Men Prefer Cotton Says This Report

Gentlemen prefer cotton. In a survey just released by the Bureau of Agricultural Economics, United States Department of Agriculture, the majority of male consumers listed cotton as their favorite fiber for business shirts, summer sports shirts, year-round underwear, pajamas and socks.

USDA researchers interviewed a representative sampling of men over the age of 16 in every sec-tion of the United States.

The study showed that men vary considerably in their preference of fibers for most clothing items. In only three articles of clothing included in the survey did more than half the men agree on a single fiber. These items were business shirts, pajamas, and underwear for year-round wear. The fiber that more than half the male consumers prefer is

About two-thirds of the men interviewed said they prefer cotton business shirts. The study reveals that more of the shirt owners in the higher income bracket, professional groups, and college graduates prefer cotton than those with grammar school training and lower incomes.
White shirts are preferred to all

White shirts are preferred to all others, with more than half the men listing only white in their color section. Blue followed white as the most popular color.

Of the men who wear pajamas, about 7 out of 10 agree on cotton as their favorite. Cotton was chosen primarily on the basis of comfort, the men said. More consumers in the North reported that they wear pajamas than did Southern men.

More men prefer cotton for their summer sport shirts, the survey reveals, noting that style and construction are the features most sought in this item by male customers. This classification did not include polo shirts and T-shirts, articles which use cotton almost exclusively.

Most frequent reasons given by

Most frequent reasons given by the interviewers for preferring cotton were comfort, durability, good appearance, continued good appearance after being worn, launderability and year-round definitely decided, after much consideration, that I will be a candidate for the South Carolina Senate from Kershaw county.

The USDA survey exploded the myth that women buy most men's clothes. By far the majority of men contacted in the study said that they do their own clothes shopping.

Attorney J. Clator Arrants who served Kershaw county as a representative in the General Assembly for four years and who is engaged in the practice of law here, has announced that he will be a candidate for the office of state senator from Kershaw county at the July primary.

Since graduating from the law school of the state university, Mr. Arrants has practiced law in Camden. He is a member of the Lyttleton Street Methodist church, a Kiwanian, Legionnaire, and member of the recently organized VFW Post here.

In a prepared statement regarding his candidate for the South Carolina Senate from Kershaw county.

"As any person who has served in the legislature knows, there are many sacrifices to be made if one properly serves. There are sacrifices in one's time, profession, business, finances, peace of mind and even in one's friendships. However, these sacrifices become very insignificant to me when I consider the many things that could be done for our county and state, and the fact that the people of the county might want me to represent them in the State Senate, I would be very selfish indeed if I am qualified and the people want me as their senator and I then should refuse.

"No man appreciates more than I, the many opportunities the people of my county and state have given me. I only hope that Providence will allow me the privilege of paying them back.

"There are two fine men already announced for this office and there might be others. I very sending the legislature knows, there are many sacrifices to be made if one properly serves. The announcement of Mr. Arrants makes the total of candidates for the senate three, the other two being Attorney Alan Murchison and former Camden mayor, Francis Nolan McCorkle.
