SUMMER BLOUSES AND SKIRTS

For Service As Well As Smartness Are White Tub Waists. New York, July 31.—Vacation time brings the need for more than the usual number of practical clothes—this, we all know by experience. Among other things, those who plan their vacation wardrobes with foresight will include a goodly number of separate waists and skirts. The waists may even be planned with a view to wearing them in the fall with the coat suit or with separate dresses. From the comfortable morning smock to the sheer and dainty blouse for afternoon wear, there is certainly a very large variety of interesting blouses this summer. The practical white blouse that launders nicely is deservedly a favorite, for when fresh from the tub it never fails to give the wearer that crisp, fresh look, whether it is worn with white or colored skirts. In the sheer blouses, voile, organdie, and handkerchief linen are the materials most used, but this summer they are also wearing blouses of China silk, which material launders perfectly and is just as cool as possible. For service as well as smartness there is nothing better than the white gabardine skirt, which has no fear of the tub. It is very much in demand this summer and sometimes comes with colored stripes or dots. Skirts of silk or wool jersey in white and colors are of course, very smart this season. A new model developed in green wool jersey is shown in the accompanying sketch. It is made with a plain panel in front, and the sides and back are slightly gathered. The novel feature of this skirt is the pocket section at the side. Many of the new skirts show this feature treated in various ways. In the design illustrated, the pointed ends of the lower section are buttoned to the upper section. One of the smart blouses of the season which would be a welcome addition to any woman's wardrobe is pictured with this skirt. It is of fine handkerchief linen with an embroidered spray across the front, and collar and cuffs edged with a narrow crocheted lace. This is a blouse that slips on over the head, and as it has no opening there is nothing to interfere with the embroidery, which spreads itself across the front. Laces and hand-drawn work are other decorations used for summer blouses with charming effect. A dress of ruffled organdie or batiste is one of the smart things to have this summer. Organdie collars with rows of tiny hemstitched self ruffles are about half an inch in width and placed close together, almost overlapping one another. Collar and cuff sets in this style, or white or light blue, are worn with dark blue dresses, and sometimes fine lace takes the place of the organdie ruffles.

To Have Military Training. An excellent course in military training under competent instructors will be offered at the University of South Carolina next session. This course will be compulsory for Freshmen and Sophomores, and voluntary for all other students. Guns and accoutrements have been furnished by the United States Government, and an army officer will be detailed for service at the University as soon as such an officer is available. The War Department promises that when this officer has been appointed a Reserve Officers Training Corps will be established at the University. In the meantime, students must furnish their own uniforms. These are less expensive and more durable than ordinary citizens clothes, and will therefore be more economical. W. S. Currell, Pres., University of South Carolina.

Meeting Woman's Council of Defense. The Woman's National Council of Defense for Kershaw County is asked to meet at the Court House on Friday afternoon August 3rd at six o'clock. Will the presidents of all societies and organizations urge their members to be present? Mrs. G. H. Lenoir, County Chairman.

SAW COUSIN IN MOVIES Did Not Know Young Soldier Was With Pershing's Army.

While the reel showing Pershing's troops landing in France was being shown at the Bijou last night, Joe Hughes, a young man of this city, spied in the scene a young man clad in khaki who he believed to be his cousin, Everett Trussell. Although he had not heard directly from Trussell in several months he was so firmly convinced that the soldier in the picture was his cousin, he hastily went home, awoke his father and together they returned to the theatre. Although the show had closed by the time Joe Hughes and his father, W. C. Hughes arrived, the picture was shown again, through the courtesy of the manager E. C. Curdts. This time both of the men had no difficulty in recognizing the particular soldier as being Everett Trussell, the cousin of the younger Hughes and nephew of W. C. Hughes. Young Trussell has been in the army for some time, but for the past several months, nothing had been heard from him, therefore his relatives were at a loss to know whether he landed safely. The picture settled both of these questions for the anxious relatives here, as it was shown beyond doubt that the young soldier was yet alive and apparently enjoying the best of health.
