JNO. W. HOLMES, Editor & Prop'r. LARGEST COUNTY CIRCULATION. THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 28, 1865.

The Columbia correspondent of the News and Courier writes that the friends of Col. Robert Aldrich of Barnwell have announced him as a candi-

Qur acquaintance with Col's Aldrich, dating from the commencement of bis professional career, qualifies us to bear distinguished position.

The ermine could be placed on no worthier shoulders. As at soldier boy wearing the gray he proved his love and loyalty to the mother State and her sacred cause. Since peace came back he has been constant in her service, and in every time of trial his strong brain and brave heart have answered "flere" to the first call to duty. Possessing as he does the splendid cquipment of spotless, sterling character, of generous na'ural talent ripened and enriched by long years of arduous study and extended practice, of broad-guaged judicial temperament he is fitted for any honor or trust within the bestowal of the State that calls her sous and daughters her most precious jewels.

In charging the Grand Jury at Greenville-last week Judge Bengt said that ten thousand persons lost their lives in the United States last year by the pistol. He advocates a pistol too long for concealment, say fifteen inches, and a law subjecting those who manufacture, sell or buy small ones to fine or imprisonment after trial and conviction in the Circuit Court.

The Editor's Young Farmer Friend gives his reasons for increasing cotton acreage next year. He is just as honest and carnest in wishing to give good advice as we are, and we take pleasure in placing his opinions before our people. Probably he will have more followers than we can convert, but the multitude is not always right. Still, we will wait a week before commenting on the pretty picture he has drawn, asking attention only to the "Talk from Texas" which was in type before our friend's letter was received.

After several years of slow talking the Security Company of Charleston, organized to build a new railroad to the West, has secured subscribed capital sufficient for the work, and has called for the payment of the first installment of $2,50 per share before the 2nd of December. The officers of the Company are

And we notice that books of subscription to the Capital stock of the Charleston and Macon Railway Company were opened in Charleston on Saturday.

THE NEW CONSTITUTION.

The Constitutiona! Convention about completed its long labors on Tuesday. To day the majority of its members form a parcel of the thousands taking in (or being taken in by) the Atlanta Exposition. The Committee on Style and Revision is busily engaged in dressing up the ordinances and next week the Corvention will reassemble, ratify its work and ajourn sine die. That is the programme at this writing.

The daily papers that have kept close watch on the proceedings of the Convention speak approvingly of most of its work. Before very long the whole Constitution will be published and then the public will be able to judge of its merits and demerits. We have been otherwise too busy to keep fully up with its work. Among the later more important principles adopted are the following : The Supreme Court shall consist of four judges, to serve for eight years, while the Circuit Judges will hold four years. The Legislature will continue to elect judges. Circuit Judges are forbidden to charge as to the facts. County Courts with limited jurisdiction may be organized, upon the vote of the people of each county through the Legislature. Judges cannot commit prisoners to the Penitentiary for contempt of court, without trial by jury. The section against lynching provides that the Sheriff or other officer having the prisoner in custody shall be removed supon true bill being found and disqualitied for holding any future office unless pardoned by the Governor. The county is also made responsible in damages to the family of the person

TALK FROM TEXAS.

The last issue of the Baptist Courier has a letter written from Whitney. Texas, by Rev. L. L. Sams, a South Carolinian doing missionary work in the lone star State. The following extract from that letter proves beyond question that the older Atlantic States can not compete in cheapness of cotton productive with that big acud sommon

I have been in a rewarded. great many towns and cities of Texas, but I have not been greeted by the savory guano car, nor have I heard of a farmer that uses it at all. In some places this soil is more than fifty feet deep, and so tenacious is its nature that it must be literally " kicked off " of one's shoes should be walk in it after a rain. When dry it does not bother one date for a place on the Supreme Court at all. Texas has produced so much corn and outs this year that they are selling at 14 and 15 cents a bushel. One man and boy can work fifty or sixty acres of this prairie land with all ease. and make two thous; n ! bushels of corn. witness to his eminent tituess for that A bale of cotton per nere is called an average crop. Surely the weed has reached its perfection here.

