolerably clear to any reader who understands the venom behind it. We quote in part as follows:-"One widely circulated paragraph labors to induce the impression that Grape-Nuts will obviate the necessity of an operation in appendicitis. This is lying, and, potentially, doadly lying. Similarly, Postum continually makes reference to the endorsements of a 'distinguished physician' or 'a prominent health official,' persons as mythical, doubtless, as they are mysterious."

We do not hesitate to reproduce these mendacious falselyods in order that It may be made clear to the pub-He what the facts are, and to nall the har up so that people may have a look at him. If this poor clown knew what produced appendicitis, he might have some knowledge of why the use of Grape-Nuts would prevent it. Let it be understood that appendicitis results from long continued disturbance in the intestines, caused primarfly by undigested food, and chiefly by undigested starchy food, such es white bread, potatoes, rice, partly cooked cereals, and such. These lie in the warmth and moisture of the bowels in an undigested state, and decay, generating gases, and irritaiing the mucous surfaces until, under such conditions, the lower part of the colon and the appendix become involved. Disease sets up, and fre-

Now then, Grape-Nuts food was made by Mr. C. W. Post, after he had an attack of appendicitis, and required some food in which the starch isted; from his knowledge of dietetics he perfected the food; made it primarily for his own use, and afterwards introduced it to the public. In this food the starch is transformed by moisture and long-time cooking into a form of sugar, which is easily digested and does not decay in the intestines. It is a practical certainty that when a man has approaching symptoms of appendicitis, the attack can be avoided by discontinuing all food except Grape-Nuts, and by proporly washing out the intestines. Most physicians are now acquainted with the facts, and will verify the statement.

quently, of a form known as appendi-

Of course, this is all news, and should be an education to the person who writes the editorials for "Collier's," and who should take at least some training before he undertakes to write for the public.

Now as to the references to "a distinguished physician" or "a prominent health official" being "mythical persons." We are here to wager "Collier's Weekly," or any other skeptic or har, any amount of money they care to name, and which they will cover, that we will produce proof to any Board of Investigators that we have never yet published an advertisement announcing the opinion of a prominent physician or health alarges. official on Postum or Grape-Nuts. when we did not have the actual letter in our possession. It can be easily understood that many prominent physicians dislike to have their names made public in reference to any article whatsoever, they have their own reasons, and we respect those reasons, but we never make mention of endorsements unless we have the actual endorsement, and that statement we will back with any amount of money called for. When a journal wilfully prostitutes its columns, to try and harm a reputable manufacturer in an effort to force him to advertise, it is time the ablic knew the facts. The owner England next year. or editor of Collier's Weekly canset force money from us by such

UPPER CLASSES INDIGNANT

A Queer Situation Has Develope" a the Military Academy-Hardesi Test to Come Under Colonel Howze's Rule.

West Point N. Y -- A mild instance of attempted hazing which occurred at the Military Academy recently has caused some carlous complications It has been reported that the Commandant, Colonel Robert Lee Howze has threatened an entire class with dismissai. This, however, Colonel Howze characterized as nonsense. The curious feature about the sit uation is that the lower class man, the man upon whom the hazing was attempted, apparently had the sympathy of the upper class men, while the cadets who are opposed to him are the members of his own class. This is the first trouble that has arisen from hazing since the close of the Congressional investigation. Hazing is almost unknown at Wes-Point now," said Colonel Howke.

The trouble centres around a first year man, Cadet Bock, who halls from Missouri. An upper classman, Cadet Sherman, of Georgia, appar ently undertook to give Bock the "bracing up" exercise. This is about the mildest form of "hazing" there is It is about on a par with calistheni exercises in a gymnasium. As th story is told here, however, Cade Bock refused to obey the upper class man's order. The incident occurred while the corps was on its recent practice march. Cadet Sherman, it is said, called at Bock's tent later in the day, and again ordered the plebe to "brace up." Bock again de clined, and, according to the storcurrent here, his stubbornness to sulted in various forms of petty as

It has been said that Cadet Book voluntarily reported the matter to the authorities. This is denied by all hands here. THE GAMEKEEPER'S DAUGHTER.

Did Ever a Little Girl Have a Happier Time?

