Seeds and Tubers Make Good Stew With Meat.

Dr. M. G. Gilmore Learns From Indians of Valuable Food Supply Left Untouched.

Bismarck, N. D.-Tons of food He peacefully undisturbed in the bundreds of acres of water Hiles throughout the United States, according to Dr. Melvin G. Gilmore, curator of the North Dakota Historical society, who is engaged in research work covering North America to determine the possibilities of native products.

As a result of the first stage of his inquiry, findings of which were published recently in the thirty-third annual report of the American bureau of ethnology, Dr. Gilmore declares development of America's wild plant life has been practically nil.

In the 300 years that the white man has dominated the western hemisphere," the scientist asserts, "he has not reduced to cultivation from wild stock a single natural species except to bring under semi-domestication the pecan and certain grapes of the east." In connection with this assertion, Dr. Gilmore quotes the United States crop report for 1916 as giving a value of $3,000,000 to crops of this country alone grown from plants first brought under cultivation by the Indians.

He sees the greatest possibilities for advancement in this direction in wild fruits, nuts and roots. An instance is found in the "Nelumbo" type of water lily flourishing largely in the ponds of the east and central west. The seeds and the tubers of this species are good food, Dr. Gilmore declares, and make good stew when used with meat, particularly beef. Such stew was originally concocted by the Indians, as were many other dishes which, it is said, could be economically adopted

"These uses of wild plants are no longer experimental," the investigator "We could have learned all about them from the Indians, but we didn't go to them and inquire.

"I have spent a number of years among them trying to learn more of their habits of domestication and mean to continue the work while the older of the tribesmen still live to hand down these lessons,",

BONES IN "BLUEBEARD" HOME

Paris Police Say Wife and Children Aided in Alleged Slayer's Crimes.

Paris .- Police officials investigating charges against Henri Landru, the alleged "bluebeard," who is accused of slaying a number of women and destroying their bodies, claim to have found about fifteen pounds of human bones in a house where he lived.

Among the bones was a skull in a good state of preservation. Some of the bones had been cut with a saw, the teeth of which left peculiar marks which were easily recognizable. It is said the saw has been found and that marks/made by its teeth coincide with those found on the bone fragments.

Inquiry as to the operations of Landru's wife, says the Eclair, shows that she was a "devoted accomplice" of her husband and "knew of everything he did." It is also charged their children aided in disposing of property secured by Landru in the course of his alleged crimes.

DeRue's Minstrel Coming.

Billy DeRue ably demonstrates the fallibility of the old saw: "There is nothing new under the sun." His droll jests and merry quips all bear the hall mark of originality. It has been truly said that Billy DeRue and Lew Dockstader solely evolve the roaring absurdities which constitute the stock in trade of the vast army of imitators on the American stage. This season he has a new line of talk for his monologue and a budget of side-splitting parodies of his own writing, which is a sufficient guarantee that they will please.
