With a breach of promise suit and impeachment proceedings pending against him we have no doubt but that Gov. Sulzer of New York, is willing to concede that Sherman's definition of war applies equally as well to politics—as played by Tammany Hall.

Rather a peculiar condition of affairs in S. C. when an alleged negro murderer from one State can secure protection in an adjoining commonwealth simply because the two governments happen to be on "requisition terms" as it were?

South Carolina's fast building up a reputation as a haven of refuge for the criminals of other States is the great and glorious issue.

BLACK ROOT CAUSED COTTON PLANTS TO DIE

Col. Harry D. Calhoun Received Reply to His Letter of Inquiry

Col. Harry D. Calhoun wrote to the Clemson College authorities some time ago in regard to the dying of cotton plants in certain fields in and around Barnwell. Last week he received the following communication from Prof. H. W. Barre, professor of botany, and the information contained therein will, no doubt prove of interest and value to the farmer readers of The People.

Clemson College
August 15, 1913.

Mr. Harry D. Calhoun,
Barnwell, S. C.

Dear Sir—

Your letter about diseased and dying cotton plants in your county has been delayed on account of my absence.

Comparing the diseased or dying cotton in your county with complaints received from other parts of the State, I take it that you have what is known as the Cotton Wilt, frequently spoken of as Black Root or Blight, and the disease can be controlled by using varieties of cotton seed and low peas that are resistant to it.

We have two varieties of cotton, the Dixie and the Dillon, that are practically immune to wilt, and we are planting these varieties on wilt-infested lands and are securing splendid results.

We find, however, another trouble is associated with cotton wilt. This trouble is known as root knot, caused by the nematode or eel worm boring into the roots of the plant causing galls or knots to form thereon. Root knot is prevalent on light lands and attacks all of our staple crops except corn and small grain crops, and cotton that is immune to wilt is often subjected to root knot, and where both troubles occur it is necessary to get rid of the root knot before trying an immune variety of cotton. This can be done by practicing rotation of crops, leaving cotton and ordinary peas off for two years, planting corn and Brabham Iron Peas and other small grain, and it would be perfectly safe then to plant Dixie or Dillon cotton seed on these lands.

We are operating about twenty breeders in the State that have the Dixie and Dillon cotton seeds, and our arrangement with them is $1.00 per bushel. Any farmer can get them by applying to this department.

Very truly,
H. W. Barre,
Professor of Botany,
Clemson College, S. C.
