BLEASE ATTACKS EVOLUTION

Would Require All Teachers To Profess Belief in Bible

Greenville, July 14.—Teachers in South Carolina in the future will be required to profess their belief in the Deity of Jesus Christ if Senator Cole L. Blease has his way about it. The senator, here today from his home at Pendleton for a short stay, said he favored something more stringent than the proposed law against evolution which Representative Thomas H. Peoples of Richland county, has announced his intention of the sponsoring.

"I intend writing Tom Peoples and telling him I would like to see a law in this state requiring all teachers in the public schools to take an obligation admitting their belief in the Deity of Jesus Christ.

"This would eliminate the necessity of prohibiting the teaching of evolution in the public schools of South Carolina. By passing an even more stringent law, I believe much good would be accomplished," Senator Blease said.

In discussing the trial now in progress at Dayton, Tenn., Senator Blease said it was absurd for anyone who professed to believe in the Deity of Jesus Christ to think that they could also believe in the theory of evolution.

"The two beliefs cannot be reconciled," Senator Blease declared. "Therefore if a man believes in evolution he certainly does not believe in the Deity of Jesus Christ.

"But aside from the question of hereafter can there be any better doctrine to live by than that of the Golden Rule, prescribed by Christ. It makes one feel better in his daily relations with his fellowmen to practice it, even if there were no hereafter. But reason tells us there is a future abode for the soul, another place in which man must give reckoning for his earthly deeds."

In a style which made him famous over this state, using satire and sarcasm, Senator Blease then attacked the theory of evolution and those who profess to believe in it.

He was strong in his denunciation of those who would have the children of today believe that "our forefathers ran around on four feet instead of two.

"I spoke over at Gaffney one night recently and I told the boys there that if they wanted to believe that their ancestors were monkeys, they could do so. I do not believe in it, and I do not want to see the children of our state taught any such belief."

LYMAN FREED IN WALHALLA

Plead His Own Case When Put On Trial in Oconee

Walhalla, July 10.—A case of unusual interest in sessions court was that of C. Lyman charged with breach of trust and grand larceny. It is alleged that Lyman was state organizer for the Knights of the Mystic Shrine. He operated principally in the lower section of Oconee county where he apparently found a fertile field. Soon after various circles were organized in this section he appointed two or more prominent men to good positions in the order and required that they give him bond in various sums for the faithful discharge of their duties. These appointees put up cash bonds and alleged that Lyman used their money for his own personal needs. Lyman lost out with his order, the bond money was demanded and he failed to return it. He was arrested and has been in jail since.

He pleaded his own case and so managed it that he was acquitted by a jury. It is stated that Sheriff Kay has several other warrants sent him from officers in other counties of this state and in Georgia and Lyman will likely be turned over to some other South Carolina authorities at an early date.

It is alleged that Lyman collected several thousand dollars in fees and bonds during the time he worked the field over a very limited territory.

It is the opinion of the officers and general public that Lyman is not only a good solicitor for his order but that in case of an emergency he could succeed at the bar.

Bootleggers and Thieves Play Ball

Greenville, S. C., July 9.—Details of what is considered the most unusual baseball game ever played in Greenville county were being related today at the office of the county supervisor, the "Thieves" of the central convict camp winning from the "Bootleggers" by the score of 27 to 20.

The game was played on July 4, which was a holiday with the prisoners, and all white prisoners were eligible in the camp who cared to play. The two teams were named according to the offenses for which a prisoner was sent up, according to information reaching the supervisor's office, the Thieves being composed of those convicted of larceny and the "Bootleggers" or those sent up for violating the prohibition laws.

BISHOPVILLE MAN DEAD

Mr. Woodham Was First Auditor of Lee County

Although not entirely unexpected, the death of C. W. Woodham last Saturday morning, which occurred at his home on Harris street, cast a gloom over the entire town and county where he was well known and numbered his friends by his acquaintances.

Mr. Woodham had been in declining health for the past three or four years. He had been to several hospitals for treatment, and all that loving hearts and willing hands could do was done to make his last days on earth comfortable, but all to no avail. The final summons came peacefully and quietly surrounded by his loved ones.

