Lafayette's Boy, Named for George Washington, Was Once a Refugee in This Country.

The Century company says that comments provoked by "Sword of Liberty," recently published by them, inpressed them with the fact that the average American seems never to have heard of George Washington Lafayette:

It seems strange that his story was not exploited during the warting resurgence of enthusiasm about Lafayette and his noble friendship for this country; yet how many Americans know that Lafayette had a son named after his fast friend. General Washington, or that the boy was at one time a refugee in this country?

The story is part of the background of the account of two revolutionsthe book. Following the earlier phase of the French Revolution, during which Lafayette was so immensely popular, and after the hostility to his moderation had developed which drove him into exite, he sent his son to America, to the care of the American George Washington for whom he was named.

It was his boy, according to the authors, Frank W. and Cortelle J. Hutchins, who, on returning from America, dag up from the garden of the Paris residence where they had been buried, the two swords given to-Lafayette by the American congress and the Erench republic in recognition of his services in the two republics. .

This Georges Washington Motier de LaPayette was born in 1779; he was therefore but thirteen when he fled to America in 1702 and his distinguished father to the neutral territory or Liege. The Argonaut.

PARIS MUSICIAN LIKES JAZZ

M. Milhaud, Leader of Polytonic School, Says He May Some Time Compose Jazz Sonata.

Charles Henry Metizer, well known music critic who has recently returned frem a study of the modern European prosient world in an article in the December Forum called "The Polytonic Six of Paris," describes an interview with the much talked of Paris musicians M. Milhand, as follows:

"Some day," M. Milhaud said, "I may compose a Jazz sonata. The Jazz form his been quite an inspiration. One may at times hear excellent music in the laws and each bad music is per-fermed in concert rooms. I have told tyon of my love of melody. By this I mean that in my compositions I try to give equal importance to all the instruments I employ.

"My orchestra, of course, varies according to the inture of the works I write, and I have tried my hand at a good many styles. One form which I am fond of is the chamber symphony. I have turned out four examples of the sort so far, each scored for only a few solo instruments. I have published various piano compositions, among them a set of six which I grouped under the name of Te Printemps.' I have made scores for ballets with large orchestras and just now I tracic lyric halfway through a drame, named 'Les Eumentdes !

To Attempt World Flight.

London regards with admiration Str Kelth Smith and his brother, Sir Ross Smith, who, two years ago, flew from London to Australia, covering the 41.-204 miles in just under 28 days, and who now announce that they have beigun preparations for a flight around the world.

The distinguished brother aviators wre not after the long non-stop flight record. They feel that aviation will develop itself on routes upon which stops are possible. What they wish to prove is that there are practicable means by which every section of the lcivilized earth can be reached by flight, Inst as they now are reached by ship and train, and that this can be done at an immense saving of time and perhaps of actual cost of transportaition. Fortunately for themselves and the cause they advocate so energetically the distinguished Smith brothers bave pient; of money with which to Memons rate their theories

Thus far it has organized two such schools, one of which has an attendance of 40 peris. The are learning to make men's and warnen's clothing, bashe's and the

GREAT MAN'S SON FORGOTTEN HOW COOLIE SAVES HIS FACE

Chinaman Is Amusing and Ingenious but His Little Tricks Do Not Always Work.

Chinese workmen would rather endure any amount of physical pain than to lose face, writes Sam Dean in Asia. I made that discovery through an experience we had with our gatekeeper soon after my arrival in China. We had dismissed him because he insisted on collecting 10 per cent on some goods we had brought into the courtyard to bale for shipment to America. When I came home one night, shortly afterward, I found him mounted on the horse block in front of the gate, haranguing several hundred listeners. He told them how he had been cheated and discharged, and then, tightening a loosely knotted cord that encircled his neck, he went to the front door; tled one end of the cord to the brass knocker and sank down till he was half strongled. Then he arose and addressed the assembly still further. I had seen enough. I rushed into the hold and told a friend who had been in China longer than I what was happeulng. He ran out, gave the gatekeeper a shake and said: "If you hang yourself at our door, I will kick you to death." The crowd burst out laughing, and the old man, who had hoped to make us lose face, lost so much himself that he sneaked away as fast as he could. I remember duother and more amusing case when the crowd laughed no less heartily at the expense of the foreigner. He was a whale of an Italian confractor, and he was in charge of the rebuilding of the Peking south gate. In one spot the coolies were using a corner made of a targe round iron costing with ropes attached. They best the ropes and, throwing their beatles backward and forward in time with a song they were singing, they raised and lowered the easting. Mennwhile, however they were losing face with the crowd, for the Italian was laying on pretty vigorously with the cane, and so, to retrieve their honor, they began to sing with all their might:

"Old foreign devil, old foreign devil

Beat, beat him, beat him in the earth!" The Italian did not understand, but the crowd did and laughed heartily; the foreigner was glying the coolles blows with a stick, but they were hitting him a mental crack that made a fool of him.

