COURT AT CHESTERFIELD

Dr. Funderburk Acquitted; King and Harrell Found Guilty.

(Chesterfield Advertiser)
The court of general sessions convened Monday at Chesterfield, with Judge C. C. Featherstone of Greenwood, on the bench.

The judge delivered an able and impressive charge to the grand jury. Among other things he advocated a return to the gallows as the instrument of death in capital crimes.

The first case to be taken up was that of Dr. J. E. Funderburk, one of the most prominent citizens of Cheraw, charged with the murder of Mr. H. E. Ballard. The first witness to be called was Police Officer Irby, of Cheraw, who testified that Dr. Funderburk shot Mr. Ballard. Dr. Funderburk took the stand and testified that he shot Mr. Ballard after being attacked and while retreating. The jury was out only a short time, returning a verdict of not guilty.

The case against Phillips and the two Brewers, charged with the violent death of Rural Policeman Graves in Pageland, was postponed. Local interest in this case is intense, the defendants having been rushed to Columbia soon after the death of Mr. Graves, for safe keeping. Mr. Graves met his death while in the discharge of his duties and attempting to stop a car suspected by him of transporting liquor.

This case and that of Dr. B. L. Gathings will come before the next term of court of General Sessions with Hon. M. J. Hough as solicitor.

Besides the two important trials at this term of court, many minor cases were disposed of.

J. S. Lumpkin, charged with violation of the prohibition law, was found guilty.

Leroy Campbell, charged with murder. This charge is the result of the death of a negro woman some months ago in the lower part of the county. The case was continued.

J. T. Hendrix and J. H. Hendrix, charged with murder. The case was continued.

Frank Funderburk was found guilty of violating the prohibition law.

John McFarland, James McManus and Ernest Keith plead guilty to violations of the prohibition law.

DeWitt Chapman, tried on a charge of violating the prohibition law, was acquitted.

Dan King and Tom Horn plead guilty to violations of the prohibition law.

Ruth Smith, violating prohibition law, verdict guilty.

Ned Cue and Tom Horn, stood trial on charge of violating the prohibition law and were found guilty.

John Sturdivant, Dan King and Elerbe and Frank Braddock plead guilty to violations of prohibition law.

Mack Mulloy was found guilty on a prohibition charge.

Practically all the defendants found guilty of violating the prohibition law were sentenced to one year on the chain gang and to pay a fine of $100.00. Nine months of the service was suspended.

Mortimer N. King and Frank Harrell, found guilty of the murder of Major Samuel H. McLeary in Chesterfield county on July 2nd, were sentenced by Judge C. C. Featherstone to die in the electric chair on November 21st.

When court convened here on Monday morning a long docket, containing many murder cases was before it. This case, the State vs. Mortimer N. King and Frank Harrell was reached Tuesday morning, and before night had come all hope of mercy at the hands of the court had fled and the two unhappy men were facing the certainty of the extreme penalty.

Since Monday morning Chesterfield has been crowded as never before to witness a murder trial.

An outstanding feature of the trial was the spontaneous sympathy everywhere in evidence when the widow and sister of the late Major McLeary appeared. Sentiment wavered to some extent concerning the defendants, but the feeling seems to be general that the law has been vindicated and to some extent the tragedy atoned for.

Attorney C. L. Prince, counsel for King made perhaps one of the strongest pleas for mercy in behalf of King that had ever been made for a prisoner at this bar in like circumstances. In strong, masterful language he argued for life imprisonment for King. Perhaps the strongest part of his plea can be best said in his own words:

"Appointed by the court to represent this man, without fear or favor hope of monetary reward, I come before you to beg for a human life. This, gentlemen, is a case of premeditated robbery but not of premeditated murder, though in this most unfortunate case, murder was done. It is unpardonable and I could not come before you and ask that you find the defendant King not guilty. All I can hope or ask is that under these unfortunate circumstances, King is perhaps entitled to mercy.

"If I could by turning on the juice that would send these men to their doom, bring back Major McLeary to his brave little widow who has my thorough sympathies, I'd turn it on. But, gentlemen of the jury, the deaths of these two men won't bring back his life, just as two wrongs will not make a right."

Solicitor Spears for the State then addressed the jury.

"Gentlemen, after eighteen years of service, this is perhaps my last address before a jury in Chesterfield county. I wish it were possible to turn this indictment over to you and have you write on it 'Guilty' with recommendation to mercy." In his conscientiousness to his duty, to the evidence that has been brought out before you, I cannot do it. A man's crime has been done in our borders, premeditatedly done, and justice must be meted out."

