

W. D. Browder Is Highly Pleased With Acme Fertilizers

Mr. W. D. Browder, Germantown, N. C., is another member of the large army of Acme boosters. The above picture shows what results Mr. Browder gets with Acme Fertilizers on tobacco.

He says: "I used Acme Fertilizers 25 years ago. I think they are as good as any fertilizer I have ever used—will also use them next year."

Acme Fertilizers have been growing banner crops since 1883. They are the "Old Reliable," and proven without superior through 44 years of use by hundreds of farmers.

Before arranging your season's fertilizer supply, see the Acme dealer or write us.

STUDENTS RAISE ROUGH HOUSE

Make Their Get-a-Way When Greek Phones Police Headquarters

Under a recent Columbia dateline Jas. D. Grist, in The Yorkville Enquirer, writes the following special story:

So this is a part of what goes on at the University either known or unknown to the authorities if any there be there, eh? And it is a fact, that some pretty good South Carolinians and taxpayers think there is not much authority or discipline or decorum enforced there. However that may be: I grew hungry late the other evening after doing my stint for this newspaper and sauntered into a neighboring cafe for an order of fried shrimp and coffee.

As I entered the door of this place, a Greek restaurant whose name does not matter, I saw something was wrong in the rear. There was cursing and flourishing of arms and fists and bottles.

"What ya' mean butting in on us?" I heard a voice just past the "youth age" croak. And he shook his fist threateningly. Three other half baked youths seemed to arise about the same time in a manner threatening. Then I noticed a tall, red faced, black haired man, his hair parted on the left side rise. They merely grinned as they turned their gaze in the direction of the speaker.

"Boy," said the tall, red faced, black haired man, "you better go home and to bed and take your kid playmates along with you," said he. "Make us," said the four younger men almost in chorus.

There was more cursing and flourishing of fists and bottles on the part of the "boys" one might call them.

The big, red, black haired fellow merely looked at them and laughed. Then the Greek proprietor butted in.

"You boys you," said he, shaking his hands at the one who had started the row in the younger crew, "Mos' evera night you boys come in here and raisa da hell. You bunch o' bums. I betta you no have got seventy-five cents. You getta de smell o' bottle and you maka like you drunk as de hell. You no good. Get out! I calla de police!"

And the proprietor went to the phone and sure enough did call the police station.

A few seconds passed and then all was quiet and silent and still. I saw the four youngsters, make for their coats and their hats. One stopped at the cashier's window and paid the check. I learned later it was fifty cents for the orders of the four.

All the while the big, red faced, black haired man was standing up and laughing and laughing. The four youngsters faded into the night.

Shortly afterward a policeman sauntered in. He told of a call he had received from headquarters. He was told "he" was just a little too late. Going around the counter and lifting a cake box he got what he wanted without offering to pay. Then, he too, went out into the night.

Peace having been restored and all being reasonably silent and still again the proprietor told me his story while

I munched my simple meal:

"These boys from the school—what you call the Universe they worry the hella outa me sometime," he said. "They getta little spending money the firsta de month. They buya little moonshine you call; an they come up town to eat. They come to my place. They no drink much. It no take much. They raisa the devil about nothing with anybody as you see. It hurta my business.

"They no have much money. They no eat much. I rather no have 'em if they raisa hell."

And then, growing really serious through his anger, he inquired: "Say whatta matta with your Universe? They let boys do as they damn please. In old country, in Athens, we no come to town and raise what you call rough house. You no way to control 'em and make 'em good and make 'em study at your Universe?"

I had no answer.

"The cop was mighty slow in coming," I suggested.

"Oh, hell," he replied, with a characteristic Grecian shoulder shrug. "I find Columbia cops not much good. When you want him he not found nowhere. When you no want him he right here. But los your boys at Universe, they have no manners they have no money, they too much rough, specially first of the month.

"What legislature for?"

"Why don't dey make 'em study." And we admitted sadly we didn't know how in this wide wide world it could possibly be done.

Coal Strike Settled.

Philadelphia, Feb. 15.—Settlement of the anthracite strike has been effected. Ratification of the action taken Friday, which ends the greatest industrial struggle in the world's history of labor, will come through a convention of miners the middle of next week and the following day will see the precious black diamonds rolling to market. Two million persons in the anthracite fields and nearby territory, including the 158,000 mine workers who stood solidly behind their leaders to win the strike, saw the ending of the suspension which had paralyzed business and brought bankruptcy and want to many. A five-year contract was agreed upon, the longest term ever negotiated in the hard coal industry.

The Longest Tunnel.

Comparatively few people know that there is in process of building in the State of Washington what will be the longest tunnel in the United States. It's being bored through the heart of the Cascade Mountains, and will be nearly eight miles long when completed, which will not be for about three years. By means of the tunnel some 18 miles of steep mountain grades and curvature will be cut off, as it is being built on a straight line through the ranges. A conservative estimate of its cost is put at $10,000,000, and the running time of the Great Northern Railway will be lowered by several hours when it is available for use. A vertical shaft has been sunk about one-third of the way from the east end which is not a great distance from Wenatchee, Washington, and gangs of workers are tunneling in both directions from it as well as from both east and west ends.—Christian Science Monitor.

Attorney Gets In Bad

Spring City, Tenn., Feb. 15.—Former Attorney General Ben T. McKenzie, one of the leading attorneys for the prosecution in the trial of John T. Scopes for violation of the anti-evolution law, was fined $50 and costs for disorderly conduct and held to the grand jury on a charge of transporting liquor here late Saturday afternoon. News of the incident leaked out today and Judge J. A. Caldwell, city recorder, confirmed it.
