LONG BRANCH PHILOSOPHY.

Spring think, so much quoted by poets and other writers, has arrived and with house flies, mosquitos, and other pests numerous to mention, and the time for gentlemen and ladies of means and leisure to hang around the various places of amusement, the different springs and spas, and mansions built for the purpose of taking exercise, so-called testing and recuperation, etc. All this is going on while the farmer is fighting General Green in order that the world may be fed and clothed—we don't mean the farmer in name only, the one who drives out at 9:30 a. m. every spot of his hide protected from the scorching sun and other expenses are paid with profits taken from his less prudent neighbor and who never goes without a trial shirt, cuffs, tie and gloves) but the kind we allude to is the man who has broken soil, the man who has never read in need of water and better than Long Branch of Turkey Creek, can stand and wig has never needed any extra amount of exercise since the day that Cain went out from the Garden of Eden and cleared up the first new ground and undertook to support his wife and children by tilling the soil.

When we say farmer we mean the fellow who daily puts his back to the sun and as he plows he tells you, you fool. We don't mean that we have anything against town folks, and am not opposed to big doings; we only make the above as the facts in the case, just as we do things from our backwoods standpoint. We asked friends in town almost as clever and economical as country people, whether it is a fellow is known to tuck a little cash in his wallet.

THE CHARLESTON EARTHQUAKE.

The last great earthquake in the United States was that of Charleston, S. C., in 1886. This earthquake was preceded by minor tremors, in which little attention was paid. The principal shock occupied about one minute, and other shocks followed at intervals, with gradually diminishing violence. At the end of four weeks they had ceased to be destructive, but tremors were occasionally observed for several months longer. In Charleston the movements were less violent than at the center of the disturbance; a point 15 miles west of the city a large number of houses and chimneys were thrown down, and nearly all the buildings in the city were more or less damaged. The damage was computed at many millions of dollars. Twenty-seven persons were killed outright, and others died afterwards, from injuries received.

SUNFLOWER MEDICINE.

Near Christmas years ago John Connelly, colored, then living near Buford's Bridge, came into this office and handing us two dollars for the year's subscription said, in substance: 'I'm glad to pay you, for that's the best money I ever spent. Last Spring I saw it in THE PEOPLE that sunflowers planted around a house would keep off fever. So I planted a plug of them around my house and we had no fever this year. I haven't had to buy any fever medicine or any doctor bill to pay for the first time since I've been a man.'

This incident is recalled by a recently published report from Consul General Guenther of Frankfort, Germany, that a Spanish professor has discovered that the sunflower yields a tefbruge that may be substituted for quinine.

In Russia, says this article, the peasants make fever patients sleep of beds made of sunflower leaves and also cover with them.

A French doctor claims to have speedily cured 100 children from one month to twelve years old suffering with malarial fever by the use of alcoholic extracts from the flowers and leaves.

The sunflower, outside of the above claims, should be a valuable crop. All stock eat the leaves and stalks, with eagerness and the seed are no good for poultry.

THE STRICKEN CITY.

San Francisco was the ninth city of the United States, having a population of 400,000 and property values of $350,000,000.

Three fourths of the city lies in ashes, but much insurance money will be collected from American and European companies and the city will be rebuilt more sanely than before.

There is no other site in all that region where a great city can stand.

It was built on a peninsula twenty miles long, six wide, rising to a height of 655 feet, running out into the great bay that would hold the world's navies.

Until late years of the century of earthquake apprehensions the city government would not allow any very tall buildings erected, but foolish newspapers wanted skyscraper offices and 8, 10, 12 and even 18 story buildings were built.

With all these structures and the streets worked with telephone, telegraph, electric light and traction wires it is a wonder that any part of the city escaped burning.

LATE CALIFORNIA NEWS.

Many marriages have followed the great calamity, women driven from their homes and left destitute having appealed to the men to whom they were engaged, and immediate marriages effected.

In San Francisco 500 bodies had been recovered and buried up to Saturday night, and 200 bodies buried beyond identification had been cremated.

Insurance experts estimate the property loss at $300,000,000, on which there was insurance for $175,000,000.

There is no danger of famine, large supplies of provisions having been received.

About 100 men were shot to death by soldiers for looting and rioting and two men were lynched for robbing stores.

There is a plenty of money in the local banks and on deposit in the East to rebuild the city and the work of clearing up the streets and repairing water works &c. is well under way.

The California earthquake probably brought the cool spell of Monday and Tuesday. There was a similar change of weather after the Charleston earthquake.

Grand Chancellor B. A. Morgan of the Knights of Pythias has issued an appeal to every subordinate lodge in the State to contribute to the homeless, penniless and almost destitute members of the order in California to G. F. Neal, President Board of control, Manhattan Building, Chicago.

The total number of lives lost in earthquake and volcanic disasters since history began is put at 13,000,000.

All the Pacific slope is in volcanic territory. From Alaska southward to southern South America there are two or three hundred volcanoes, some active, others dormant and others apparently extinct.