Charles Weldon Woodham was born September 23, 1855, in the Stokes Bridge section of what is now Lee county. He was therefore 69 years of age. All of his life was spent in this county. In 1905 he with his family moved to Bishopville, where he has lived ever since. Forty-two years ago he was married to Miss Nancy Laney Hearon, who with the following children survive him: Mrs. Sullivan Woodham of Stokes Bridge section; G. W. Woodham, W. E. Woodham, Mrs. J. Clyde Kelley of Bishopville and Mrs. Julian Kelley of Olanta. He is also survived by the following brothers and sisters: L. A. Woodham of Bishopville; Mrs. Laney Kelley of Haytsville, Mrs. Ella Rhodes of Columbia, E. E. Woodham of Stokes Bridge and T. E. Woodham of Timmonsville.

Mr. Woodham was the first auditor for Lee county, having been elected when the county was first formed, and for 12 successive years held this office with much credit to both himself and the county. He was one of the best liked men in the county—a man with no enemies and a friend of all who knew him.

Early in life Mr. Woodham united with the Hebron Methodist church, and to the time of his death was faithful and loyal member of that denomination. Some time after moving to Bishopville he removed his membership here.

Funeral services were held at the late residence here, interment following in the family plot at Hebron, Sunday morning. There was a large crowd of sorrowing friends and relatives, and an immense floral offering that was very beautiful, giving silent testimony to the love for a departed friend.—Bishopville Messenger.

JUDGE DIES IN WRECK

Was Under Indictment Charged With Wrecking Bank

Jackson, Tenn., July 9.—Judge J. W. Ross, of the Federal District for Western Tennessee, found dead today pinioned under the wreckage of his automobile in a creek near Jackson—less than twenty-four hours after his indictment by a Madison county grand jury which investigated the failure of the Peoples' Savings Bank of Jackson—met death by drowning when the automobile in which he was riding veered in the roadway and plunged into the swollen stream.

Formal certification that Judge Ross' death was due to drowning was made after an examination of his body today by Dr. W. G. Saunders, a Jackson physician, and announcement was made that in view of the finding of the physician no inquest would be necessary.

Judge Ross' body was found in his partly submerged automobile in a creek about seven miles from Jackson by a passerby. Apparently he had been dead only a short time. His head was badly bruised. Belief was expressed tonight that faulty brakes and inability to apply them successfully caused the car to plunge in the roadway.

Yesterday Judge Ross made bond of $25,000 after indictments charging him with forgery, accessory to embezzlement and breach of trust were returned against him by the Madison county grand jury. Two former officials of the defunct bank, T. B. Carroll, former cashier, and John Carroll, his son, and formerly an assistant cashier, and W. L. Cawthon, a timber dealer, also were indicted.

T. L. Murray, district attorney general, said tonight that the tragedy of today would not effect the investigation of alleged irregularities which are held to be responsible for wrecking the bank—closed a month ago.

It was indicated today that Judge Ross had prepared a statement in answer to an investigation being conducted by the bar association of Memphis to determine whether certain banking transactions charged to him were in violation of judicial ethics. News received here indicated, however, that the investigation now will be dropped which is expected to preclude publication of the statement.

This Is True

To begin with, the mail order houses do not sell goods any cheaper than you can buy them at home. If your local merchant doesn't happen to have the particular goods you want, you can get them at another store or in the nearest large town, just as cheap or cheaper than you would have to pay the mail order house.

When you trade with your home merchant, you can see the goods you buy, and you have some one to look to if the goods do not turn out to be as represented. You get the goods when you buy them. You do not wait until you send your money to a distant point and have the goods shipped to you.

The mail order houses do not help support schools or help build good roads in South Carolina. They do not employ local people and they do not buy local products of any kind. They do not employ local mechanics to build their store rooms. When you send your money to them it is gone, so far as you are concerned. You cannot get any of it back, in local taxes or local charities, or in any other way.

When you trade with your home merchants, the profits they make stay at home. They pay taxes here, they employ local help, they spend all their money here. You stand a chance of getting some of it back, directly or indirectly. There are many local merchants; there is competition in every line. If you do not like one particular merchant, you can patronize others.

When you send your money to the mail order house you do not save money, you are subject to delays, you stand the risk of getting unsatisfactory goods, and you hurt your own community by taking out of it the money you send away.

Why patronize the mail order houses, anyway? By doing so you do not practice economy for yourself, and you hurt your own town.—Spartanburg Sun.

He remained paralyzed during the entire time he survived.
