Three Killed Sunday In Airplane Crash

Charlotte, N. C., March 26.—Responsibility for a crash which sent three people to their deaths in a flaming airplane here yesterday was a matter of controversy today. An injured pilot, lack of fuel and lack of altitude were cited as various sources as the cause of the crash. No plans for an investigation had been announced. The dead are Mrs. J. G. Galloway, 22-year-old bride of a Charlotte business man; D. Fred Kendrick, 36, also of Charlotte, and the pilot, George L. Vickery, 28, of Highland, N. C. Their bodies were burned beyond recognition before a holiday crowd of hundreds who milled about the burning craft helplessly. Witnesses said the plane was flying at an altitude of about 200 feet some 300 yards from the Municipal Airport when it side slipped twice, stalled and then went into a spin, bursting into flames as it struck the ground. Vickery, a licensed pilot and a graduate of the army ground school, was reported to have broken his hand recently and had not regained the use of it. To this together with the low altitude, was attributed his inability to right the plane before the crash. Kendrick was a student pilot. The plane, a three passenger Waco, was the property of J. P. Little of Charlotte. He said it was being used without his knowledge, but that Vickery had operated it on other occasions.

Forestry in South Carolina
The story of our dependence on the forests is one that cannot too often be told. Abundance breeds neglect. After three hundred years of unlimited use of wood and other forest products we find it hard to realize either the extent to which they enter into our American civilization or the possibility that the supply may last forever. It is well, therefore, for us to be reminded that our prosperity is like that of the prodigal who has gone through his fortune without giving the proper thought to the future. One region after another has been cut until today the last of our original capital is disappearing rapidly in the virgin forests of the Pacific Coast. We shall soon have to grow all of our own timber or go without, and we shall be obliged to do so on millions of acres once forested and abused and now largely unproductive land.

The most serious part of this situation is that it effects South Carolina's welfare in so many different ways. Lack of forests means more than merely a shortage of wood, as important as that is. It means also undesirable changes in climate, unregulated stream flow, erosion, marked decreases in game, fish and other forms of wild life and far less opportunity for healthy outdoor recreation. These losses are none the less real because they cannot always be measured in dollars and cents. Lack of forests also means decreased industrial activities, with correspondingly fewer openings for profitable employment of capital and labor. It means impoverished communities, lower standards of living and a social and economic loss that is beyond calculation. South Carolina ranks fourteenth among the forty-eight States in lumber production. In 1922 she ranked twelfth. The lumber industry and wood working establishments provide employment for more than eighteen thousand men and directly and indirectly furnishes support for more than one-tenth of the population of the entire state. The annual payroll from forest products in all forms amounts to approximately $30,000,000. Visualize, if you will, what a decrease of such a vast sum of money to the State's payroll will mean to the economic and industrial welfare of South Carolina—a condition which is inevitable but for the fullest cooperation and concerted action on the part of all timberland owners and progress loving citizens.

When Young Griffo, a popular prize fighter of another day, died in December, 1927, Tex Rickard buried him at a cost of over $800, because it was believed Griffo was a pauper. Later on it was found that Griffo, had $3,800 in two savings banks. The administrators of Rickard's estate have collected $500 of the amount on account of the burial expenses, and Mrs. Rose Collins, who boarded Griffo for years without pay, has claimed the balance of the estate.

A Salem, Mass., man has been sentenced to serve a month in the house of correction because he sold a man a gallon of water for $8. The fellow explained that Lionel Vincent asked him for a gallon of pure water and the water was the purest thing he had. The charge against him was larceny.

Man So Nervous Gets Sore When Spoken To
"It actually irritated me to have anyone talk to me, I was so nervous. Vinol cured this and I feel wonderful now."—Wm. Fahy.
Vinol is a compound of iron, phosphates, and liver peptone, etc. The very first bottle makes you sleep better and have a BIG appetite. Nervous, easily tired people are surprised how QUICK the iron, phosphates, etc., give new life and pep. Vinol tastes delicious.—W. Robin Zemp, Druggist.

Held For Attempted Robbery

Charlotte, N. C., March 26.—John G. Galloway, husband of Mrs. Dorothy Harvell Galloway, one of the three victims of an airplane crash here Sunday afternoon, is being held at the McKeesport, Pa., county jail awaiting a hearing on charges of plotting to rob the payroll of the Union Dye Work of McKeesport. Galloway was sought yesterday by means of radio after an appeal had been made by Hamp Harvell, father of the dead woman, for aid in locating the man so that funeral plans for his wife could be perfected. After he was found to be in jail the plans were still incomplete today. Galloway is being held with Jack Campbell, also of Charlotte, and the men are said to have admitted their intentions when arrested. They are also said to have admitted previously serving prison terms.
