Another Idea of China

Our idea of China has always been that it is a country of teeming population. School geographies and histories pictured boats on rivers as the homes of multiplied thousands of natives because there was no room on the land for them. This conception has been shattered since "foreign devils" have had opportunity within the past few years to explore the Chinese Empire.

The Biblical Recorder last week states that James Joyner, son of Dr. J. Y. Joyner, of Raleigh, has recently returned from China, in which country he represented the American Tobacco Company for several years. The Recorder's reporter states that he learned many things about China that he never knew before, one of which is "that the 'Celestial Empire' is a great game country. Tigers, wild boar, geese, and ducks abound. The head of a large boar which Mr. Joyner brought with him furnishes visible evidence of the existence of this animal. The one whose head has been mounted was killed by Mr. Joyner. We had always been of the impression that China was so densely populated that there was no land left for game. Mr. Joyner says the fertile parts are thickly populated, but there are great stretches of unproductive sections in which game abounds. Mr. Joyner's account of the war was very interesting and informing."—Monroe Enquirer.

MARINE IS KILLED.

Port Royal Policeman Shoots Man and Strikes With Pistol.

Beaufort May 27.—Corp. Joseph J. Winer, of Chicago, United States Marine Corps, stationed at Paris Island, was shot to death about 7 o'clock tonight and W. M. Munns, marshal at Port Royal, is in jail here charged with the killing.

Sergt. Sidney W. Jones of the United States Marine Corps receiving station, Yemassee; J. L. Hemlick, private first class, Paris Island marine and W. P. Hankins, United States Naval hospital corps, Paris Island, testified at the coroner's inquest about as follows:

Winer had come to Port Royal from the marine station at Paris Island and was standing on a corner in the town when he was approached by Munns and told he was under arrest. Winer protested and the marshal said he would have to submit to arrest or give $10 bond. The marine protested he was not drunk or disorderly and refused to be arrested, attempting to pull off his coat and getting it down to his elbows, behind his back. Munns deputized J. A. Allen to help make the arrest and Allen caught the marine's arm. Winer stepped back and Munns shot Winer through the right chest an inch below the bone. Munns and Allen caught the marine's arms and started with him across the street, Munns hitting him in the mouth with the butt of his gun. He was dropped in the dust and died in about 15 minutes.

Munns and Allen did not testify at the inquest, but gave interviews. Munns declared that Winer was drunk and cursing to such an extent that two young women of Port Royal had complained to him. He went to arrest Winer, who protested, saying he would see the officer in hell before submitting. Munns attempted to deputize some of the marines to help with the arrest, and failing, secured Allen. As Allen caught Winer's arm the latter stepped back and seemed to reach into his hip pocket under his coat, when Munns fired.

Munns admitted striking the man in the face with the butt of his gun, saying he was cursing.

Munns was held by the coroner's jury for the killing and Sheriff J. D. McTeer brought him to Beaufort and placed him in jail.

After cursory examination by the coroner, Paris Island officers picked up the body of Winer and took it to the marine station. No one looked to see if the man had a gun, as far as is known here. But the marines who testified at the inquest declared the man had no weapon. He was dressed in civilian clothes.

Falls Dead in Pulpit

Orangeburg, S. C., May 28.—"For he that is dead is free from sin" is a verse in the sixth chapter of Romans and had just been read by Rev. Nelson Ott, who dropped dead in the pulpit at the St. John Methodist church in Orangeburg Wednesday night.

A revival service was in progress at this church which is in the Santee Mill Village, and Rev. Ott was before the congregation when the end came. He had conducted a prayer and had entered whole heartedly into the services.

While reading the Bible he faltered some and Rev. Ernest Dugan, pastor of the church noticed this and saw Rev. Ott make a gesture and say "folks I am sick" and then fell. Rev. Dugan caught him before he fell to the floor.

At first it was thought he had fainted, but doctors arriving upon the scene in a few minutes say he died as he fell.

The congregation was dismissed with prayer after Rev. Ott fell and none knew at that time he was dead.

Dies After Diving

Abbeville, May 28.—Lem Beauford, a young white man of this city, died at the hospital here at noon today following an injury received yesterday when he was diving in Savannah river. Mr. Beauford's head hit a rock when he dived into the river causing a fractured skull resulting in complete paralysis of the body and his death today.

After assailing the theory of evolution, Senator Cole Blease brought cheers from the audience while speaking before the Red Men at Gaffney last Saturday when he said: "If I had my way about it, I wouldn't let any man or woman who does not believe in the religion of Jesus Christ as given in the Bible teach school in South Carolina. I believe in every miracle recorded in the Bible. God is great enough to do anything."

At an early hour last Wednesday morning Senator Ralph R. Tison, of Jasper county, died at his country home near Tarboro Station from heart trouble.

