"Ad" Contains Facts About Robert E. Lee

We've always said that some of the advertisements are as interesting as the news. This fact is particularly emphasized by a special campaign now being published in this paper—the Chilean Nitrate Campaign.

In addition to telling the well-known virtues of this product, its natural origin, its vital impurities and so on, the particular advertisement we have just been reading gives some little known information about the national hero, General Robert E. Lee. General Lee graduated in 1829, second in his class at West Point, ahead of forty-four classmates, a year before the first cargo of Chilean natural nitrate came in, under sail, to a Southern port. To graduate from West Point then, as now, indicated high ability. To lead forty-four classmates and be led by only one, shows how exceptionally high were the abilities of the man destined to become a great figure in history.

Agriculture always interested him and he devoted much attention to improving the condition of his lands and the return from his crops. The Chilean Nitrate folks don't say so, and probably there is no way to be sure, but General Lee himself probably used considerable quantities of this natural nitrate fertilizer during the years he maintained his extensive acres along the Potomac.

Southern heroes are being featured in the entire series of advertisements all of which will be published in this paper.

Palmetto people bought $5,479 more automobile license plates in 1933 than in 1932, the total collections for 1933 being $63,951. The 1932 collections were the largest for any one year until then. A new drive against cars wearing old fashioned plates is planned soon.

Claude Clemmons, a negro 55 years old, is held in Greenville for setting fire to the house in which three children burned to death, his object being to kill his wife who was in the house.

Odd Accidents

John Lynch, a California jeweler, had a hankering for a watch charm made from a bullet. He changed his mind when the bullet exploded as he worked on it. Two fingers were shattered.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Lencionis, of Illinois, decided their wine was too cold and set it on the stove. There was no doubt about its kick for it exploded, blew the stove to bits and severely burned them both.

Claud Brown, of North Carolina, went to sleep on top of a truck loaded with dynamite. It did not explode when a car crashed into the truck but the driver of the car was killed instantly.

It seems that even your own yard isn't safe. Mrs. J. Fisher was walking about the lawn of her Virginia home when a bird in flight struck her in the eye, seriously injuring the eyeball.

A West Virginia boy, Frank Talley, was seriously injured when the horse he was riding was struck by an auto. The horse suffered a broken leg. On the other hand, a horse ridden by Mrs. Anna Hensler was instantly killed when struck at a grade crossing in a collision with a locomotive. She saved her own life by grasping a ring on the side of the engine and hanging on.

A young boy to a gay evening in Maryland, of California, climbed into a baby carriage to be whirled home by a friend. A trolley car struck the carriage and killed Muzzola. Baby Lucie Ludee, who lives in Canada, faced much better riding in a wheelbarrow. A train struck the barrow and broke both handles but the child was unharmed.—The Pathfinder.

Unit Organized In Buffalo Township

At a very instructive forestry meeting held at Mt. Pisgah high school Tuesday night the forestry organization was set up with the following officers elected: Loring Davis, Bethune, president; W. T. Holley, Jefferson, Route 2, secretary and treasurer; D. A. West, Kershaw, Route 4, executive committeeman. An organization committee of the following men was named: M. G. King, Bethune; G. B. McKinnon, Bethune; A. K. McLaurin, Bethune; Enoch Roberts, Kershaw, Route 6; J. G. Sowell, Kershaw, Route 6; Wade C. Horton, Kershaw, Route 6; L. J. Jordan, Westville; G. C. Welsh, Camden. President Loring Davis immediately instructed each officer and committeeman as to definite work to be done in determining how many acres of timber land in their communities would be in prospect for membership in the new organization. Mr. Davis also called an executive meeting of all officers and committeemen for Tuesday, February 6, at 7 p. m., at the Mt. Pisgah school.

In case the new organization is successful in securing at least 30,000 acres of timber land, application will then be made for membership in the Kershaw County Forestry Association which is the parent forestry association in Kershaw county which at this time has approximately 100,000 acres under organized fire protection.

This is an unusual opportunity for the landowners of not only Buffalo Township but also all others between Camden and Liberty Hill and Buffalo Township.

If the new organization is successful in securing sufficient acreage, a fire lookout tower will be erected somewhere in Buffalo Township which will overlook timber lands of Buffalo Township and those lands lying between the new tower and Camden and between the new tower and Liberty Hill tower. The new tower would be able to triangulate with one of the other three towers.

It is very important at this time that timber landowners who are not yet in the forestry association see one of the officers of the new organization or one of the committeemen or the county forester or county agent and signify their desire to join in the effort to protect their timber land.

Mr. H. A. Smith, state forester, made a very instructive address at the meeting at Mt. Pisgah. Mr. R. A. Conard, superintendent of the local C. C. C. Camp, and Mr. Charles W. Nuite, county forester, were also speakers on this occasion. Also present at the meeting were Mr. Floyd, president of the Liberty Hill forestry unit, and Mr. W. C. Perry, ranger for the Liberty Hill forestry territory. Both of these gentlemen made splendid talks concerning the success of the work in the Liberty Hill district.

