

A Little Prop Wash

Something new has been added! Take a dash of news, a sprinkle of gossip, a cupfull of human interest, mix well with a grain of salt and you will enjoy this column—"A Little Prop Wash."

You can't hurt Booher, he was up and kicking before anyone could send him a "get well quick card." It seems that while enjoying a small barrel house tea at the home of Bill LeFevers and crew, he stepped from the porch and turned his ankle. Many Camden socialites enjoyed this little get-together pin-ball, acrobatics, and free-for-all were directed by the hosts.

Suffering from writer's cramp, are friends of Bob Ward's after autographing his broken ankle cast. Bob received this free of cost while playing baseball for the instructors.

Many a girl's heart fluttered and many an instructor's heart dropped, as the Army moved into Camden this week. Miss Jane Halsall was attached to a Colonel, Miss Nan Ingram absorbed in a Major, and Miss Kitty Holden sported a General. All enjoyed steaks, drinks, and tank at the Sarafield club. While this party enjoyed life Jake's Meat House on DeKalb street lost no business.

When it comes to raising things, Lewis Murray is top man. The Victory garden of the Murray's is sprouting corn, tomatoes, beans and weeds. Hop (Chichester) is also a man of the soil, while Mr. Murray is coaxing his vegetables Mr. Chichester is feeding his Vitamin Pills.

Bill Winn, one of Camden's adored bachelors, has finally tied the knot. Bringing his bride to Camden Tuesday, they were entertained by the Warren Pollards.

Many visitors have arrived in Camden in the know. I will give you a den during the past week, and to keep few leads. Mrs. Gannon, mother of Mrs. Mary Munger, stopped for a visit on her way to Montgomery, Ala. Mrs. Betty Britt has added an extra bolt to her door so as to keep the wolves away. Reason—Her very attractive sister and mother are here for a short stay. Mr. Jim Johnston also entertained this past weekend.

While Camden is in a whirl of excitement (at last there is something to do on Saturday night—10:30 movie at the Camden theater) Ira Beaufort and Sam Miller are busy catching a few fish. Mr. Beaufort says, "Why there's so many fish in that pond that I had to shake one off my line to take a swig of Pepsi-Cola. Sam and I are coming on out with this meat problem."

See here and there—a blue Packard convert. Occupants Miss Betty Whitaker and cousin Anne. Purpose—Showing a few cadets the sights of Camden.

Hoping you have enjoyed this column, I will close leaving you but one thought. "Some people call it the Good Earth—but I call it just plain dirt."

Letters To Mimi From Her Dad

Dear Mimi:

I see too many people who worship the almighty dollar and lose sight of the fact that "sheekles" are only a medium of exchange. Such people are concrete examples of those who can't see the trees for the woods.

Of all human accomplishments we must first respect and recognize intelligence. And money won't buy intellect. Without the development of brain power our vast culture would not be possible and the resulting fortunes would not have been made. Trouble is, though, many of these fortunes are not in the hands of those who stacked them up by exercising a well developed mentality. We must say here, too, that some of these treasures were acquired by sheer luck, some by inheritance and some by crooked dealing. Then, many have profited by the intelligence of others who had more interest in the science of knowledge than in the accumulation of money.

The possession of profound knowledge is the essence of happiness. Money won't buy happiness. And, after all, that's the ultimate goal of life.

Most human satisfaction comes from our services to humanity. Edison gave the world practical applications of electricity and advanced civilization many hundreds of years within a few decades. Henry Grady, through the flow of meaning words, cemented the two factions of a great nation. Louis Pasteur, by tireless experiments and the labor of research, brought new hope to medical science. John Philip Sousa wove the melodies of martial music that today inspires our men in uniform to the daring deeds that will make free nations for free men. Colin Kelly sacrificed his life for a great principle he believed in. These men were great.

On the other hand there is Tommy Manville. He inherited a great fortune—so large we can't conceive of it. What has he done with it to help humanity? For many years he held the title of America's number one playboy. He tried to have as many wives as Solomon. If you put all his brains in a Jay bird's head the bird would likely fly backwards. Do you think he's happy? What has he put down on life's score card that would make anybody proud of him?

Select your associates from those who have brains, from those who accomplish things—whether they have millions of live in a modest cabin—Then you can be proud of your friends.

Love,
Your Dad,
P. S.: All that glitters is not gold!

To Meet Shortage Protein For Hogs

Florence, May—During the present period of protein feed shortage, green forage will enable hog producers to get along with about half the usual quantity of protein and still keep the pigs doing well, says A. L. DuRant, livestock specialist of the Clemson Extension Service.

Mr. DuRant's suggestions, made for the recent conference of the State Feed Conservation Committee, included these further points on increasing the feed supply and following other practices in swine management:

Keep all hogs on a green forage crop. If you do not have fence for your hogs and they are being kept in dry lots or pens, plant some soybeans nearby so they can be cut and fed to the hogs even while in pens or dry lots.

Increase the yield of corn and other grains in every possible way. Grain sorghums such as hegarl make good hog feed, do not need to be threshed or ground, and can be planted after oats.

Plant soybeans for green grazing. You cannot have too many. If they mature seed after being grazed all summer, so much the better.

Supplement the grain ration with a protein feed. It saves feed and gives faster gains. Feed the young pigs while suckling and full-fed the brood sows while they are nursing the litters. Rapid gains are cheap gains.

SELL YOUR PULP WOOD NOW

Every farmer in South Carolina and every land-owner is vitally concerned with seeing those totalitarian forces so foreign to our way of life wiped from the face of the earth.

Mr. Landowner, you can help! If you have woodland that will produce pulp wood or timber your government needs it to produce commodities essential to the war effort.

Right now the price for pulp wood and timber is higher than it has ever been before and as high as it will ever get under the present price ceiling. You can help yourself and help your government by selling it now—NOW!

It will be to your interest to sell it to a firm or to a buyer that knows the pulp wood and timber business. We have had years of experience—we are hometown folks. See us first.
