Southwest against planting varieties of cotton that usually produce a staple less than seven-eighths inch in length, especially such varieties as are said to produce half seed and half lint. In view of the approaching planting season, the Department wishes to reiterate these warnings for the benefit of the entire cotton belt. The producers of cotton, for their own welfare should heed this advice, and should exercise judicious care in the selection of planting seed.

The following reasons are given for warning cotton growers against planting any variety that usually produces a staple of less than seven-eighths length:

1. Cotton of less than seven-eighths inch staple is of approximately the same spinning value as the bulk of the cotton of India. On economic principles, the American product should be maintained on a higher level of intrinsic worth than that of India in order that the American crop may not be forced to compete in the markets of the world with the cotton of India.
2. Cotton of less than seven-eighths inch staple is inferior to the average American quality, and localities that produce such cotton in appreciable quantities soon establish reputations for an inferior product. The price of all cotton in such markets will suffer on account of the poor reputation of the market.
3. Competent cotton buyers discriminate against extremely short staple whenever such cotton is discovered. They should be equally careful to discriminate in favor of cotton of good staple. The farmer who produces inferior cotton is likely to find that his product brings a price materially lower than quotations would indicate as its true value. The seller commonly looks upon such discrimination as a penalty, while the buyer considers that he is paying the full value for an inferior commodity.
4. Under the common practice of the cotton trade, the price of spot cotton is governed largely by future quotations. In order that future quotations might more accurately reflect the value of spot cotton, Congress, in the United States Cotton Futures Act, provided a form of contract, exempt from the tax imposed by the Act, on which cotton of extremely low grade or which is less than seven-eighths inch in length of staple is not deliverable. This action by Congress was intended primarily for the benefit of producers. One of its results was the adoption by the New York and New Orleans Exchanges of the exempted form of future contract, so that cotton of less than seven-eighths inch in length of staple cannot be delivered thereon. This legislation in no way affects any sale of spot cotton.
5. As the variety of seed planted is the primary factor in determining length of staple, and as there are early maturing prolific varieties which produce a staple of at least an inch in length, no farmer or community is

TIMELY POINTERS FOR ORCHARD AND GARDEN

(Clemson College Bulletin.)
 Now is a good time to top graft apple trees.

If you have on hand Irish potatoes from your fall crop they may be used for spring planting.

Now is a good time to plow and fertilize the orchard that is not planted to a cover crop.

In planting vegetables use enough seed to be sure of a good stand. If later the plants require thinning this is preferable to the inconvenience and delay of making a second or third sowing.

Cut back old seedling pecan trees for top budding during the coming summer. Saw off the main trunk so as to leave 5 or 6 branches and cut these back to stubs 8 or 10 inches in length. New shoots form on the stubs which by the middle of summer will be ready to be budded.

Soak seed Irish potatoes in a formalin solution to prevent scab. Use one-half pint of commercial formalin to 15 gallons of water. Let the potatoes remain in the solution for two hours and plant two or three days after the treatment.

Plant melons, cucumbers, squashes, and other vegetables that do not transplant readily in the hot-bed now. The plants will get a few weeks start of those grown from seed planted in the open ground and consequently come into bearing earlier. Tomato cans make a good substitute for pots if the bottoms are melted off.

WONDERFUL FOREST PARK

Offers The Benefits And Delights Of An Out-Door Life.

A magnificent national playground for recreation and camping purposes, is now a reality in the Mount Mitchell National Forest of Western North Carolina. Under the direction of Mr. H. S. Graves, Chief Forester of the United States Forest Service, arrangements have been completed for the use of this wonderful region to all who may wish, either permanently or temporarily, to enjoy its advantages and beauties.

For years it has been a dream of those familiar with the sublimity of the Southern Appalachian Mountains that the territory included in the Mount Mitchell National Forest, should be preserved, in its primeval grandeur and sylvan beauty, as a pleasure park for the people of the entire country. The dream now is about to be realized.

Through the action of the National Government and the State of North Carolina, the Mount Mitchell region will be preserved as one of the beauty spots of the Western world.

Mount Mitchell, the peak of commanding interest in the new national forest, took its name from Dr. Elisha Mitchell, a professor of the University of North Carolina. A man of great learning and notable achievements in the realms of science, he measured the height of the mountain in 1835, and established the fact that its summit was the highest land in North America, east of the Mississippi River. Twenty-two years later, while verifying his original measurements, he lost his life near the summit of the "mountain which he loved so well."

The scene of his death was romantically beautiful. Pouring over a precipice, a mountain torrent originally had tumbled sheer many feet to solid rock below. The attrition of its waters for centuries had worn out a smooth, circular basin, quite fourteen feet deep and as many feet in diameter. In the clear, cold, limpid water which filled the basin lay the body of Dr. Mitchell, perfectly preserved. He had fallen down a steep declivity into the pool and, among the mysteries of Nature which he had studied so diligently, he had given up his life. His grave today is at the very summit of his beloved mountain.

For all time and in perpetuity for the American people, assurance now is given that this grand tract of forest and mountain land will be kept; but it was only two or three years ago that the woodman's axe menaced its sublime beauty. Lumbermen had purchased the timber on Mount Mitchell and were about to cut it when the Hon. Locke Craig, Governor of North Carolina, intervened. Through his urgency, the General Assembly made an appropriation for the purchase of the land and timber around the summit for park purposes. Additional mountain lands have been taken under the supervision of the Government and converted into the Mount Mitchell National Forest, which stretches in a magnificent panorama of sylvan scenery north and west and east of the city of Asheville.

Fine automobile boulevards and roadways radiate from the city into this superb natural park. They are well-maintained and lead to innumerable points of historic and scenic interest. Scores of horse-back and foot-trails beckon the follower into the very midst of primeval solitude. Many of the trails are easily followed and all of them afford delightful out-door experiences; but the traveler uninitiated in mountain-craft would better accompany a guide.

The negotiation of the mountain trails afforded by the Mount Mitchell National Forest is fascinating sport and, in the salubrious climate of the park, is among the most healthful of physical exercises.

The practical advantages to be offered in the National Forest, through Chief Forester Graves, even outweigh the sentimental and scenic advantages. Charming sites for cottages and temporary camps are to be placed at the disposal of those who may desire them. Only the mildest restrictions will be imposed upon campers, visitors and permanent residents. Mount Mitchell National Forest is, indeed, to be a park for the people, where, in the most beautiful and healthful environments of Nature, they may reside either temporarily or permanently.

In the very heart of the Southland the Government in establishing this reservation first of all for the protection of the streams has made available for the people this wonderful forest park which offers the benefits and delights of an out-door life in the midst of ideal surroundings.

A case of interest to corporations, required under the federal corporation income tax law to make annual returns, came up in United States court at Florence Saturday. The Hallman Knitting Mill company, of Montmorenci, did not file returns for the years 1913 and 1914 until several months after the required time. The corporation department of the office of the collector of internal revenue suggested that the case be compromised by a suitable offer for the violation of the law, but this the company refused to do, although the returns were submitted. As a result the case was taken into the courts and Saturday Judge H. A. M. Smith directed a judgment of $1,000 each in the cases brought for the two years.
