

WAS NOTED YEGG

Reward for the Capture of "Tennessee Dutch" Has Not Been Claimed.

HIS CAREER RECALLED

Famous Safe-Cracker Was Killed in Florida and his Body Would Have to be Delivered to United States Marshal Adams in Charleston in Order to Get the $200 Reward.

Some slight apprehension is felt in the United States Marshal's office, says the News and Courier, by reason of the fact that Garber Moore, alias "Tennessee Dutch," the noted yegg, has been killed in Florida, and should the yegg desire the reward of $200 offered for Moore, he would have to bring the body to Charleston and deliver it to the United States Marshal or his deputy. The officials are, of course, glad that "Tennessee Dutch" is dead, and Marshal Adams would like to pay the reward, but he does not desire to have the body deposited in his office.

Moore and a pal were killed some time ago in Tallahassee, and the bodies were embalmed and kept for identification by postoffice inspectors. "Tennessee Dutch" had an interesting career from the time he became a yeggman, and had he lived to write a story of his life, the book would have had a ready sale. But one of the most interesting escapades of his life probably was when he escaped from the jail at Greenville last March.

"Dutch" and a pal, George Horton, were captured after one of their raids in this State and locked up in the jail at Greenville to await trial at the United States Court on the charge of safe-cracking. The pair were looked up apart from the other prisoners and could not be seen, but could converse together. They had friends on the outside, and it was noticed afterwards that at frequent intervals a bag of fruit would be brought to the jail and handed to the prisoners. They consumed the fruit, but each time carefully put the bag away for future reference.

They were supplied, in some way, with nitro-glycerine or some other high explosive, and they planned to blow through the cement floor of their cell. Their manner of working was novel in the extreme. Every time that Horton was about to set off the explosive "Dutch" would stand by with a paper bag in his hand, blown up, and simultaneously with the explosion he would burst the bag, and throwing the pieces out of his cell into the passage, would remark in loud tones: "That was a good one," or "that one made a big noise, fellows." The noise from the explosion of the nitro-glycerine was supposed to have been the noise of the popping of the bag. So Horton and Moore worked along uninterruptedly until they had enough of the floor blown away to enable them to escape, and one morning in March the pair were missing.

Immediately the alarm was given and officers were notified of the escape. One of the means of identifying Horton was that a part of his left arm was missing, and this fact was well known. "Dutch" and Horton sped away, got safely across the line and continued their onward march into North Carolina, leaving Greenville farther behind at the setting of each day's sun.

The pair went along until they reached a station about six miles from Asheville. Here a deputy marshal, of the name of Rodgers, who had noticed the pair and was after them. He did not shoot, but the reason that he wanted to be before he fired, and he was looking for a man with one arm. But Horton was carrying his overcoat on the stump of his left arm, and Rodgers came close to them before he called to them to surrender. Immediately "Dutch" and Horton grabbed the officer, and while Horton was busily chewing off a part of his ear, "Dutch" got possession of the officer's pistol and decamped, leaving his pal in the vicinity, hearing the call for help, went to the rescue. They succeeded in overpowering Horton and subsequently he was landed safely in the jail at Greenville. Horton was later tried and convicted and is now serving time in the penitentiary at Atlanta.

After the affair near Asheville, "Tennessee Dutch" was lost sight of for a time, but Postoffice Inspector Gregory still worked to get news of the missing yeggman. His efforts were rewarded, and last fall he located "Dutch" in New York State. Thither the inspector hied, and got on the trail of "Dutch", but just at the time he thought he would land his man, he learned that "Dutch" had bought a railroad ticket and left on a train for the South.

Landing again on his native heath, "Dutch" formed copartnership with another yeggman, evidently a new man in the business, however, and together they planned to rob the postoffice at Tallahassee, Florida.

One night in December the two appeared at the back door of the postoffice, and called to the young man inside that they had found two mail pouches that had been dropped out of a wagon and wanted to deliver them. The door was opened by the son of the watchman, and in the fight that ensued the young man killed both of the safe crackers.

Inspector Gregory has lately made a trip to Tallahassee and positively identified one of the bodies as that of Garber Moore, alias "Tennessee Dutch." He was unable to identify the other man. After the escape of

BOAT AND CREW LOST

"GRAVEYARD OF THE ATLANTIC" GAINS MORE VICTIMS.

Three Mast Schooner Pounded to Pieces Off Cape Hatteras, and Ten Men Perish.