CITIZENS ORGANIZE

To Protest Against System of Unjust Taxation

(South Carolina Gazette)

Back in 1773, the opposition of the South Carolina colonists to the British tax laws, particularly a tax of six cents a pound on tea, assumed such proportions that when the ship London arrived at Charles Town with all cargo of the taxed tea, a mass meeting was held and it was decided that the tea should not be sold. Another ship came later with more taxed tea. The merchants of Charles Town to whom it had been consigned dumped the cargo into the sea.

It wasn't exactly another tea party, that meeting in Columbia last Friday when organization of the South Carolina Citizens' Cooperative Tax Association was perfected. But history is repeating itself in South Carolina. An organized movement is being begun to combat what is regarded as unjust taxation.

From present indications, and judging by the almost universal dissatisfaction throughout the state over the so-called "luxury taxes" enacted by the 1924 and 1925 Legislatures, the movement will be far-reaching and, before another General Assembly convenes, will assume tremendous proportions.

Present existing tax evils and inequalities will be fought, not maliciously nor will there be anything of a spirit of reprisal, the organization now being perfected to be constructive, and the law, however objectionable and whatever hardships it may impose, will be observed.

The important point, however, is that there is organization and determination to the end of revision and adjustment of taxes in South Carolina—in which movement the South Carolina Citizens' Cooperative Tax Association, as its name implies, will have the cooperation of the citizenry.

Unlike the merchants of Charles Town the merchants of South Carolina, who are penalized and discriminated against under the present tax laws, will not resort to violence. The purpose of the organization as outlined in the by-laws adopted Friday is as follows:

"The purpose of this organization shall be, the calling together of all farmers and other business organizations in the state of South Carolina for the purpose of forming a central association to study the tax problems of the state of South Carolina; to make recommendations and suggestions to the public and to the General Assembly of this state concerning the assessment and levying of taxes; to investigate the needs of the state government as to appropriations for its general fund and for the various state institutions; to make recommendations and suggestions to the General Assembly of South Carolina in reference thereto; to cooperate in the general study of the tax needs of this state; to investigate business and farming conditions, and from time to time suggest such new laws as will attract and improve farming and business conditions within the bounds of this state."

S. C. Hodges of Greenwood, was elected president of the association. Other officers elected were: B. W. Crouch of Saluda, W. Mason McConnell of York, H. R. Allen of Charleston, M. B. DuPre of Columbia, W. G. Jackson of Spartanburg, and W. W. Sullivan of Anderson and T. B. Young of Florence, to serve as vice-presidents. A secretary and treasurer has not yet been selected, it was stated after the meeting. These will be selected by a special committee.

Members appointed to the executive committee are: A. T. Heath of Sumter, chairman; E. L. Wingfield of Columbia, and C. W. Irvin of Columbia. Alva M. Lumpkin of Columbia, was appointed general counselor for the organization.

It is planned to have the newly formed association hold a meeting in the fall in Columbia at which time efforts will be directed to the framing of suggestions for adjustment of taxes, these suggestions to be submitted to the next general assembly for consideration. In the meantime studies will be made of the tax situation, the expenditures of the state and the manner of levying taxes, in order that the best possible solution

The Disadvantages of An Education

The advantages of education are so numerous and so evident that they do not have to be proved. Occasionally, however, there are disadvantages as well.

The daughter had just returned from finishing school.

"That air," remarked her father, as they were sitting together in the dining room.

"Father, dear," interrupted the girl "it's vulgar to say 'that air.' You should say, 'that something there,' or preferably, just that."

"Well, this ear,"—commenced her father.

"No," his daughter interrupted again. "That's just as vulgar. You must avoid such expression as 'this ere—'"

"Look here, my girl," said her father. "I'm going to say exactly what I mean. That air is bad for this ear of mine, and I'm going to close the window."

Sumter Editor Hurt

Sumter, May 28.—Mr. N. G. Osteen, probably the oldest newspaper man in the state, sustained a fractured arm Tuesday afternoon while working at his apiary in the western part of town. Mr. Osteen was standing on a box which turned over, precipitating him into a ditch. He was rendered unconscious by the fall, but soon recovered consciousness and managed to get out of the ditch and walk home, nearly a mile away, rolling his bicycle, which he has been in the habit of riding for many years. After reaching home he summoned his son, Dr. C. P. Osteen, who set the arm, which was broken just about the wrist. Mr. Osteen was said to be resting well today and not suffering much from the injured limb.

Kills Self

Charlotte, N. C., May 31.—Thomas J. Davis, president of the Elba Manufacturing company, shot himself through the brain with a .32 calibre pistol and died instantly in his office here late today. His son, Merriman R. Davis, who had gone to the local plant with the father a few minutes prior to the shooting, was in an adjoining office when he heard the fatal shot. Officers who investigated pronounced it a clear case of suicide.