Methodist Men's Bible Class

Our Men's Bible Class is moving forward with interest and hope. There were sixty men assembled last Sunday morning to hear Dr. Wimberly's great address on "The Seven Human Responsibilities." We want this class to reach the 75 mark next Sunday. Our enrollment justifies this hope and estimate. Let all the men get in behind this fine movement among our men. Each one is a committee to bring some one else. His theme will be "Live and Up-to-the-minute, Profit and Loss." You can not afford to miss this lecture.

Jack Moore, Secretary.

South Carolina ranks among the first ten states in amounts collected in processing taxes. Most of this money comes from the textile mills, and it is understood several million dollars have been paid into the federal treasury from South Carolina since this tax became effective.

The federal internal revenue bureau refunded income tax in excess of $500 to 17 South Carolina textile mills the other day. The Fort Mill Manufacturing company got $777, the largest refund was $9,788.33 to the Lancaster Cotton Mills and $19,769.85 to the Watts mills of Laurens.

Drunk drivers to the number of 24 had their licenses suspended during the first half of January. Columbia had the most, five, with Darlington and Greenville three each, at the top of the list. The oldest was 63 years old and the youngest was aged 24 years.

The children of 15 Greenville schools contributed a cent each, and 15 pounds of pennies were sent to President Roosevelt for the Warm Springs sanitarium for infantile paralysis.

The Mary McLure Inn at the Balemill mill in the out-kirts of Chester, was burned Sunday by a fire which started in the boiler room of the heating plant, with insurance covering the loss.

Henderson Williams, a negro who died in Greenville at the week end, was born in that county 113 years ago and lived there most of his life.

Indian Chief Pleads For Catawba Tribe

Special to The Yorkville Enquirer
 Columbia, Jan. 29.—The Catawba Indian reservation in York county was in the spotlight in the house, when a chief in panoply of his tribe came to plead with the legislature for justice for his people.

S. T. Blue, chief of the remnant of the once powerful and farflung Catawba, wore the headdress of feathers denoting his rank, and a string of beads around his neck, but except for these marks of birth and position, he looked much like a back country farmer deeply tanned by the sun.

In a speech to the representatives, after being introduced by Worthy, of York county, and being invited to speak by Moor, of Colleton county, Chief Blue recalled the loyalty of his people to the South in the Civil War—which now prevents the federal government aiding them—and McMaster, of Richland county, told how a Catawba warrior gave information to Beauregard of the plans of Sherman which saved the destruction of Confederate lines at one time.

In ancient times, the Catawbas ceded their hunting grounds to the white for a large area along the Catawba river, but were soon swindled out of all but a small tract on which 200 of them now live. Chief Blue asked the legislature to do something for them in their poverty now.

"Last year," he said, "we received $32 each from the state of South Carolina. We have had 12 births and one death during the year, so that this year our appropriation will amount to about $25.

"We have 39 houses on the reservation, 55 families and 200 people; seven mules and 20 cows. The land is poor, though the bottoms when not flooded, produce good crops.

"Our people are in bad circumstances; last year, the government gave us some flour, and so we got through the winter.

"Our squaws make and sell pottery. But crops are bad; our young men have only occasionally been able to find work and we look to you for aid.

"In the Confederate war, our braves stood with the South, and our national government tells us, when we apply to them, that we must look to the state government to take charge."

The house did nothing about it, and relapsed into the long talk about things of more interest to politicians who want to be reelected and are fearful of defeat next time.

A party of fox hunters in Cherokee county stopped their car on a railroad crossing at Thickety, while they listened to the bay of the hounds. They thought an approaching freight train was an automobile with a big headlight, but jumped out in time. The locomotive carried their car four-fifths of a mile and the automobile and locomotive could be separated only with acetylene torches, with two hours work. The sheriff could not get the identity of the hunters, except that they were from the Cowpens section.

Tornadoes killed 19 persons in South Carolina last year, in May, and 13 were killed by lightning. The damage from wind and tornadoes was $658,800, over half of it by one tornado in Anderson, Pickens and Greenville counties on May 5.

Did Curse Cause Death of Doctor?

Boston, Mass., Jan. 29.—Death today claimed another of those present at the opening of the inner chamber of King Tut-ankh-amen's tomb when Dr. Albert M. Lythgoe, 65, curator emeritus of Egyptian art of the Metropolitan Museum of Art, New York, died at the Massachusetts General hospital.

More than a week ago, Dr. Lythgoe entered the hospital suffering from cerebral arteriosclerosis. His illness gave rise to repetition of the legend that all who had connection with the opening of the tomb in 1923 would eventually fall under the Pharaoh's curse.

While he lay ill in the hospital, Mrs. Lythgoe and Herbert E. Winlock, director of the Metropolitan Museum, took occasion to discredit the curse story, labeling it absurd.

Resigning his post a few years ago because of overwork, Dr. Lythgoe vainly sought health in a trip abroad. Since then he has lived in Boston and Pomfret, Conn.

Congressman Fulmer has recommended E. C. Goza for permanent postmaster at Columbia, and he will be appointed at once. He is a hardware salesman, the old friend, and former employe of the congressman and his political heckman for some time. In the civil service examination he failed to get into the eligible list of the top three, and a re-examination was held in which he was placed in the list.

There has been an epidemic of deaths by hit and run drivers in this state lately.
