SCRAPS AND FACTS

Interesting Notes Gathered From Many Sources.

There were approximately 360,000 hogs received in Chicago during the week ending Sunday, the largest week's receipts on record. The large receipts are said to be due to the shortage of the corn crop throughout the west.

The price of Irish potatoes in Aroostock county, Maine, is 90 cents a barrel and the farmers are finding it hard to dispose of them at that price.

Isadore Luchesi, wanted in Des Moines, Iowa, on charges of embezzling $75,000 or more from a bank of which he was vice president, has been arrested in Memphis, Tenn.

William McClintock, the "millionaire orphan," Chicago, died Saturday seven months after he had inherited an estate of $6,000,000. He was to have been married in February and six friends picked for groomsmen will act as pall bearers. He died while his bride-elect waited for a marriage license for a bed-side wedding.

An early morning fire at Olanta, Florence county, Monday morning did an estimated damage of $100,000 before being controlled. Six stores in the business section were destroyed.

Yeggman blew two safes in Greenville Saturday night or early Sunday and obtained about $800. The robbers obtained about $600 from the Coca Cola Bottling company's safe and $200 from the office of the Texas Oil company.

Work has been suspended on the new hotel at Union on account of the subscribers failing to meet their obligations. A dispatch says suits have been prepared and complaints will be served on the delinquent stockholders.

William Helton, an 80-year-old Confederate veteran, died Monday night at his home, near Mt. Croghan, in Chesterfield county. Mr. Helton was a member of the 26th South Carolina regiment and transferred to the 8th.

The four year old child of George Graham, a negro carpenter of Ninety Six, was burned Friday night when its clothing caught on fire.

Why They're Interested

Governor McLeod, back from the conference of governors held in Jacksonville, Fla., gives out the interesting information that a number of governors wanted to know more about South Carolina's tax system, saying that the present system of taxation in effect in South Carolina has attracted considerable attention throughout the nation, and requests have been made by various governors for information in regard to it.

The motive is doubtless the same that inspires us to get "more information" on dangerous, serious and contagious diseases—we want the information so as to avoid getting the disease.—Greenwood Index-Journal.

Boykin News Notes

Boykin, S. C., Dec. 10.—Miss Peggy Swift of California has for several days been the guest of her sister, Mrs. Henry Boykin and has been honored by a number of informal social affairs. On Friday night Thos. C. Haile entertained Miss Swift with a coon hunt, the services of Capt. Ray and his famous dogs were secured and a number of enthusiastic and energetic hunters followed the hounds until a late hour. Someone has said that the only trouble with coon hunting is that there is always somebody in the crowd who wants to hunt coons, but Mr. Haile's party was unspoiled by any such killjoy and the "varmints" were hunted in true sporting fashion.

On Sunday evening Mr. and Mrs. Henry Boykin entertained at a buffet supper in honor of Miss Swift. After supper the entire party adjourned to the home of Dr. and Mrs. J. T. Hay for the usual Sunday evening musicale.

Dr. and Mrs. J. T. Hay, Miss Lesa Boykin and Miss Margaret Hay Boykin spent several days in Spartanburg last week.

Miss Virginia DuBose of New York has been visiting Mr. and Mrs. Miller Boykin.

Mrs. Wm. deSaussure Boykin of Sumter is visiting relatives at Boykin.

Miss May Stockton Clark spent the past week end in Charleston.

Mrs. L. W. Boykin, Jr., has returned from an extended visit to Florida.

Miss Nora Clark entertained Friday evening in celebration of the birthday anniversary of her grandfather, L. W. Boykin. Covers were laid for fourteen and an elaborate course dinner was served, the youthful hostess presiding with great poise.

The Wednesday Morning Bridge Club was delightfully entertained this week by Mrs. J. W. Cantey.

Miss Helen Boykin of Kingstree spent the past week end at home, motoring back to Kingstree Sunday afternoon with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. Ancrum Boykin. Mr. Boykin drove his new Franklin, making the trip to Kingstree and back in four hours.

Six thousand pounds of select pecans were shipped from Manning Saturday, furnished from Clarendon county groves, from which an amount near $1,700 was realized. W. W. Lewis of Clemson college, was present, at the request of Mr. Rast, Clarendon county demonstration agent, to grade the nuts. Clarendon county soil is well fitted for pecan production, and an increased acreage in the groves is planned, the farmers feeling assured there is money in the growing of pecans.

The Price of Idleness

In the gray dawn of a winter morning King and Harrell paid with their lives the penalty for a horrible and atrocious crime.

Yet their disgraceful end had its real cause much further back than the murder of Major McLeary, and the fact is worthy of some reflection on the part of many of our young men. Roaming around the country without good purpose or design, King and Harrell fell an easy victim to a temptation to hold up a stranger and rob him. They were in a position to fall to such a temptation because they had no definite task, their minds were impelled by no settled purpose; they were mere idlers in a world that needs definite aims, productive effort and positive goals.

From childhood many of us have heard that the idle mind is the devil's workshop. When a man settles himself down to definite purpose and a definite work, he erects in his mind a very effective barrier against the suggestions of evil. Constructively mind and actively employed men and women do not become criminals. Temptations assail the human being in his idle hours, and even in leisure hours, the consciousness of a definite goal in life is a bulwark against the voice of evil.

For crime has another phase aside from its moral wrongness. To the healthy, normal human being, crime is bad sportsmanship. It is taking an unfair advantage in the game of life. It is abhorrent to the man or woman who puts all his powers, mental and physical, in the great effort to overcome the handicaps and the obstacles of life and win its rewards by the development and employment of his talents. Crime is cheating at the game. It is a device of trickery resorted to by those who are unwilling to put forth the effort necessary to play according to the rules.

Habitual idleness and lack of any sort of definite purpose in life, opens the mind to a consideration of crime. Such idleness always exacts its price in human affairs. It may not lead one to the electric chair, nor yet to a prison cell, but in the end it robs him of all the real happiness that is to be found on this planet. A human soul, wandering aimlessly through life, without definite goal, without the restraint of a purpose beyond the present hour, tossed hither and yon by every breeze of whim, impulse and fancy, is indeed a pathetic sight. And yet there are many such, who lack the initiative and will to center the energies of their being upon the accomplishment of any useful purpose whatever. It is such people that chase the butterflies of today's supposed pleasures, such people, who, even if they do not fall a prey to criminal temptations, finally pass out of life unhonored and un-ungodly, having added nothing to the world that kept them, and having tasted not of the abiding satisfactions and joys that result from purposeful achievement and constructive action.

There is no normal man or woman who cannot turn his life's energies into purposeful activity. Every force of nature impels one to such a course, and those who refuse because of sheer laziness to permit themselves to become a useful particle of this scheme of existence are to be sincerely pitied but they have no one to blame but themselves.—Greenville News.
