THE SOCIAL UPHEAVAL IN FLAT ROCK CONTINUES UNABATED

Miss blonde head, the widow who returned back home from Washington, D. the dutch-sound dog takes in washing for a living.

Mrs. Moore and Mrs. Square is now the laffing stock of our little town, and they don't drag their long dogs around with a pink ribbon as heretofore, but skeet Johnson's wife leads the blonde dog to ever wash-pot she stirs. This is bad on other society leaders. Miss blonde now has an imported hairy-faced poodle from great britain that looks more like a muff than he do a dog. If the moores and the squares follow suit, they will be out 25$ more for dogs.

Miss blonde has also set the pace with a pair of specks which she totes on the end of a long stick made out of gold, called a lornette or something. Several of our wimmen drove into the county-seat yesterday and got prices on glasses like hers, but they will have to order off for them. Miss blonde now goes hoos-back riding ever afternoon by herself with britches and regular riding habits on.

If our wimmen folks have to keep up with this widow woman, our younguns will starve to death, yore corry spondent's wife has not had time to do nothing towards the cooking, washing, ironing and working our few patches since miss blonde head blowed into flat rock with her parris, frauce, ideas. She was trying to ride our milk cow the other day so's she could ride a hoss if ever bobby else got one.

Ever man in town, married and single, goes dressed up all of the time, folks are wearing pressed britches, white shirts and collars for the first time in months. There's always from 7 to 8 men red-dy to help miss blonde on and off her hoss, and droves of men follow her everwhere she goes hoping that she will drop her hankerchief or riding whip or something so's they can pick it up and get to talk a few words with her. She certainly has tore up flat rock from dan to beer-sheba, as it were.

THEY SHALL NOT PASS

I drove down from the mountains last Sunday afternoon. Being alone and unencumbered with thought and back-seat talk, I had an opportunity to take a worm's eye view of traffic as it exists today.

There were not less than 5,000 cars and trucks on the 72 miles of highway between where my wife and kids spend the summer (and nearly all of my ready cash) and where I spend the week-days and week-nights at a hotel in my hometown on credit.

Everybody seemed to be driving bumper-to-bumper. Cars were bunched in covets of about 25 each. A model "T" was in front leading at a snail's pace. If it was not a model "T" that was blocking traffic, it was a court-ing couple that didn't care for anything or anybody in the world except themselves.

Every time a fellow tried to pass the car in front of him, he was making a gesture toward his undertaker. If you had been in a hurry, you simply felt that you were in a hurry, and decided that the safe and sane thing was to poke along at 20 m.p.h. (or slower) and like it.

Our fast drivers do not make up our greatest highway menace; it's our slow drivers, the traffic blockers who cause traffic congestions. Some of these slow drivers can't go any faster, on account of necking and hugging, and all of the others apparently do it for pure, low-down meanness.

If you ever get behind one of these big, 45-foot public highway trains, commonly called trailer-trucks . . . going up the mountain, you might as well camp beneath the steering-wheel, and meditate over this question: "How much longer will a pleasure car or a business automobile be allowed to travel on the highways at all?"

I am not in favor of the average person driving over 50 to 55 m.p.h. That speed will get you where you're going quick enough. Much faster might get you where you didn't start before you know it. I am just as much "agin" the driver that oozes along nonchantly at 15 to 20 as I am "agin" the wind-buster who makes 80 to 90 regardless.

We'll either have to build a 4-channel highway system, or give the present system to big busses and bigger trucks . . . (and the slow-pokes in any kind of vehicles) and build a separate road for all kinds of cars that would like to go along in comfort at 45 to 55 m.p.h. Let's have a speed limit at both ends, that is: Too slow as well as too fast.

Four-H Clubsters Tell Of Their Work

(By Jack Wooten)

Recently we announced the winners of the Chick Management contest for 4-H major poultry project members in South Carolina. Enclosed you will find articles by Emily McCoy and Mark Huggins, of Kershaw county, who were entrants in this contest and whose letters were selected as some of the best submitted. In addition to scoring these 4-H members on their work, one of the requirements was to write a brief narrative giving a resume of their work. The articles follow:

Huggins Writes Poultry Story

This is my first year as a 4-H Poultry member. I started with 250 Banded Rock chicks which I got on February 16. Before they came I had everything ready for them as our County Home Demonstration Agent, Miss Fewell, told me to do.

My brooder house is twelve feet by fourteen feet, facing south with glass cloth on south side and two ventilators under roof on north side. We could give them more air as necessary as we had a burlap curtain to roll up and down on the front. I used a large size kerosene brooder. I put a wire screen around the brooder and about five feet from the outside of the canopy. This kept them near the heat and also kept them from piling up in the corners.

We used ten metal hoppers and two wooden ones about 34 feet of feeding space in all. We used fourteen one-quart water fountains. We used pine straw for litter and changed it twice a week. We put in perch poles when chicks were eight weeks old. I turned them in a small run at first. After they were feathered good I turned them out to range on the young grass for about two hours each day.

The French steamer Normandie on its last crossing east to west, made the trip from Bishop's Rock, England, to Ambrose Light, New York, in 3 days, 23 hours, 2 minutes, and on the return trip crossed in 3 days, 22 hours, 7 minutes. Both are all-time records.

Homer L. Lyerly, 40, World war veteran, fatally shot himself at his home near Salisbury, N. C., within 24 hours of the hour that he was to be in the groom in a church wedding. Before dying he told his bride-to-be, "I did it to help you," and made no further explanation.

I kept mash before the chicks all the time and gave them plenty of fresh clean water, washing the fountains out each day.

My grade at school was interested in my poultry work and my teacher brought the class to see my chickens. The cost of my chicks, feed, fuel, and other expenses amounted to $71.90. The income from my chicks was $94.25. This gave me a profit of $22.29 on my chicks this first year. I am going to continue my poultry work and I believe I can do better next year.

MARK HUGGINS, R. F. D., Camden, S. C.

My Club Story

My 4-H club poultry work began in 1933-1934. The Shrine club of Camden advanced me a loan to buy my baby chicks, and so I began to prepare for the baby chicks at once. I had a ten by twelve brooder house with a brick brooder built by plans furnished by the Winthrop poultry specialist. I also made the feed hoppers.

I used a formula, given to me by my Home Demonstration Agent, Miss Fewell, and mixed my feed. The contents of the formula were hundred pounds yellow corn meal, fifty pounds wheat shorts, twenty-five pounds fish meal and one pound salt. I gave my chicks plenty of butter milk and green feed.

With the splendid help and cooperation of my parents, the county agent and the poultry specialist, the chicks grew to broilers and fryers very rapidly. I sold most of them keeping only a few for breeding purposes.

Each year the work has been similar to the first year, each time learning something new. This year I have reinvested my money in more chicks which are almost ready to sell.

I have always tried to keep my house clean and sanitary. I clean the house twice a week all through the brooding period.

I have exhibited my chickens in the county fair each year winning a number of prizes. I have entered a pen in the 4-H egg laying contest.

I have been selected each year to represent my county in judging at the state fair. I have received a certificate each year in poultry.

My poultry work has not only been a pleasure to me, but it has helped me financially. My profit has increased each year. This year I cleared $28.29 on my chicks after deducting all expenses.
