The Chamber of Commerce.

Calhoun County is recognized as one of the progressive counties of South Carolina. St. Matthews, its county seat, is a rapidly growing town. From what we are able to gather from The Calhoun Times, the progress of town and county is the result of cooperation—cooperation between the business men of St. Matthews on the one hand and the farmers of Calhoun County on the other. Without such cooperation, no county can ever be really "big."

St. Matthews has a Chamber of Commerce. Evidently it is a live organization. Its purpose is to advertise St. Matthews—to "sell" the town to the people living in the rural districts and in other parts of the State, as it were. The members of that organization evidently appreciate the value of newspaper advertising, as we read the following item in last week's issue of The Times:

"At the meeting in the Court House on Thursday, August 30th, when the various committees went into session outlining plans for making the great movement started a complete success, the importance of placing The Calhoun Times into every home in the county was emphasized over and over."

One plan suggested was that the business men of the town solicit funds to employ canvassers to see every farmer in the county, white and black."

As a rule, many people do not appreciate the value of a newspaper to a town and community, but this does not seem to be the case over in Calhoun. The Times is a bright sunny sheet that is well patronized by the local merchants, and wherever this is the case it goes without saying that the newspaper represents a "live" town.

With the exception of a few of the more progressive merchants of Barnwell, most of the local business men are non-advertisers. For some reason they do not "believe in advertising," although Henry Ford is going to spend $7,000,000 during the coming year and the biggest success in the business world today are liberal users of printer's ink. Newspapers and progress go hand in hand together.

The People is glad that the business men of Barnwell have organized a Chamber of Commerce. Such a body is a necessary adjunct to any progressive town. Barnwell is a progressive town in many respects—and we pledge our support and whatever influence we may have to make the new organization a success.

We would like to suggest that the town adopt a slogan—something "catchy" that may be used for advertising purposes. Mullins, a town in the upper part of the State, advises its citizens each week to "Pull for Mullins or Pull Out." While we are thinking over the matter of the proper slogan, we might all begin to "Boost for a Bigger, Better, Busier Barnwell."

Let's go!!
P. S. Since writing the above, The People has received a communication from Blackville announcing a contest by the Chamber of Commerce of that city to select a suitable slogan.

Destroy Cotton Stalks.

The People wishes to urge the farmers of Barnwell County to destroy the cotton stalks in their fields just as soon as they finish picking their cotton this Fall. This is said to be one of the best measures known in the fight against the boll weevil, J. A. Evans, of the Department of Agriculture, declaring that if all farmers in a given section would do this weevil infestation next summer would be practically nil. The People will publish more along this line from Mr. Evans next week.

Mr. Perry Bush, of Ellenton, was the guest of his brother, J. Julian Bush, Esq., this week.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Reed, of Florence, spent the week-end here with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Reed.

Nervous Break-Down
MRS. ANNIE LANGE, of R. F. D. 1, Burlington, Tex., writes as follows regarding her experience with Cardui: "Some time ago I had a nervous break-down of some kind. . . I was very weak and so nervous. I had fainting spells and suffered a great deal, but more from the weak, trembly, no-account feeling than anything else. I knew I needed a tonic, and needed it badly. I began the use of Cardui to see if I couldn't get some strength, as I knew of other cases that had been helped by its use. I soon saw a great improvement, so I kept it up. I used seven bottles of Cardui, and can say the money was well spent, for I grew well and strong. Am now able to do all my housework and a great deal of work besides."
If you are weak, run-down, nervous and suffer from the ailments peculiar to women, it is very likely that Cardui will help you, in the way it helped Mrs. Lange and has helped thousands of others, during the past 40 years. Ask for, and insist on, Cardui.
