Produces Big Hens Wins On Big Eggs

Clemson College, March 21.—Early hatching and proper feeding of his White Rock flock of hens has won for S. R. Crick, Pinopolis, Berkeley county, a reputation for superior birds which produce extra large eggs, as shown by the fact that Mr. Crick has recently won first prize of $10 in a contest sponsored by a chain store in Philadelphia on size of eggs.

"The manager of this chain of grocery stores having received numerous complaints from customers about small eggs, offered prizes for the largest two dozen eggs," says P. H. Gooding, extension poultryman, telling of Mr. Crick's experience. "Mr. Crick, learning of the contest and realizing that he was getting large, uniform eggs, decided to go after the money. In three days' time he selected from his 150 White Rock hens two dozen eggs which weighed 63 1/2 ounces. These were the largest eggs entered in the contest and not any of them had double yolks.

"In addition to laying large eggs Mr. Crick's birds are high producers and also exhibition birds," Mr. Gooding continues. "His egg production is 75 per cent at present and his birds averaged 180 eggs each last year. He entered ten birds in the Charleston Poultry Show and won nine premiums—four firsts, three seconds and two thirds. One of his male birds won first in his class for three years in succession at the State Fair.

"Mr. Crick says that his birds grow large because he hatches early, uses an all-mash system of feeding, and grows out the pullets well."

Future Farmers Interested In Poultry

The agricultural class of the Camden high school is making poultry one of the major enterprises in their supervised practice program this year under the supervision of the agricultural teacher. Twenty-six of the Future Farmers have purchased 2,240 baby chicks. The Future Farmer Chapter purchased these chicks co-operatively and saved $40.00 by so doing. These chicks came from some of the best blooded flocks in the state. The breeds these boys are growing are Barred Rocks and Rhode Island Reds.

These Future Farmers have constructed ten brooder houses and eight brick brooders. They will have completed eight laying houses by this fall to house the pullets.

The boys are mixing their feed out of yellow corn meal, wheat bran, wheat shorts, dried butter milk, meat scraps, bone meal and salt. They have already mixed one ton of this feed for their chicks.

Some of the chicks will be sold for broilers and fryers and a large number of the chicks will be sold as capons. The pullets will be put in laying houses this fall and take the place of the scrub home flock.

This is one of the largest poultry projects undertaken by any school in the state. These boys will have fried chicken on other days than Sunday.

Summerfield Martin, automobile thief, rum runner and jail breaker, entered a plea of guilty to second degree murder for the killing of Claude Jones, Leaksville automobile dealer, at Yadkinville, N. C., Wednesday and was given a sentence of thirty years in prison, the maximum penalty. John McIver, partner of Martin at the time of the killing, is also serving a thirty year sentence.

By the will of the late Mrs. Anne Weightman Walker Penfield, Philadelphia's richest woman, she disposes of something over $20,000,000, the most of it going to seven nieces and nephews, with good big slices of it going to universities and institutions. Her estate at one time was estimated at $65,000,000. Due to shrinkage of values in stocks, bonds, etc., the value is about one-third that figure.

A consent verdict of $2,500 was granted the plaintiff Friday in the court at Anderson in the case of James Hunnicutt, 16, against the Equinox Mills of Anderson. The youth sought damages for injuries alleged to have been sustained when he was in the employ of the textile corporation some months ago.

Gardening Pays Union Family

Union, March 21.—An acre of ground snatched from a cotton field on the Douglas Edwards farm in this county and made into a vegetable garden produced a total of $466.05 in value of vegetables and left a net profit of $353.30 after expenses totaling $112.75 including all costs of seed, fertilization, poisons and $50 for upkeep of car for delivery, according to Mrs. Edwards' account of her experience and carefully kept record.

"This is but another illustration of the money value of the farm garden," says A. E. Schilleter, extension horticulturist in charge of the garden contest, who is now busy with the contest for 1932.

Some statements from Mrs. Edwards' account are illuminating:

"I studied the garden letters from Clemson and Winthrop, thus learning what to plant at regular intervals and how to combat the insects of which I had my share during the summer, but was able to combat them without serious damage.

"In January I took a catalog and decided what I wished to grow in my garden and ordered the seed. I planned my garden so as to have all vegetables that would mature at the same period planted together, in order to more easily prepare the ground for a second crop. In that way the ground was kept busy all the year instead of a one crop garden. I did most of the work of cultivation with the wheel plow and hoe.

"During the drought last fall I tried to keep a dust mulch by shallow cultivation, and still planting at regular intervals, and when it did rain I had a good stand of winter vegetables that have been both healthful and profitable. I found it a pleasure and a profit; and after keeping an exact record I found I had raised 31 varieties; made 3,061 servings to the family, have 315 quarts of canned fruit and vegetables, two bushels of onions, 15 bushels of Irish potatoes, 45 pounds of salad seed, one peck of shelled Lima beans, 40 bushels of sweet potatoes, five bushels of white peas, five bushels of peanuts for winter use.

"My husband and I did all the work in 319 hours and 150 hours of horse labor, but we feel well repaid in the health, pleasure and profit we realized from this plot."

The body of Terrell M. Ragan, president of the Continental National bank, of Boston, was found in the garage at his Brookline home Tuesday, dead from carbon monoxide poisoning. Ragan was said to be the youngest bank president in Massachusetts and was aged 37 years. The affairs of the bank of which he was the head were being investigated by a grand jury, the bank having been closed some time ago.

Bad Check Count Is Facing Rogers

Columbia, March 14.—W. W. Rogers, of Columbia, former state detective, is charged with breach of trust and passing "bad" checks here, Magistrate Harry M. Lightsey stated here today.
Rogers, also charged with perjury in Greenville in connection with testimony he gave concerning the Rector-Moore case, has not been served with the warrants.
Magistrate Lightsey said he is informed that the former state detective left Columbia several weeks ago and is now located in Atlanta. The warrants remain at his office, he said, awaiting a time when they can be served upon Rogers.
A number of business firms and individuals in Columbia preferred charges against Rogers last month, the magistrate stated. In at least two of the warrants he is alleged to have committed a breach of trust by collecting funds as an agent and refusing to turn them over to the parties for whom he collected.

Other charges against him are that he issued checks when his bank funds had been exhausted.
Carrying papers as a deputy sheriff of Richland county, he participated in investigations about South Carolina for several months last year.
