NOT MUCH CHANGE IN WORLD

Recent Finds in England Show That Ancients Had Knowledge of Things We Call Modern.

When the Romans were in Britain they drove one of their firm, well-paved, lasting roads diagonally right across England from the Kentish coast to the Dee, taking in London on its way.

That sea-to-sea thoroughfare was a busy scene 1,800 years ago. Civilization gathered along it. Now the road is being excavated and widened or remade as one of the great motor roads, and the digging that is going on, as nearly 2,000 men labor to give the old route a new life, reveals some curious proofs of how little change has taken place in some of the habits of the people.

In that far-off time, for instance, near Southfleet in Kent, a little Roman or British girl became the proud possessor of a cup on which her name was scratched, AMADA. How it came to be buried whole nobody can say, but buried it was, for it has been unearthed by the workers who are widening old Watling street.

Many other relics are being brought to light. Fragments of pottery, whole vessels like Amada's cup, some with the potter's name impressed on them, querns, or hand mills, for grinding corn, terra-cotta lamps, bronze pins, and coins.

At Dartford a bronze brooch has been found in such a perfect state of preservation that after 1,800 years it could be used today for its original purpose. The point of the pin falls into a socket, as with a modern safety-pin, and shows that our ways and those of our forefathers are very near.

CAUSED LAUGHTER IN CHURCH

Small Donald's Remark Too Much for Sense of Humor of Those Who Heard It

This is printed for the benefit of a certain Los Angeles minister who is probably still wondering how it happened that a certain portion of his erstwhile decorous congregation laughed out loud in the middle of the offertory the other Sunday. This is what happened:

It was Donald's first experience in grown-up church though the little chap had attended Sunday school.

When the collection was being taken, his father placed the weekly family offering in the plate. The pew was a short one, and no other contribution was received from it.

Evidently this aroused Donald's curiosity, for he blurted out, with all the eagerness of childhood trying to understand:

"Pa, did you have to pay for the whole row?"

Champion Wolf Trapper.

E. F. Pope, predatory animal inspector for the United States Bureau of Biological Survey, is recognized as the "champion wolf catcher of the United States," and has the reputation of always "getting his wolf." He has given his life to the work.

Mr. Pope began the work of destroying predatory animals when he was twelve years old. He was raised on a ranch in western Texas and devoted his time to the work when conditions reached the point where it was impossible to let cattle graze without a guard being placed over them to protect them from the wolves, coyotes and bobcats. A few years later he started living with an old trapper who was famed all over Texas for his success in trapping wolves. During this period Mr. Pope said he got his most valuable experience and learned the superiority of scientific trapping over unscientific methods.

The Nightie and Nina

My most embarrassing moment occurred one day when my employer, a merchandise man who often writes advertisements for newspapers, asked me to spell the word "ninety."

There is a glass partition between his desk and mine, and I was busily engaged writing some letters. I misunderstood him and spelled the word "nightie," thinking he was engaged in writing an ad advertising infants' wear. What he really was doing was writing out a check for ninety dollars.

It was indeed a most embarrassing moment, but I must say my boss enjoyed a good hearty laugh at my expense.—Exchange.

Can Bite Through Steel.

That a Jewish athlete named Breitbart, thirty-four years old, six feet three inches in height, and weighing 210 pounds, can bite through steel is vouched for by a medical correspondent of the London Lancet. Breitbart's performances astounded a committee of physicians, engineers, smiths and presidents of athletic corporations who saw him sever with his teeth several iron and steel chains one-fifth of an inch thick; bend into a circle iron rods half an inch square, using his mouth as a fulcrum, and bend over his head a rail four inches thick by two and a half inches.

Use for Marbles.

"I owe my latest idea in home beautifying to the marble contest," says a Detroit housewife, who is not unwilling to pass her idea along. Marbles that blend with the coloring of a room make an artistic base for flowers that grow from bulbs planted in bowls. Unsightly pebbles, roots and bulbs themselves may be concealed so that the flowers seem to spring from a colorful bed of marbles.—Detroit News.

Utilize Alaskan Lumber.

About 80 per cent. of the lumber used in Alaska is cut from the national forests, according to the forest service, United States Department of Agriculture.

