

YOUTH KILLS NEGRO

Claims Man Was Cursing at His Home When Shot.

Leslie Dunlap, 19 year-old white youth of the Pinewood section in the county jail charged with murder as a result of the death this morning of Thomas Robinson, negro who resides in the same neighborhood. Robinson came to his death, according to the verdict of a jury empaneled by County Coroner W. J. Seale, from gunshot wounds at the hands of Dunlap.

According to Coroner Seale, who investigated the shooting which occurred shortly after 9 o'clock Monday morning in front of Dunlap's mother's home, two miles from Pinewood on the old Manning road, Robinson accompanied by Jim Dunlap drove to the Dunlap home where Dunlap made a call on his brother. According to the story told to the coroner, Robinson is alleged to have started using foul and abusive language and was ordered off the premises by Leslie Dunlap, Robinson who was seated in a car, refused to go, whereupon, young Dunlap is alleged to have gone into the house and gotten a shotgun.

He is said to have again warned Robinson off the premises and the negro is alleged to have sworn at him. Dunlap, according to Mr. Seale, is said to have struck at Robinson with the barrel end of the gun, an explosion following and sending a shower of lead into Robinson's eye and head. Whether the gun was discharged by coming into contact with the bow of the car top or whether it was discharged by Dunlap was not disclosed at the inquest which was held a little over an hour after the shooting.

Dunlap came to Sumter after the inquest in company with Coroner Seale and immediately surrendered to Sheriff Hurst. He was then lodged in the county jail on a charge of murder. Monday's Sumter Item.

Joseph Alexander Robinson, Confederate veteran and prominent citizen of Blackstock, died Tuesday aged 83, and had lived all his life, near where he died. He served in Hagood's brigade and was wounded in action while not yet 17 years old, at Petersburg, Va., but remained in the army until the surrender. He was a retired planter and a leader in the Baptist church. He leaves six children including a daughter, Mrs. Levi Carter, of Chester.

ELEPHANT AND DOCTOR

Big Animal Recognizes Friend After Four Years

London, Oct. 23.—Elephants play the chief roles in reminiscences of the "Barnum of Britain," E. H. Bostock, who spent 50 years on the road with circuses, menageries and theaters. Bostock tells how, when boxing kangaroos were all the rage, he had to train the animals for these stunts, and finally, seeking something new, he gained a great lead over other rival circus men by producing a wrestling lion.

His favorite elephant was "Lizzie," born in the African jungles. While showing one day in Tenbury, Lizzie was taken with a severe attack of colic and was obviously in such pain that the local "vet" not being without call, Bostock called in the best known Tenbury chemist. Though unused to prescribing for elephants, the chemist made up a bucket full of a mixture which Lizzie swallowed without demur when told to do so by her trainer. The colic was conquered, and within a day or two Lizzie was herself again.

Here is the sequel: "Four years later the menagerie was back in the same town. The local chemist keen to have a look at his former patient, was standing on the curbstone watching the entrance of the show.

"The moment Lizzie came abreast of the chemist she recognized her former benefactor, swung round, uttered the formation and with a look of joy almost rushed the gentleman off his feet. Playfully and joyfully she then fondled him with her trunk, and the procession was held up several minutes by the animal's evident exuberance."

Bostock recalls many narrow escapes. He had been attacked by lions, leopards, snakes, bears, monkeys, kangaroos and other animals, but never by an elephant.

The trial of Mrs. Margaret Lillendahl and William H. Beach, charged with the murder of the woman's husband on Sept. 15, was scheduled to begin at Mays Landing, N. J., yesterday. The trial will be long drawn out as there are approximately a hundred witnesses to be heard.

Muskrats Keep Fish Alive.

Although muskrats are generally fair game for the trapper, amateur or professional, and great quantities of their skins are sold annually, they are sometimes protected because their habits are useful to their protectors. Vernon Bailey, of the Biological Survey of the United States Department of Agriculture, found that at Gravel Lake near the fish hatchery in North Dakota trapping muskrats was prohibited. In this region near the Canadian border winter cold is severe. The lake had been stocked with fish, and muskrats were encouraged to build their houses along the shores in order to keep breathing holes open to prevent the ice from closing up so completely as to smother the fish. As a result both fish and muskrats were multiplying rapidly, and the muskrats had become comparatively tame.

At the fish hatchery itself the muskrats were less popular, because a dam had been constructed there to form a hatching pond, and the muskrats were in the habit of digging into the dam and letting the water out through the burrows they made.

Where muskrats prove annoying it usually is easy to dispose of them, when State law permits, through trapping. In suitable localities it has been found profitable to grow them commercially on muskrats farms.

Work is progressing rapidly this week on the installation for the $10,000 chimes in the First Baptist church of Gastonia, the gift of the Ladies Aid Society. The chimes consist of sixteen tubular pipes operated by electricity and weighing five tons with the operating machinery. One keyboard will be inside the auditorium of the church besides the organ, and the chimes high in the tower of the building. The chimes will be dedicated within a fortnight, before the dedication of the church on Sunday, December 18.

The first landing of LaFayette in America was commemorated by a tablet unveiled at Georgetown at noon Wednesday. The navy sent two destroyers to the ceremonies and the Marine band from Paris island played. The flag was drawn from in front of the tablet by two little girls of French descent. The orators of the day were Brigadier General Frank Parker, U. S. A., the French consul general at New Orleans, Real Admiral Newton A. McCully, Thomas R. Waring, Charleston editor, and Rev. H. D. Bull, rector of the Church of Prince George, Winyah, who was chairman of the committee on arrangements.

The Wade Hampton Memorial association has accepted the model of the statue to be placed in the hall of fame in the capitol at Washington, the work of the sculptor F. W. Ruckstuhl of New York. It will be completed and ready for unveiling about the middle of the year 1929. The statue will be of marble, seven and a half feet high including the base, and the figure seven feet two inches high. It shows Hampton standing as a senator in a Prince Albert coat making a speech defending his state, in contrast to Hampton the soldier in the state house grounds at Columbia.

The county agent of Richland county has sent out a message to the farmers of that county want high bred bucks and ewes. The larger attention to sheep in adjacent states has caused a dearth of good stock, he finds, and the farmers of Richland county have become aware of the profits in sheep raising. They are going to spend about $4,000 this winter for pedigreed sheep. There are now ten flocks of sheep in Richland county containing 3,000 sheep and the number is increasing rapidly as the profit in them becomes apparent.