In her cattle and stock industries Texas people feel a just pride. It is a beautiful scene to see five or six thousand head of cattle gently browsing on these coundless prairies. To me it seemed dangerous to approach them too closely, but the Texan, has no fear of a herd eve., in a stampede. In north l'exas you can l'ar a first class horse for twelve or lifteen dolars.

HEAR THE OTHER SIDE.

Your kind and flattering comments on our conversation of sometime ago, in your "Leader" of last week, with your consent calls for ome remarks from me. When I told you that I intended to double my coton acreage next year I neglected to mention the fact that my grain crop would also be proportionately increased. I am fully aware that mixed farming is the only true system of farming here or elsewhere. But, I am sanguine about cotton next year, and it behooves every farmer in Bainwell County, after planting sufficient provision crops to meet the needs of home-consumption, to plant every acre of cotton that can be worked well. Our soil suits cotton; our people under find it's culture; it is the safest money crop; it is the basis of credit. And with a provision crop inprecedented, with cheap bacon, cheap grain, cheap labor, cheap stock, neap dry goods, our outlook was never more encouraging. However the cotton crop is a short one, and ere the next crop can reach the market the price of the staple is sure to be much igher than now. Again our cotton can be put on the market next fall by Oct 1st. By planting early, using commercial fertilizers to a limited extent, work the crop rapidly, we can sell our next crop before the bulk of the cotton begins to move to market. It is a well known fact that the Western erop can't be put on the market as soon as ours. There, early in the season, the heat is so intense till the pickers can't stand it. Then the corn erop of that section is forced to be gathered in chaser to pay for papers. September on account of weevils, etc., In the Piedmont region, and even west of us, the cotton crop is fully a month later than ours. So if a crop of even 10,000,000 bales be made next year, the Barnwell county farmer that "humps' himself need not be hurt by the fall it would cause, because with ordinary seasons for picking the bulk of the crop can be marketed by October.

True enough the fertile West averages more corn and more cotton also to the acre than we do, but when we compare their system with ours, we are far better satisfied. There labor is scarce and high; here labor is abundant and cheap. There they can only work when "the season is in the ground just right;" here we are rarely hindered. There they can only cultivate 20 acres to the mule; here we work twice that amount. They pay $3 for ginning a real estate: bale there; we pay $1 here. There wageworkers get $15 and $20 per month; here we pay $5 and $7. There they pay never less than 50 cents and often $1 per hundred for picking; here we give 35 and 40 cents. True they have no phosphate bills, but we, by using only limited amount, can get along without owing much for that commodity. have used from 50 to 600 pounds of fertilizers per acre and I find the smaller quantity most profitable.

I have abiding, faith in cotton. frue it has been below the cost of production, but now it is at a paying basis, and I see no reason why it won't remain so for some years to come. At any rate I, am going to plant for the record breaking crop next year.

The Editor's "Young Farmer

THE grand jury of Greenville County has hit the nail on the head in its recommendation that the law against carrying concealed weapons be so amended as to fix the punishment at fine and imprisonment, and not to leave it in the discretion of the court, which always means that the white man will get off with a fine, while the negrowho is unable to pay goes to the penitentiary. That was the practical working of the law in the past, until jurisdiction was given to the trial justices, which killed the law itself. The monstrons evil of carrying concealed weapons is pervadng every class of society. Judge Benet was right in saying that consternation would take place if he ordered the s eriff to search for concealed weapons, for men go into the temples of justice with deadly weapons concealed about

Shame upon the manhood and chivalry of South Carolina when roding men are taught to tween fifty five and sixty thousand hide a murderous weapon upon their persons, knowing that they are compararively safe from the penalty of the law against this crime, because public sentiment does not compel the enforcement of the law. Courts and juries ought to help change this sentiment, and the Legislature should beed the suggestion made by the grand jury, which would bring into operation a wholesome restraint that is sorely needed at this time. Greenville County can well afford to take the lead in this matter, as we are rapidly gaining a most unenviable reputation for frequent murders in city ductive with that big acud sommon and county. The ever-present pistol is the cause of nine-tenths of such-crimes.