HEAD WORK THAT COUNTED

Indian's Brand Would Seem to Have Been Superior to the White Man's.

A chief of a tribe of Canadian Indians was looking idly on while some Englishmen were hard at work improving property newly acquired from the tribe. "Why don't you work?" said the supervisor to the chief. "Why you no work yourself?" "I work head work," replied the white man, touching his forehead. "But come here and kill this calf for me, and I'll pay you." The Indian stood still for a moment, apparently deep in thought, and then he went off to kill the calf. "Why don't you finish the job?" presently asked the supervisor, seeing the man stand with folded arms over the unskinned, undressed carcass. "You say you pay me to kill calf," was the reply. "Calf dead, me wait money." The white man smiled, and handed the Indian an extra coin to go on with the work. "How is it," asked the Englishman one day, after a series of such one-sided dealings, "that you so often get the better of me?" "I work head work!" solemnly replied the man of the woods.—Exchange.

Glass Thunderbolts.

An exhibition of "petrified thunderbolts" may be viewed by visitors to the American Museum of Natural History in New York. Technically they are known as fulgurites, and the officials of the museum have decided that there are several million persons in the United States that have worried along for years without knowledge of fulgurites.

Dr. O. E. Hovey of the museum's department of geology explained that a fulgurite is a glass which is often produced when lightning strikes a mass of rock or a bed of dry sand and melts the material beneath the impact. In other words, it is glass made by nature in very much the same way that men make glass in glass foundries. The fulgurites in the museum come from all sorts of places—Mt. Ararat, the desert of Sahara, Michigan, Illinois and Mehemehebaka.

Antimacassar Coming Back.

The news that antimacassars are coming in again will stir memories of those once ubiquitous parlor chair embellishments. Antimacassars were annoying wisps of lace or beribboned fancy work of washable character annexed to the tops of the backs of chairs to protect them from the oily and perfumed locks of the Victorian beau.

And it is because men are again greasing their hair that antimacassars are coming back. In Victorian times the favorite anointment for masculine curls was macassar oil, whence the name "antimacassar."

Tourists Cause Forest Fires.

According to the annual report of the forest service, United States Department of Agriculture, a large part of the danger to the national forests from man-caused fires is due to the seasonal influx of tourists, campers, hunters and fishermen, and other visitors from the cities and from distant parts of the country. A national campaign of public education on the subject of forest fires is demanded if the task of protection of the vast area of the national forests from Maine and Florida and California and Washington is to be successfully performed.

It Must Have Been Terrible.

One morning when I returned to school after an illness I was told to go to the principal for an excuse. I went to his office, taking my report card. Entering the office, I walked to the principal's desk.

He held out his hand and, supposing he wished to shake hands, I put my hand in his and shook it.

Imagine my embarrassment when he said: "I did not mean to shake hands. I wanted your report card."—Exchange.

Bachelor Sleeps; Cotton Burns.

York, Oct. 11.—Sixteen bales of cotton belonging to Glenn Hope, well-known farmer of the Beth Shiloh section, were destroyed by fire of unknown origin last night. Insurance was carried on all the cotton except a bale in the seed. Mr. Hope, who is unmarried, and lives alone, knew nothing of the fire until this morning when he arose at the usual hour and found the outhouse in which the cotton was stored missing, with a pile of ashes to tell the story of what had happened.

Jim Klugh was arrested Monday by the Greenwood sheriff on the charge of violating the prohibition law. He gave bond in the sum of $1,500 for appearance in the federal court and the same amount for the county court. Klugh has been arrested four times before for similar offenses, paying a $600 fine recently in the federal court.

CAMPBELL & SMYRL

New Roadster

Business men—with whom the runabout has always been very popular—are well pleased with the changes embodied in this model.

Always rugged, the car has been made decidedly trimmer and more comfortable.

This result is obtained by raising the radiator and enlarging the cowl, making a decided improvement in looks and providing more leg room.

A well designed top and slanting windshield do their share toward adding a finished, clean-cut appearance.

Make it a point to see the other new models also on display in our show room.

These cars can be obtained through the Ford Weekly Purchase Plan.
