

Will Be Called to Service.
 Baltimore, March 24.—When members of the class of 1917 of the United States naval academy receive their diploma at the graduation exercises next Thursday morning at Annapolis there will be a mixture of gladness and sadness. In other years the commencement exercises have formed the climax to a week of gaiety. This year it will be different. Every one will feel that the young men who receive their diplomas are being called forward not for frolic but because their country needs them in what promises to be one of the greatest crises in the country's history. The men who receive these diplomas will step from the academic halls to the decks of warships. There are 163 members in the class. Those from South Carolina are Francis W. Benson, William S. Heath and Hugh S. Sease.

GOT MONARCH TO INTERCEDE
Frenchwoman's Clever Idea to Secure Release of Friend Who Was Prisoner of War.
 They tell a very pretty story about the charming "Mlle. Mistinguett, a widely and justly celebrated person in Paris. Mlle. Mistinguett had a friend—a very dear friend—who was serving his country like other brave Frenchmen when he was captured and carried off to be a prisoner among the Germans. Months had passed and this important individual was still a prisoner—and months are very long for those who wait at home. Mlle. Mistinguett was almost in despair when she remembered that she had been presented once upon a time to his majesty Alfonso XIII, king of all the Spains.
 "Suppose," she said to herself, "I ask the king to intercede, so that they will let him come home?"
 It was a mad idea, perhaps, but the maddest ideas are sometimes those that accomplish most. Mlle. Mistinguett did actually write to the king of Spain, and in answer to her letter received one from the king's own chamberlain. Therein it was set down that "his majesty was very happy to serve her, and was going to do what he could to hasten the return to France of M. Henri Chevalier." The word of a king is the word of a gentleman. Mlle. Mistinguett is serenely confident that the long months of waiting will soon be at an end. And the teller of the story thinks that Mlle. Mistinguett is right.

BRINGS DEATH TO HOPPERS
Simple Little Contrivance That Should Prove a Boon to Farmers in Many Localities.
 You have to hand it to the United States department of agriculture! Here without any fuss and beating of tomtoms, and without an advisory board of inventors, it has forged right ahead and invented all by itself the cutest little hopperdozer you ever heard tell of. If you have a nice level farm thickly infested with grasshoppers you ought to invest in a hopperdozer, for a hopperdozer will end the earthly existence of a grasshopper as quickly as a 42-centimeter would.
 Of course, few of us city folk have farms; but we all eat food raised on farms, and the more grasshoppers on the farm the less food we get, so you see why we ought to appreciate this hopperdozer invention. It is only the name that causes us to view the invention in this semi-frivolous light. There, we had almost forgotten to tell you what a hopperdozer is, so inclined to faithful handling of the subject were we. It is nothing more than a pan of water concealed beneath a stream of kerosene, when this is drawn through a grasshopper-infested field the hoppers all hop into the kerosene (we don't know why) and are drowned in the water. Wilkes-Barre Times-Leader.

Steam to Clear the Soil.
 A new piece of agricultural apparatus has been developed for the purpose of combating the destructive bugs and undesirable vegetable growths by an application of steam to the soil penetrating some distance below the surface. The machine carries a steam-generating plant and moves over the surface on a large drum, the periphery of which is staggered with protruding steam outlets in the shape of blades or spines. As the apparatus is drawn over the ground the spines embed themselves in the soil and while in this position the steam is released and penetrates the soil for some distance around the outlet, killing the worms, larvae and bugs and the undesirable crop of weeds which seed themselves from one season to another.—Scientific American.

Fiji Prince a Private Soldier.
 A translation of a young Fijian chief's impressions of the fighting in France is given in the Field. He is Ratu Sukuna, a nephew of the late King Thakomban, who enlisted in the Foreign Legion. He writes: "A thing that amazed me were the shells that were fired. They seemed like the noise of a trumpet; then like a whistle with a devilish voice, and we were not at all comfortable. It was as if the elements were kicking our sides and our heads shook, and it was as if our stomachs were on fire. When the Germans attacked they came twice under the fire of our great guns, and we scattered them like a flock of fowls, and then our artillery and machine guns ate them up."

