It is a fact that it pays to paint even if no consideration is taken of the beauty and dignity added to farm life by the work. Let the houses of a neighborhood all be painted, and there will surely follow, greener lawns, more flowers, shrubbery, better fences, neater out-buildings—a general renovation and "smartening up," in fact. Set the example in your neighborhood. If your buildings need painting, and see if others do not imitate it.

Great differences will be noticed in the experiences given. Some believe the farmer should do his own painting; some say to hire a painter. Again, some are well pleased with certain cheap paints; others say they are no good. We do not feel competent to decide these questions if indeed they need deciding. It seems to us that if one can do good work painting, and can do this work at odd times, it will certainly pay him to do it himself. It will even pay him to spend some time working on the back yard fence and the back side of the barn learning just how to handle a paint brush. Such knowledge as this never comes in amiss. When one does not feel, however, that he can do the work as it should be done, he should by all means hire a competent painter to do the job. It is far better to pay a little extra and have the work well done than to save money by sacrificing good look and the satisfaction they bring.

When it comes to kind of paint to use, the question is still harder to decide. If one can get good results from a cheap paint, all good and well; but it should be remembered that the extra cost of good paint is a very small matter if it gives a coat that will last eight or ten years where the cheap paint lasts only three or four. Most of our contributors seem to favor the white lead and oil paints; but all white lead paints, so-called, are not good paints. In only a few States is there any law compelling paints to be sold for what they actually are. No Southern State has such a law, although every one should have. The Texas Experiment Station did some work along this line, and found that of 11 samples of so-called white lead, five were adulterated and two contained no white lead at all. Of 14 mixed paints examined, only four were pure lead and zinc paints. Six samples contained 10 to 15 per cent. of carbonate of lime; three were largely barium sulphite, and one contained 15 per cent carbonate of lime and 15 per cent clay. These figures make it plain that one should use great care in selecting paints. Buy only standard brands—guaranteed by reliable houses—that is, either by the manufacturer or by the local dealer. Be sure, too, that the guarantee means something.

This means extra trouble, of course, and perhaps extra expense, still it will pay to take trouble and bear the expense to get good paints and have the job well done. It pay to paint in any case, but the better the job the better it will pay.—Progressive Farmer.

A Restful Life.

We sent our reporter out to Geauga county last week to interview an old codger who was celebrating his 104th birthday.

"How do you account for the fact that you have been able to attain this remarkable age?" asked our bright young man.

"To the fact that I have never worked a lick before breakfast," answered the centenarian.

"This is a fact worth remembering," muttered the reporter, making a note of it.

"There's another thing that pa failed to mention," a son-in-law whispered in the newspaper man's ear.

"What is that?"

"He never done a lick of work after breakfast, neither. Git that in your story, too." — Cleveland Plain Dealer.