Old Scottish Sunday Dinner. In a letter of Sir Walter Scott, dated in 1824, he describes a typical Sabbath in Edinburgh 100 years ago as follows:

"I have always been intimate with the Forbeses from my infancy, since the excellent old lord with his wife and family used weekly to dine at my father's always on a Sunday, and on the same bill of fare, which would now be thought a curious one to invite a nobleman to. In the first place there was sheep-head broth and said sheep's head itself, the reason being that the sheep's head, which requires much boiling, was put on the night before, and the dressing of the beefsteaks occupied the least possible time, and thus the necessity of employing servants on the Sabbath day was diminished as much as possible. Then there was a bottle or two of special wine, which no wine merchant had fitted for the market, and there was a sermon read, during which one part of the children were sleeping and the other pinching and kicking them to make them keep awake. And then there is an old Sabbath for you in

Fashions In China.

Notwithstanding the popular western fancy that fashions never change In China, the Chinese woman is painstakingly particular as to the exact length and fullness or scantiness of her coats, skirts and trousers. She is carefully precise about the width of bias bands or braid or face that she uses for trimming, the number and arrangement of fastenings the shape and height of her colar. All of these details vary as tyranically from season to season sunder Shanghat guidance as certain, style features do with as under the leadership of New York or Paris. ### LINE OF FUTURE PRESIDENTS

Time May Come When Movie Fank Will Elect Their Particular Heroes to High Position.

Who is to be the first movie candlfor president of the United States? Don't laugh or scoff. Do you know anybody who has a bigger following than a popular, good tooking movie star? Consider the voting strength of those who patronize the mayles; would they raffy 'round one of their idols if he were nominated for high office? The vote of the movie Tan, male or female, is as good as that of any other voter, and if he fancled Reid Wallace or Ray Charles for pres ident because one or the other of them had a "pice smile" or a "love of a curl," the reason which determined his vote would be just as well considered and just as weighty as many of the reasons which prompt voters now in the choice of a candidate. All a man needs to be elected to high office is a reputation for honesty. "a strong face" and a well-circulated report that he is "good to his wife." And a movie star should be able to command these assets, Arthur H. Folwell writes in Leslie's. There are probably 90,000,000 movie fans in the United States. Who will be the first political boss astute enough to capitalize this following? Think of the adoring flappers of voting age, thousands upon thousands of them, who would take their first interest in politics were one of their screen favorites to be nominated for the presidency. They'd vote him into the white house because of his adorable eyes or the twist of his hair at the temples. Don't laugh. They would. And some day they will.

BALM OF GILEAD LOVE GIFT

What Is Known as "Bee Wine" Has Been Introduced Into England by Returning Soldiers.

In many houses in Great Britain, writes a correspondent, a glass jar, filled with a yellowish liquid and containing small pleces of white fungus, may be seen. It is loosely covered with a piece of brown paper. This is "bee wine" in the making. The activity of the pieces of fungus rising and falling suggested the busy bee and gave the wine its nickname. Its correct name is "Balm of Gilead," and there is an old superstition that it must not be sold but always passed on as a love gift. Our soldiers, returning from Mesopotamia, brought the balm (which is procured from an Eastern tree) with them. The fungus doubles in bulk with every brew. Balm of Gilead is actually a yellowish, aromatic gum, collected from Arabian and Abyssinian trees. The making of it having become common knowledge, someone has raised the bogey that it produces cancer and other malignant growths. It may, however, be taken in an unfermented state, as it is useful in cases of whooping cough and other ailments. It has always been valued in the East for its exceptional fragrance and supposed medicinal qualities. In fact, the trees from which it comes belong to a family of plants styled "all heal." The gum Is collected by making incisions in the trunks and upper parts of the trees.

Draining the Zuyder Zee.

At the inland shipping congress held at Rotterdam recently the drafnage of the Zuyder zee formed the most important subject of discussion. It was pointed out that the drainage would make necessary the construction of a number of new canals. One speaker pleaded that the building of new villages and factories of the polders should not be left to mere chance. Villages with churches should he built near the canals, but industrial works near the dykes. Such an arrangement would prove of advantage to shipping, and would prevent any pollution of the polder water. A number of the waterways connecting the Zuyder zee ports are to be preserved, but wherever polders form a continuation of the existing land, new harbors will have to be made Scientific American.
