

"JOY" OF TRAVEL IN EUROPE

According to One Who Has Seen There, It Is One Long Succession of Discomforts.

When one considers the discomforts of European traveling it is astonishing that one ever travels at all, writes Aurio Barron in the London Daily Telegraph. The indignity of the custom houses and the rudeness of the officials must deter many from crossing the border.

Boxes are ransacked and turned topsy-turvy, dirty hands finger your most alluring dresses and you are not allowed, apparently, to have any article of clothing that is not a hundred years old.

Whether a thing looks new or not, your integrity is questioned. I argued for 20 minutes with a Czech official about a fan which had been in my possession for two years and had lately returned from the shop where it had been mended.

At the Ozecho-German frontier I saw a large cupboard full of objects confiscated. Among these were several books, ordinary novels. On inquiry I was informed that each traveler was only permitted to bring two books for his personal use into the country, and these must bear his signature on the front page. Chocolate is also forbidden, and any traveling trunk which does not present a battered appearance on leaving Germany is appropriated by the douaniers or its owner is made to pay a tax amounting to more than the original cost. I heard of a case where an entire trunk was emptied, its contents flung upon the floor and the offending purchase confiscated.

Another time a child was deprived of its shoes, as the notes looked new, and literally forced to continue his journey in midwinter in his stocking feet. The very clothes on your back are examined, and fur coats are liable to be taxed unless you can prove where and when they were bought or have had them previously stamped at another frontier.

Food for Thought

The Inhospitable Merchant.

A citizen who was carrying an express package from a city mail order house, was accosted by a local merchant. "Why didn't you buy that bill of goods from me?" he asked. "I could have saved you the express, and besides you would have been patronizing a home store, which helps pay the taxes and builds up this locality." With characteristic frankness, the citizen replied: "Why don't you patronize your home paper and advertise? I read it and didn't know you had the goods I have here, nor do I ever see your name in the paper inviting me to come to your store."—The Lake Worth (Fla.) Leader.
