R. S. Williams.

For Alderman Ward 3.

I hereby announce myself as a candidate for Alderman from Ward 3, subject to the rules of the Democratic Primary.

R. B. Williams.

Believing that the majority of the residents of Ward 3 wish me to continue to serve them as Alderman from our ward, I have consented to become a candidate for re-election. I do this after being assured by a large number of voters of this Ward that they do not desire a change at this time. I appreciate the fact that you have honored me with election to this office and I have served you for nearly two years to the best of ability and will continue to do so if you see fit to nominate me, in the coming Democratic Primary.

W. Robin Zemp.

For Alderman Ward 4.

I hereby announce myself as a candidate for Alderman in Ward 4, in the City Democratic Primary.

BOT: GOOD AND BAD MEANING

Innumerable Superstitions Connected From Time Immemorial With Wild Creatures.

There are very many superstitions connected with wild animals. In the case of a lion, it is believed that the wearing of a claw of this animal will bring great strength.

People connected with circuses and shows have a saying that when lions get restless and uneasy, either ill luck or extremely bad weather is at hand, and that when they continually wash their faces in cat-like fashion they are likely to have fits of ill temper in the near future.

Numberless are the superstitions associated with the tiger. The natives of India believe that its whiskers are a deadly poison, and that when finely chopped and secretly put into a person's food they will assuredly cause death. What is known as the "evil eye" is greatly dreaded in India, and to avert this parents hang the claws of tigers round the necks of their children.

To see a wolf is supposed to be a good sign, but if a man sees a wolf before the wolf sees him, then he will become dumb for the time or lose his voice.

For a hare to run across anyone's path is considered a very bad sign in some parts of England, because in olden times it was believed that witches transformed themselves into hares in order to bring bad luck to their enemies.

HIS BRAIN WORKED SLOWLY

Small Boy Turned Statement Made by His Teacher to Good Advantage.

"Strange to say," said the school-teacher, addressing his class of boys, "our brain acts as a telephone to the different parts of our body. Unconsciously, before we move our feet or hands, the message comes from the brain."

"Jack Murphy, what are you grinning at?" he demanded.

"I was thinking of somethin', sir," came the answer.

"Well, think of something that'll do your brain a little good!" retorted the master.

"Here, come out of that!"—as another grin spread itself over the saucy youngster's face. "Just stand behind the board for half an hour, and I'll give you something to grin about afterward!"

At the expiration of the lesson Murphy was recalled.

"Hold your hand out!" demanded the teacher, switching his cane.

No, response from the stolid Murphy, who appeared to be thinking hard.

"Do you hear me, Murphy?" exclaimed the exasperated man.

"Yes, sir," he answered, "but my brain hasn't sent the message down yet!"

Deo Volente.

How conceptions of travel have changed is illustrated by the disappearance of the old "D. V." provision. Writing of the Bath road, Mr. Tristram notes that in Charles II's time the coaches between London and Bath in three days "if God permit;" but in 1780 the time had come down to two days, and the pious saving clause was omitted. "God permit," according to Grose, was a regular slang term for the old stage coach, and readers of Scott will remember what the Anti-Quary said about it. But Dean Ramsay tells of the village carrier who, upon being asked when he would be at Aberdeen, replied: "I'll be in on Monday, God willin' and weather permittin', an' on Tiseday, fither or no."

Spoiled the Show.

There is a good story of an actor who was depicting on the boards a powerful pathetic part.

He had made up marvelously to look starved to skin and bones, tottering on the verge of death from starvation, gasping for breath, and weak from emaciation.

Still, he had on his fingers a flashing diamond ring, and the sarcastic gallery reproved him for it one night.

At the critical moment the hero faltered out in agony to the gallery: "Good heavens! If this fails, what shall I do?"

The answer floated down unexpected from the top seats:

"Pawn yer ring!"

The act was spoiled.

Roses for Restoring Hair.

Roses form the chief ingredient in what is probably the earliest recipe for a hair restorer on record. According to Pliny, "wild rose leaves reduced into a liniment with bear's grease make the hair grow again in most marvelous fashion." Pliny also recommends "ashes of rose as serving to trim the hairs of the eyebrows." Roses figured prominently in several old-time strong drinks, such as rosa solis, which consisted of rose water mixed with aqua vitae and flavored with cinnamon. The favorite morning draft among Elizabethan roysters was "rosa solis, to wash the molligrubs out of a moody brain."

His Own Fault.

"Out of a job, are you, Flaxby?"

"Yes; they got my scalp finally."

"How long had you held that office?"

"About 30 years. And it's pretty tough, at my age, to have to take up some new occupation to make a living."

"Haven't you got enough to live on?"

"I should say not!"

(Looking at him with disgust.)

"Flaxby, you make me tired! You're not fit to hold a public office!"