With a north-west wind blowing fifty-two miles an hour gale and a heavy weather prevailing, the three-masted schooner Frances, Captain Coombs, from New York to Jacksonville, was washed ashore on the treacherous Hatteras coast early on Tuesday morning, and was pounded to pieces by the raging sea before life savers from the Cape Hatteras and Big Kinnekeet Life Saving Stations could reach the ill-fated vessel's crew of ten men, who are supposed to have been lost in the furious seas.

Although none of the bodies have come ashore as yet, the life savers report that there was no possible means of escape for those aboard. The wreck was discovered from big Kinnekeet Station a short time after daybreak.

Before life savers, who put out immediately after discovering the vessel, could reach her, they saw her break to pieces and seeing no signs of life, abandoned all effort at rescue.

The Frances, which was formerly the barkentine Frances of Baltimore, was a vessel of 643 tons net register, was owned by Edwin S. Pendleton of New York. She was built in Belfast, Me., in 1837, and was employed in the lumber carrying trade between Florida and Northern points.

TRAIN KILLS THREE.

Runs Over a Woman and Knocks Out Automobile.

Pennsylvania train No. 9 west-bound struck and killed Mrs. Roy Covert and fatally injured her husband at a crossing near Loudonville, Pa., Tuesday. Proceeding further the train struck an automobile on the outskirts of Crestline, a few miles away, and killed J. H. Sigler, aged 60, and Charles Echeberger, both of Hayesville. In the automobile with Echeberger and Sigler was Curtis Doerrier of Mansfield. Doerrier's shoulder was crushed, his leg broken and he also received internal injuries.

The young woman who was the first to meet death on the track was on her way, with Covert, her husband, to visit a neighbor. Her death was instant. Covert was picked up many yards away and does not know his wife's fate.

The automobile party struck at Lees crossing came upon the tracks in their machine from the rear of an eastbound freight, directly in front of the express. In an instant their machine was lifted high in the air. When it fell Sigler and Echeberger were dead. Their bodies were brought to Mansfield. Doerrier was taken to a Crestline hospital.

MADE A BIG ROW.

Because His Wife Warm Her Feet on His Back.

Are cold feet a ground for divorce? Because a wife is afflicted with frigid pedal extremities and persists in warming them upon the small of her husband's back, is he justified in putting her out of the room and making her go asleep in the servant's quarters?

These and kindred questions came up before Recorder Broyles in Atlanta in connection with the trial of E. T. Gibbs, a prominent coal contractor, charged with disorderly conduct and cruel treatment of Mrs. Gibbs. In addition to declaring his wife's feet were so frosty that he spent his nights enying Cook and Peary in the land of the midnight sun, Gibbs said his wife was addicted to cigarette smoking and reading French novels. The charges against Gibbs were dismissed.

Lost Both Legs.

A serious accident befell Gus Hennett, while enroute to his work in Asheville. Hennett was walking along the tracks of the Southern railway when an engine came long. He got off the track to allow the engine to pass but as he stepped from one track onto another he was struck by a shifting engine and both legs so badly mangled that amputation was necessary.

Two Mules Drowned.

Monday afternoon when Henry Howard, driving a team of two mules and a horse from Barium Springs to Columbia, attempted to pass Fishing Creek at a ford near Mills' mill, in Chester county, driver, wagon and team were swept down by the raging waters. The mules were drowned; the wagon was recovered and the driver narrowly escaped.

Kills Huge Snake.

A snake fifteen feet long and five inches in diameter that had been crawling along one of the principal streets of Jersey City was cut in half by a trolley car last night. The police believe that the snake had escaped from some animal show in the neighborhood.

Uprising in Korea.

A special dispatch from Seoul reports a serious uprising of insurgents at South Phongan, Korea. Twenty Japanese settlers are said to have been murdered.

Moore from Greenville, United States Marshal Adams, pursuant to instructions from the postoffice department at Washington, offered a reward of $200 for the delivery of Moore to him or his deputy, but the reward has not been claimed.

WHY GARFIELD LOST

THE REASON JAS. R. GARFIELD IS NOT NOW IN

President Taft's Cabinet is Because He Antagonized Friends of Ballinger's in the Alaska Deal.

In testifying before the Ballinger-Pinchot investigating committee on Monday Lewis R. Glavis told of a conversation he had with a Judge McKenzie, in which the latter said the reason James R. Garfield was not in President Taft's cabinet was his antagonism to the coal claimants in Alaska.

"Did he tell any other reasons why Mr. Garfield was not in the cabinet?" asked Mr. Olmsted amid laughter.

"No, sir."

