AUNT LIZZIE ANN'S CHRISTMAS LETTER

NOW, if Aunt Lizzie Ann had only written for Christmas, the family agreed as they sat around the big fire, that blazed upon the open hearth, everything would have been just perfect. As it was, things were awfully nice and everyone was having such a good time, but Aunt Lizzie Ann's Christmas letter had failed to come—the first miss since they all remembered—and its absence cast a little cloud over them, try as they would to hide it.

Aunt Lizzie Ann had always written the dearest Christmas letter—gifts she had none to send since Uncle Ed died several years ago—but always there had been that wonderful letter, that breathed so deep the very spirit of Christmas that it had almost become a part of the very time itself for the Dermott family. And although none of the family had yet framed the thought that Aunt Lizzie Ann must be ill, or something dreadful must have happened, it lay heavy upon them all. So when George announced that he was going down to the telegraph office to wire they all agreed that it was the best thing to do.

A soft, powdery snow was falling as he opened the door to step without. He had been gone only a short time when a shout from him brought them all to the doorway. And there, with the snowflakes falling around her, was the dearest little old lady, laden with bundles, which George tried in vain to help her with.

"It's Aunt Lizzie Ann!" they all cried in unison. And sure enough it was Aunt Lizzie Ann, coming this year herself instead of sending her usual letter, and she had the dearest and loveliest gifts for them all. And when the excitement of her coming had died down and they all sat around the blazing logs again, Aunt Lizzie Ann explained how she had been able to come. Uncle Ed had taken out an endowment policy for her several years ago; it had now matured, and she was free to do the things she had wanted to for so long. "You have been giving to me for so many years," she said, "it makes me feel real good to be able to make some return at last."

But the family assured her in all sincerity that it was she who had given the most to them always—for her wonderful Christmas letter had helped them more than they could ever tell her.—Katherine Edelman.

THE "SANTA SACK" GAME FOR KIDDIES

SANTA CLAUS is a real problem to some mothers. Shall their children be told the truth about Santa Claus, or shall they think of him as sliding down the chimney with reindeer and sleigh? This idea may help some mother who is puzzled over this question:

Before our little folks were old enough to understand about the existence of Santa Claus, whenever we saw a picture of the jolly old man, we called him Sunny, or Smiling Santa, because he looked happy. And he looked happy because he was good and kind to everyone. So when the children quarreled or pouted we would try to have them smile and look jolly, like Santa, whose picture we had among others we referred to as moral or myth pictures.

As the children grew to understand more fully the meaning of the Christmas-tide, we played a game, "Santa Sack," which meant that if they allowed each other or their playmates to play with their toys or gave them of their apples or candies, they were playing Santa Claus. Because Santa Claus was unselfish and divided whatever he had from his sack.

Sometimes when their playmates came we would say, "You'll want to play 'Santa Sack' and away they would skip to distribute their toys like Santa. They delighted to play and he called Santa when they ran or tumbled, snuffled or did something kind.

Santa was a make-believe creature, as characters in poems which we read to them, such as "The Raggedy Man," "Children's Hour," "Jack Sprague," "Hiawatha." Anyone who gave a gift at any time of year was a Santa. And whenever Santa Claus distributed gifts at school or at any public place, they were delighted that someone was playing Santa as they played "bear," "doctor" or "teacher" in the home with their little friends. For anyone who is unselfish and cheerful is to them a Santa Claus to someone else.

As they grew older the Santa sack was woven into a lesson story with the thought that each of us has something to smile, kind words and deeds to give to another all the time. For the real Santa gave much of what he had from his sack of treasures in Bethlehem long ago. So Santa Claus means unselfishness and cheerfulness. Many things that are worth while to our children are the traditions of a long ago.

Toys Best for Children

"Manipulation" toys are best for children between the ages of two and four. "Dramatic" playthings best between four and six, and "construction" playthings, such as radio outfits, games or toys that teach the simpler branches of exact sciences and those which exercise and train the hands and brain in a somewhat advanced way, are best.—George Newell Mann.

Sideache Backache

"I have been taking Cardui" says Mrs. Lillie Bolton, of Lake Providence, La. "I got down in bed half dead and lost 120 pounds. I had bad pains in my sides and back and my legs hurt me until I couldn't walk. I stayed in bed half the time. I tried all kinds of medicine, but it did me no good. Finally I tried

CARDUI

The Woman's Tonic
"It seems like it did me good from the very first. After I had taken half a bottle I noticed an improvement. I continued its use and I got better and better. The pains in my legs and sides disappeared and I began to gain in weight until now I weigh 155 pounds and feel better than I ever did in my life. I am perfectly well and strong. I have given it to my girls, too."
Cardui has relieved many kinds of pains and distressing symptoms caused by female trouble. It should help you, too, in the same way. Why not give it a fair trial?

How long should a Dairy Cow Last?

Most dairy cows reach their highest production at seven or eight years of age.

Yet there's a Larro-fed cow in Florida that produced 13,477.9 lbs. of milk in her 12th year. There's a 17-year-old cow in Maryland that is producing 50 lbs. a day on Larro. An Ohio Larro-fed cow, 14 years old, produces 42 lbs. a day.

The length of a dairy cow's producing life depends largely upon her condition, and her condition depends upon feed and care.

The reason that these and thousands of other Larro-fed cows produce profitably beyond a normal age is that Larro not only brings quick results in increased milk yield, but so builds up condition that peak production continues month after month, year in and year out.

How often do you have to replace a cow because her age makes it unprofitable to invest further in feed for her?
Considering the cost of a dairy cow, whether you buy her or raise her, isn't it worth while for you to buy a feed that will not only increase your profits now but insure a profit over a long period of time?
Order now for fall and winter feeding.
