CAMDEN, S. C., SEP. 23, 1910

When you buy of your home merchants you are helping the town and thereby sharing in the profits of your own purchase.

The world's greatest men grew upward from the lowest classes, while the world's meanest men grew downward from the upper class.

Many a woman goes out shopping dressed in silk and enveloped in perfume whose hard-working husband hasn't had a new suit of clothes in five years.

Don't teach your children that it is a shame to wear worn and patched clothes if you are not able to afford better, but that it is no honor in wearing new ones that are not paid for.

In his card of thanks to the voters Mr. Featherstone says: "I made a clean, honest, manly fight. I did not engage in personal abuse. Not one word did I say against my opponent."

There are pillows wet by sob; there are gentle sensitive natures scared and warped; there are old time friends separated and walking their lonely ways with hope dead and memory but a pang; there are cruel misunderstandings that make life bare, these are but a few of the sorrows that come from the crimes of the tongue.

One of our exchanges vouchsafes to the fraternity this week some "pointers" on journalistic ethics which might be better received were it not for the fact that in giving the pointers this free dispenser of journalistic ethics is guilty of the very sin it is condemning, and while it may enjoy being made a cat's paw, we would remind it that there is not much honor in that sort of business.

In order that a town or city may grow it must have factories so as to induce people to make their homes there. People will flock where there is employment. The question of securing factories and other sources of employment must be agitated and inducements held out for investment. As a starter, we would suggest the feasibility of putting in a pickle and canning factory. We feel sure that our farmers would see the benefits such an institution would be to them as well as to the town.

Advertise Your Business. Don't imagine for a moment that advertising will not bring you results in your immediate field. A mistake that a great many merchants make is that they think their store is so well known that it doesn't require newspaper advertising—that the trade will naturally drift their way anyhow. There isn't a store anywhere in the world that has so secure a footing as that—not a single store—and you are not doing business in a field but that your sales can be increased by careful newspaper advertising. If this is not true, why is it that a stream of mail orders are constantly going out of your town to catalog houses? And are not these sales made by catalogue houses the result of persistent advertising in the very field you feel that you have cultivated to the limit? Whenever you get such an idea fixed in your mind and really believe that there's nothing more to conquer, you are simply turning over ready money to the man that does possess the broader vision—you are ceding territory and rights to others that careful newspaper advertising would retain in your possession.

Sketch of Cole L. Blease.

Coleman Livingston Blease was born forty-two years ago on a farm in Newberry county. His father, Henry H. Blease, and his father's three brothers saw service in the Confederate army. Basil Blease one of these brothers because of his daring bravery was steadily promoted from the position of private to the rank of captain.

Henry H. Blease, the father of the subject of this sketch married Mary Livingston of what is now Saluda county, formerly Edgefield. The Livingstons were all farming people. Cole L. Blease was admitted to the bar twenty-five years ago. He soon became one of the leaders of his profession, and he has continually enjoyed an excellent practice. For the past fifteen years he has been connected with many of the important cases tried in Newberry county. He has also been associated in important cases in many other counties of the State. For two years he served as city attorney of Newberry.

Mayor Blease was married several years ago to Miss Lillie Summers whose father, a farmer, resides in Anderson county. Mrs. Blease's father was a Confederate soldier, her grandfather was in the Mexican war, and her great grandfather was Capt. Pillemon Walters, a soldier of the revolution. Being a descendant from him, Mrs. Blease is a member of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

When Cole L. Blease was a very young man he was chosen to represent Newberry county in the House of Representatives. Twice he was reelected, each time heading the legislative ticket by a handsome majority. In the house he was recognized as a leader; and because of his ability as a parliamentarian he was twice elected as speaker pro tem. In 1904 Mayor Blease was elected to the State senate from Newberry county by a handsome majority, and was chosen by the members of the senate as president pro tem of that body in 1907, serving in this capacity for two years. He voluntarily retired from the senate with the close of his term in 1908. He is now mayor of his home town, Newberry, having been elected to that position in December 1909.

For two years he was county chairman of the democratic executive committee. Several times in succession he was elected by the county convention as a delegate to the State convention. For the past twelve years he has represented his county on the State executive committee. In politics Mr. Blease has always been a straight democrat. Both in 1896 and 1909 he was one of the presidential electors for William J. Bryan, the Democratic nominee for the presidency.

Who in this blessed, prosperous county is not able to give one day's work to support some orphan child? There are about 1,000 orphan children being educated and trained in South Carolina institutions. Their officials have asked all the people to give them one day's work or let's equivalent on Saturday, Sept. 24. Why can't everybody lend a hand? One may send to the institution of his own preference, as all are uniting in the plan. Our people are able to do nobly and we hope they will.

To bring up a child in the way he should go, travel that way yourself. Stories that heard at a mother's knee are never wholly forgotten; a little spring that never dries up on our journey through searching years. The sooner you get a child to be a law unto himself, the sooner you make a man of him. Children need models more than criticism. We can never check what is in the young unless we cherish what is good in them.

The farmer herds the knee to none, and is less disturbed by the world-wide reign of graft and greed than any of his fellows. May he live long and prosper—this son of the soil, who is the balance wheel of the universe.

Mr. James Byrnes has just been elected to Congress from the Second District by a majority of 58.

Snow fell in the upper part of this State one day last week.