Senator Root here entered vigorously into the examination.

"Who did McKenzie make this statement to?" he asked.

"T. Special Agent Jones and myself. We made an affidavit to that effect."

"Why did you make an affidavit?"

"I thought it would be worth remembering in the further investigation of these cases if we had to call McKenzie as a witness."

"When did you make the affidavit?"

"In September, 1909."

"After you had seen President Taft?"

"Yes, sir."

"Now, again, why was it made that affidavit?" inquired Senator Root.

"I thought it might be of interest to President Taft if I had another opportunity to see him."

"Did you intend to send it to President Taft?"

"I had that in mind."

"No, I thought I would show it to him when he came to Seattle."

"And you did send it where?"

"To the forest service."

Glavis added that he thought the affidavit would also be of interest to Mr. Garfield.

"You did not do it with the idea of attacking President Taft?" asked Senator Root.

"No."

"You swear you did not?"

"I swear."

"Did you think it would aid the president?"

"I didn't know. I don't think it would injure him."

"Who is this man McKenzie?" asked Representative Madison.

"He is interested in the Dalton group of claims in Alaska and is known among the agents as a lobbyist here in Washington."

Glavis was questioned closely as to why the statement as to Mr. Garfield made such an impression upon him.

"Because I thought it was true," he replied.

"Did you regard McKenzie as a man of prominence enough to speak knowingly of such matters?" asked Senator Root.

"I knew he had been mighty successful in getting things through congress."

"Was McKenzie a friend of President Taft?"

"No, sir."

Representative Dendy questioned Glavis further about making an affidavit of a statement which he said reflected upon President Taft.

Glavis said the impression McKenzie left was that influential people opposed to Secretary Garfield had urged the president not to retain Mr. Garfield, for various reasons. He did not say the president had not retained Garfield because of his opposition to the coal claimants.

"You thought it was a boast by the McKenzie?" suggested Representative Madison.

"I remarked to Jones that if he had strength to get rid of Garfield he could also get rid of us, too."

Glavis said he did not think McKenzie's statement was intended in any way as a reflection upon President Taft.

Those Coal Claims.

Explaining his connection with the Alaskan coal claims, as brought out in the Ballinger-Pinchot investigation, Representative McLachlan of California, Monday mentioned Gov. Gillett, Representatives Knowland and McKinlay of California, as being interested in the proposition with himself and Representative Kinkaid, of Nebraska, and a number of others.

MAKES REPLY

Senator Tillman Makes Return to Role Regarding Children

TO THE SUPREME COURT

The Return Contains No Attack on the Virtue or Goodness of the Beautiful Young Daughter-in-Law of the Senator but Gives Plain Facts.

The case of Mrs. B. R. Tillman, Jr., petitioner, against Senator B. R. Tillman and his wife, Mrs. S. S. Tillman, for the custody of the two children of Mr. and Mrs. B. R. Tillman, Jr., was taken up by the supreme court at Columbia on Monday morning and occupied the whole of the morning session.

The Daily Record says the largest crowd that has visited the usually empty court room filled that hall when the case was called, a large number of the spectators being ladies of Columbia, including relatives and friends of the parties in the suit.

The petitioner, a young woman of strikingly handsome person and refined face, was accompanied by several ladies and gentlemen of her family. Senator Tillman and his son, Mr. B. R. Tillman, Jr., sat on the opposite side of the court room, but the younger man soon left the room. The elder Mrs. Tillman and the two children were in another part of the building.

The return of the respondents to the rule to show cause why the writ of habeas corpus should not issue was purely formal, denying such parts of the petition as were legally necessary to be denied, and there was no reflection whatever on the petitioner. The return was first read by Mr. Thurmond, who is counsel for Senator Tillman, which was followed by the affidavit of Senator Tillman.

A brief affidavit was then presented from Trenton neighbors, testifying to the character and ability of Senator Tillman and his wife as fit persons to have the care and custody of the children. These affidavits were, as pointed out in the affidavit of the senator, put in merely to satisfy the technical rules of the court, as the respondents did not consider it was necessary to present testimony to bolster up their reputations.

At the conclusion of the reading of the affidavits for the respondents, Mr. DePass, who is the counsel for Mrs. B. R. Tillman, Jr., presented a number of affidavits in reply, two of them being by the petitioner, Mrs. B. R. Tillman, Jr. The tenor of these was to show that the differences between her and her husband had been aggravated by the conduct of Senator and Mrs. Tillman.