And thus there remains only the final chapter of this crime to be written when on the 21st of November, the sentence of the court will be carried out and the great Majesty of the law in this land of ours shall prevail as it must always do, and King and Harrell shall have paid with their lives for their evil deed to him who was a Good Samaritan and friend to them.

MONEY IN CRICKETS

One Boy is Said to Have Made $10,000 Out of Them.

Abbeville, Sept. 25.—Seeking relaxation from the markets of the world of finance J. S. Stark, president of the Planters Bank, E. W. Gregory of the Abbeville Chamber of Commerce and Dr. T. L. Davis went on a fishing trip to Augusta, Ga., some time ago only to run into the most unique market in the world—the cricket market.

Crickets are used as bait by expert fishermen over the country. They make the finest kind of bait because they are placed on the hook alive and are wiggling vigorously when the line is cast. The fish bite at them right away.

The cricket market fluctuates like any other market and the price varies from one to three cents each according to the supply and demand. There are cricket industries or farms in Augusta, Ga., where they are offered for sale. Here they are fed and watered and given green stuff and will live indefinitely in confinement if this is done.

One young boy started into the cricket business there several years ago. He not only supplied the local market but shipped crickets to the fishermen of the North and it is said that he cleared $10,000 from the industry in one year. When the business reaches this proportion the cricket houses are made of fine gauze wire; but ordinarily each man carries around a cricket box with him. This box is made with one end covered with cloth. The cloth has a hole in it, held tight with an elastic, through which the hand is run to bring out the crickets.

Crickets are bought and sold on the open market in Augusta. The Abbeville fishermen had to purchase fifty or sixty at three cents each, the top of the market, and are still recovering from the experience.

The Travelers' Aid Society of New York reports that last year it cared for more than 850 women between the ages of seventy and eighty-eight. Most of these were women who had left home because of trouble with their family or because of a desire to live again as they did in their youth.

TRESPASS NOTICE.
All parties are hereby warned not to trespass on my lands, without my permission, for the purpose of hunting birds, rabbits, squirrels or for fishing, or trespassing in any way. Anyone disobeying this will be dealt with according to law.

Old Muskets Found.

Tuesday afternoon while excavating for coffer dams at the new bridge under construction over Cane Creek on the Charlotte road above the city, workmen dug up three old Springfield muskets, one bearing the date of 1833, while the dates on the other two could not be made out on account of the wear. The artillery was found nine feet below the surface of the creek bed. When dug up the hammer to one of the guns was cocked and "ready to go." While examining the gun a reporter for the News sniffed in the barrel and detected very plainly the smell of powder. Further examination of the weapon though, was made with the barrel pointing "the other way." N. C. Hughes, in charge of the construction, brought the old guns to Lancaster and placed them on exhibition in the front window of the Standard Drug Company, where they have been viewed with considerable interest by passersby.—Lancaster News.

L. H. Jones, an insurance man of Darlington, committed suicide Wednesday morning by drinking poison. Mr. Jones lost an arm in some machinery several years ago, and had never been the same since, it is said. He had been despondent ever since this accident and of late had seemed unusually depressed. Mr. Jones was 38 years of age and a native of Florida. He came to Darlington about two months ago from Augusta, Ga. He has a wife and three small children here, and has parents living in Florida.

The silent woods are calling

CALLING you to play hooky—as they did when you were a kid. Remember the old swimming hole, the wild adventures in caves and woods, the thrills of catching your first fish?

Your nature still wants to play hooky once in a while. It's easy too. Easier than it was in your schooldays. Plan your work ahead so you can take a day off. Hop in the car bright and early. Go off for a day's golf or hunting or better yet take the wife and family along for an outing in the autumn woods.

Forget your business for just a few hours. You'll work all the better next day. Your vision will be clearer, your mind keener. Your point of view will be changed. And you will find it restful to get out on the road on a week day when there is less traffic.

Better run 'round tonight to the nearest "Standard" pump and fill her up with gas, oil, air, and water. Then you'll be ready for an early start and a steady run. "Standard" is just the gas you need on early morning trips like these for there may be a touch of frost in the air. That's when you need peppy gas.

See the STANDARD OIL COMPANY, (New Jersey) Exhibit at the Carolinas' Exposition, Charlotte, N. C., September 22 to October 4.
