DEBT PAYERS

There Are Various and Sundry Classes of Them.

There are people who are perfectly honest and who would pay what they owe if they could, but unfortunately they are so situated as to make it impossible to meet their obligations. They did not contract debts with any other intention than that of meeting them, but they have had reverses that they did not anticipate, and so are helpless for the present. These kind of people are not dodging around to evade those whom they owe but they seek their creditors and make a clean breast of their condition, and their explanations are usually taken at their face value, and they are given a chance which they are sure to improve, if it is ever possible for them to do so. Usually it is not hard for them to come again; for they have the confidence of business men, and confidence is a very valuable asset in business as well as in other things. It is great to have people believe in you.

Then there are the people who make debts with the intention of never paying them. Their mission in life is to get all they can out of the other fellow and they find just as many other fellows as it is possible and usually they are very successful along this line of action. Were they as diligent in trying to do the fair and square thing, there is no telling what they might accomplish in the business world. They often play their game for a long time, but the end is sure to come and they find themselves in the middle of the road without friends, and destitute. They are as bad or worse than the common thief, and if they had their deserts they would have been on the chain gang long ago. That is where they belong.

But there is a more respectable kind of a fellow who can pay, and who will pay when it suits his convenience, but he cares very little about the convenience of the folks whom he owes. He is very prolific in making excuses. He may have money in his pocket, but he will hold on to it just as long as possible. Many a fellow of this stripe is now hiding behind the stringency of the times. He lets it be known from day to day that times are mighty close and therefore his creditors will have to wait.

It is just these people who are doing a great deal toward making times hard. If they were honest in heart and purpose, they would do the square thing and pay promptly what they owe like men, and this would enable others to meet their obligations, and there would be more money in circulation. There should be some way to make these chaps unload.

What a joy are the people who know when their obligations are due, and who are ever ready to protect them. If they have a note in bank, it is useless to notify them when it is due, they will be on hand ready either to renew it or pay it in full. And they are the people who can borrow from banks, if there is anything to lend. They are the light and life of the business world. They are in a class all to themselves, and it is a mighty fine class. There is pure, honest blood coursing per annum, credit portion to be secured by a Bond of purchaser and a mortgage of the premises so sold, said bond to contain the usual provision for attorney's fee in case of default of payment. That the purchaser have leave to pay cash.

B. B. CLARKE,
Master for Kershaw County.
April 12, 1922.