Several letters from Senator Tillman to his son's wife were included as exhibits along this line, and it was also set forth by the affidavits of Mrs. Tillman, Jr., Mr. W. W. Sheppard, Mrs. W. W. Sheppard and others that Senator Tillman had made some references to a deceased relative of Mrs. Tillman, Jr., which had enraged her on one occasion and that following this incident she had declared her intention never to have anything further to do with her husband's family. The exact nature of this remark was not explained in the affidavit, except that it was said to be insulting.

There were also presented letters to Mrs. Tillman, Jr., from Mrs. Tillman, Sr., and from Miss Sophie Tillman, as well as letters to his wife from Mr. Tillman, Jr., the purpose being to show the attitude of the Tillman family to the wife of Senator Tillman. The contents of these letters were personal in the extreme in their character, all of them giving out evidence of the very unfortunate situation within the family circle.

Several letters from young Mr. Tillman to his wife were also presented, written during the last fall, when they were preparing to make their home in Washington again, these being couched in endearing terms and expressing great regret for his previous errors and shortcomings. The purpose of their presentation was said to be to show that immediately prior to their separation no reason was given for their apparently no reason for such action and that the taking of the children was entirely unexpected and uncalculated.

In one of her affidavits presented in reply, young Mrs. Tillman declared that when she was taken ill in Washington in November last, her husband telephoned first for a bachelor friend and then for a physician and that in her hearing, in the next room to that in which she was ill, her husband explained to his friend that the reason he sent for him was that his wife might die and he wanted a witness to the fact that he had given her proper attention, so that her relatives could not bring any accusation against him.

In another affidavit were included letters from young Mr. Tillman expressing the deepest contrition for accusations he had made against his wife at the time of their first separation, involving "Jim", and declaring that his action was then due to his own drunken condition, going on to assert his love for and confidence in his wife and her purity of character. It was one o'clock when the hearing of affidavits was concluded, only an hour remaining before the usual hour of adjournment of the court, and by agreement the attorneys limited their arguments to half an hour for each side. Mr. E. O. DePass opening for the petitioner, being followed by Mr. Simpkins for the petitioner and Mr. Thurmond for the respondents.

VERY QUEER CASE

A MAN WHO HAS SLEPT FOR SIX TEEN DAYS STRAIGHT.

Malady of a Wealthy North Carolinian, Who Went to Toledo to Marry, Puzzles Doctors.

Physicians and detectives are mystified over the peculiar condition in which J. F. Smithwick, a wealthy cotton merchant of South Creek, Beaufort county, North Carolina, has remained for two weeks at the State Hospital at Toledo, Ohio. During his strange sleep, which began sixteen days ago, Smithwick has not spoken over a dozen words and at all times seems to be unconscious.

It was supposed when Smithwick was found unconscious in his room that he was the victim of gas, a small jet above his head being found partially turned on. There is no doubt in the minds of physicians that Smithwick's condition has been brought on by something besides gas. At no time has the victim come into actual consciousness. At times he opens his eyes and watches the figures in the room, but does not speak.

Smithwick formed an acquaintance with a Toledo girl through an advertisement published in a matrimonial paper. After several weeks' correspondence he came to Toledo and met his fiancée. According to her statement they had planned an early date for their marriage.

When he was found unconscious in his room at the hotel the police started an investigation but the whole affair appears as much a mystery as it did the day he was found unconscious.

Smithwick is fed through a tube and is given principally liquids. He has not been removed from the hotel, as it is feared any movement might prove fatal. The attending physicians do not entertain much hope for his recovery. And so Smithwick remains sleeping. When he will awake is as deep a mystery as what caused his relapse into the unconscious state. Up to the present he has slept just 384 hours.

Several nurses have been in constant attendance working under the directions of attending physicians, who had charge of the victim's case. Many physicians, both local and foreign, have been called in to see the patient, but all go away with a shake of the head—they are as puzzled as the rest.

WAYLaid BY FOOTPADS.

Jeweler Robbed by Three Bandits Who Make Their Escape.

Three bad men are somewhere in the mountains of West Virginia with $3,000 in money and diamonds worth $10,000, which they took by force from C. C. Testerman, a jeweler, of Matewan, W. Va., while he was returning home from his shop.

The men were masked when they waylaid the jeweler, bound and gagged him, and after relieving him of all that he had, they escaped to the woods. Bloodhounds were put on their trail, but were unable to track them on account of the heavy rainfall. Testerman says that he secured the diamonds from a Cincinnati firm and was to have sold them on commission.

CHOKED ON FREE LUNCH.