In all the great, green, quiet park there was no little girl or boy to play with; but for all that, little Georgina, the head gamekeeper's daughter, never knew-what it was to feel lomesome. She had such a playground and such playfellows as most of us have at times dreamed of, but none of us have had in reality,

In the first place, she lived with her good father and mother in just such a thatch-roofed, diamond-paned, rose-embowered cottage nestling beside a little mirror-like lake among century-old trees, as one sees in pic ture books, and reads of in poems and songs of Old England.

Almost as far as she could see, the level green park stretched away, breken here and there by clumps of giant oaks, and beyond up against the sky, was the blue line of tills that formed the edge of the world; and this lovely world was all her own, for, of course, Georgina, the only child, ruled in the pretty cottage as completely as her father lorded it over his many furred and feathered subjects.

In whatever direction she chose to wander she saw her playmates, wniting, as she always supposed, for her to come and day with them.

On the little lake by the cottage, floated and quacked and honked ducks of every color, white geese and gray and black goese, and graceful longnecked swans. At quite the other side of the lake she might see at the same time a herd of fallow deer, their brown bodies dappled with spots of showy white, their heavy horns contrasting strangely with the slender treelike horns of the red deer.

Innumerable little gray rabbits hopped noiselessly about in all directions, and English pheasants-the ons in modest buff, the cocks in orgeous brown, blue and gold-darted swiftly about among the naderbrush; but the queerest of all her friends were the gray kangaroos-"Hoppity-hops" Georgina called them. The grounds around the cottage were fenced off from the surrounding park, but Georgina had so frequently accompanied her father outside in his search for pheasants' nests, or to see how the deer fared, that she felt perfeetly at home there, even when alone.

Perhaps her greatest joy was in coaxing acquaintance with the timid baby deer. If she came suddenly upon one hiding in the grass, or behind a stone, it frequently remained quite motionless, curled up into the smallest possible space and pressed flat to the ground, only its watchful eye proving that it was wide awake and very anxious. In the leafy forest this would be its safest course, for there its protective coloring would render it almost invisible, but in the open park, on the green grass, its inherited instinct for concealment failed it, and it was all too visible to friend or foe. Georgina would creep up ever so quietly and sit down beside it. Sometimes she even succeeded in stroking its soft cost. Then the mother deer would circle anxiously around, coming as near as she dared, her great ears thrown forward, every nerve tense and ready to spring away at ended by the fawn suddenly scrambling to its long thin legs, and, with little cries of alarm, dashing over the green sward to join its mother and find concealment in the deep shadows of the cool ferest .- J. APPLE GROWING.

The statement of our fathers that better apples were grown when they were boys than now, is doubtless a truth that cannot be dented, and the reasons for the same are not very difficult to find. With the relentless destruction of the forests, the cultivation of the land for grain crops, and the passing of the rich virgin soil has come a climate not only more severe but much more erratic than formerly, more insects and disease to combat, and a soil that has become practically exhausted so far as available plant food, which makes possible both tree and fruit production, is concerned. In fact, the trees of today are surrounded by entirely different environments than were those of fifty and sixty years ago, and because of these changed conditions present day fruit growers have an entirely different problem to solve from that which confronted our fathers and grandfathers. In old days there was little need of science in fruit growing, but now the reason why certain methods of culture are necessary, which were not heard of FITS, St. Vitus Dance: Nervous Diseases perin early times, is as important to the as is the mere matter of how. Conditions require science to play an important part in apple culture as well as in all other business on the farm

Many of our readers are already aware that the cultivated apple is not a native of this country, but like most of our orchard fruits, was introduced into this country by early settlers, from Europe and Asia. In its original home the process of cultivation and improvement has been going on for thousands of years, and the varieties which we know today are the product of centuries of honticultural skill in selection, cross-pollination and hybridization well directed for the characteristics of the fruit which, for best results, requires more or less favorable conditions as regards both soil and climate, although having a most wonderful power of adapting itself to different environments. In different countries and different states one may easily find localities which are naturally adapted to fruit growing, while other portlons are better adapted to the growing of grain and hay, these conditions being due either to climatic influences or to the character of the soil or both .- Prof. J. Troop, in the Indiana Farmer.