Facts About the Bee.
 Dr. N. E. M'Indoo of the Smithsonian institution, Washington, has recently completed four years' experiments on the senses of smell and taste in 5,600 honey bees. He has reached the conclusion that these two senses are combined in them so closely that they cannot be separated. He has also investigated the bees' sense of touch, and finds that it is by this sense it is able to mold the walls of all its cells in uniform thickness.

Would Abolish Written Home Work.
 Public school teachers in New South Wales are asking that written home work be abolished in all primary schools. They also ask that no school be built on or close to main traffic arteries; that a domestic science college be established and that all reports concerning any teachers be open for inspection by the teacher concerned.

THE WOES OF A SIX-FOOTER.
Inconveniences Which Every Tall Person Knows About.
 For some reason best known to themselves, the persons who manufacture household goods cater to undersized and not full-grown humans. A chiffronier of today is a thing of torture to a man of decent size. If he wishes to look into a glass as he combs or brushes his hair the highest reflection he gets is of his brisquet or his neck. To get a peep at his face he has to tilt the glass and nine times out of ten the glass will not remain tilted. This sort of thing has been known to sour a naturally sweet disposition.
 When he strives to bathe he has to climb into a tub fitted for a lilliputian. When he goes to labor he has to stoop at times to get through a door, for in street cars or subway the doors are but a trifle over six feet in the clear, and a high-crown hat is likely to be bumped.
 When he goes to bed he cannot stretch out his weary bones without touching either footboard or headboard, or at the risk of getting his feet out from under sheet and blankets; a most disagreeable experience these winter nights. Bed clothes, like chiffroniers and beds seem to be fashioned for persons not long drawn out.
 No wonder Oklahoma passed laws specifying the length of sheets and the size of beds. If the furniture men do not reform the titans of the east may rise and demand their constitutional rights. To the American is promised life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness. What happiness is there for the person who has to make a corkscrew of himself in order to see how to adjust his tie. And is a national charter if he is forced to spread his manly form north, east, south and west in order to keep it within the limits of the modern bed?—New York Mail.

Thrift.
 Without me no man has ever achieved success, nor has any nation ever become great.
 I have been the bed rock of every successful career, and the corner-stone of every fortune.
 All the world knows me, and most of the world heeds my warning.
 The poor may have me as well as the rich.
 My power is limitless, my application boundless.
 He who possesses me has contentment in the present and surety for the future.
 I am of greater value than pearls, rubies and diamonds.
 Once you have me, no man can take me away.
 I lift my possessor to higher planes of living, increase his earning power, and bring to realization the hopes of his life.
 I make a man well dressed, well housed and well fed.
 I insure absolutely against the rainy day.
 I drive want and doubt and care away.
 I guarantee those who possess me prosperity and success.
 I have exalted those of low degree and those of high degree have found me a helpful friend.
 To obtain me you need put out no capital but personal effort, and on all you invest in me I guarantee dividends that last through life and after.
 I am as free as air.
 I am yours if you will take me.

Advertising of the Right Sort.
 Mr. Owens in his address to the merchants of Spartanburg last night said: "You cannot spend too much money in advertising of the right sort." Mr. Owens spoke as the head of a department store of the most modern type. With him advertising is a daily subject of thought and care. He spoke as one having authority, and truthfully.
 The right sort of advertising gets results. There is no question as to the truth of that. There are too many examples of success from the right sort of advertising to permit question. Mr. Owens' idea that the merchant who regards the preparation of his advertising copy as a side line, and does it without thought and purpose, is losing money and business, is correct. He advocates greater care and thought in the preparation of advertising copy which is after all the secret of advertising success.—Spartanburg Herald.