Failed to Swallow Piece of Meat He Was Eating.

At Louisville, Ky., Henry V. Wolf, councilman from the eleventh ward, choked to death Tuesday on a piece of meat which he was endeavoring to swallow at a free lunch counter in a saloon at Tenth and Market streets.

Mr. Wolf, who is a clerk for the Southern railway, felt the pangs of hunger a couple of hours after breakfast and, going to the saloon to appease his appetite, attacked the free lunch. He had taken but a few bites when he was seen to grow black in the face and fall to the floor. A physician was hastily summoned, but the man died of suffocation before aid arrived.

Kills Child and Self.

Another child murder startled New York Monday. It occurred in a house on East Fifteenth street, where a man shot and killed one child, then wounded another, and then killed himself. The police are following the theory that the man may have been the slayer of the two boys shot while coasting recently.

GUIDE SAVED BY TOURIST.

Hangs on the Safety Rope Until Help Came to Their Aid.

Hermann Biner, one of the most popular Alpine guides at Zermatt, Switzerland, had a terrifying experience while making an ascent of the Breithorn, and was only saved from death by the heroism of the tourist who accompanied him.

Biner was engaged by Dr. Shivel, a Munich physician, to guide him to the summit of the Breithorn, which is 13,000 feet high. After the Doctor had crossed a snow-covered crevasse above the Theodule pass, Biner attempted to follow, but the snow bridge collapsed.

The guide dropped thirty feet over a precipice and remained suspended by the rope which bound him to Dr. Shivel. The latter, notwithstanding the terrible strain, managed to hold the guide in midair for two hours, meanwhile shouting for help.

When the Doctor was nearly exhausted and Biner had shouted to him to cut the rope and save himself, two Italian smugglers, heavily laden, came over the Theodule pass.

Hearing the shouts they rescued the guide and assisted Dr. Shivel, conveyed him nearly to Zermatt. Then the smugglers disappeared, having refused to accept any reward for their services.

THE NEW FERTILIZER.

A discovery of far-reaching importance to the farmers of the South is the new fertilizer which has been perfected on one of the islands near Charleston, S. C. It has long been known that lime is an essential food for plants of all kinds and that they cannot live when it has been exhausted from the soil. It has also been known that old worn-out lands are extremely deficient in lime, and that soil, badly-drained lands have their lime is a far mth that is not usable by growing crops.

Farmers' Bulletin No. 124, U. S. Dept. of Agriculture, says: "All the applications of lime increased the yields." The best yields were obtained with the lime in the form of carbonate, the finely ground oyster shells standing first. "Lime with fertilizer was more profitable than depending upon fertilizer alone."

This new fertilizer which presents lime in its most usable form is made by a new process of burning oyster shells and using a burner that can supply potash. The result is a high grade fertilizer costing the consumer only $7.00 per ton. It reclaim worn-out lands in a marvelous manner. If applied broadcast two months ahead of ammoniated goods, its sweetening effects on sour lands is almost magical. Charleston freight rates apply on this new fertilizer. The factory is located on Youngs Island, S. C., but all letters should be addressed to E. L. Commins, Sales Agent, Meggetts, S. C. Free descriptive circulars will be sent to any one on request.

THE NAUGHTY STORK Put Up a Job on Husband With Wife's Assistance. A fine domestic scandal has been unearthed at Los Angeles, Cal., by the refusal of Dr. Armstrong G. Pratt to sign birth certificates for the quadruplets supposed to have been born to Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Wilson, of that place, and the health department of Los Angeles is making an investigation into the case. Dr. Pratt has declared that in his opinion none of the infants was born at the Wilson residence and that all had been born previous to the day they were supposed to have been. He declares that Mrs. Wilson confessed to him that the babies had been taken to the house by a woman who had assisted her in perpetrating the hoax and that one of the infants was six weeks old, another a week old, and the other two were about 24 hours old when he first saw them. The woman, according to Dr. Pratt, not only admitted that the quadruplets were not genuine, but two sets of triplets, which arrived at the Wilson home in past years, and which brought a letter of recommendation and a signed photograph from President Roosevelt were made up of infant waifs picked up at various institutions. According to the woman her husband wanted a large family, and that her only genuine child was an infant born 25 years ago and which died while a baby. After its death Mrs. Wilson said she longed for children of her own, and at last hit upon the idea of having the make-believe appearances of the stork.

The concessions in prices secured through the anti meat strike are an impressive illustration of what can be done when people quit the "devil take the hindmost policy" and act as a unit.
