THAT COUGH IS ONE CAUSE FOR ALARM

Get Rid of It by Taking Cheney's Before It Turns Into Something Worse

Does that hacking cough worry you because it hangs on so? Really it is a cause for worry, for if you don't get rid of it you may find yourself the victim of a far more serious malady.

Thus it would be worse than foolish to let it go on, getting worse and worse, without taking the easiest and quickest method of putting an end to the trouble and so save yourself from what might turn out to be a very serious complication.

Suppose you go to the drug store and get a bottle of Cheney's Expecto-rant and begin taking a teaspoonful every two hours. Keep it up and you'll find that by tomorrow the cough will have almost entirely disappeared and in a few days will be completely gone.

The time to get the best of a cough is right at the beginning—when you first notice it. Each day you neglect it only makes it more difficult to pry loose its hold on you. The sooner you begin treatment the sooner you will get over the trouble. Begin now.

Sold by all druggists and in smaller towns by general merchants in 30c and 60c bottles.—Advertisement.

Wilson Buried as All the World Except Germany and Italy Mourns.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD
WOODROW WILSON'S death, which occurred on the morning of Sunday, February 3, cast a shadow of gloom over the entire country. For three days, while the body of the great idealist lay in the family home in Washington, the business of the nation was almost at a standstill, for congress was in recess. On Wednesday afternoon the remains of the twenty-eighth president were laid to rest in the crypt of the National cathedral, and for one minute the nation stood silent and facing the east. Everywhere, in America and in foreign lands, flags were at half staff, and in many cities memorial services were held. It was an impressive tribute to one who, as the years pass, will be given yet greater recognition for his devoted work for humanity.

Only in Germany and Italy was the tribute refused. Germans hate Mr. Wilson's memory because they believe he led them to surrender by false promises. Italians cannot forgive him for his refusal to permit them to grab Fiume and Albania as spoils of war. The German embassy in Washington had the unenviable distinction of being the only one whose flag was not flown at half staff until the afternoon of the funeral. This was in harmony with instructions from Berlin, but it was said in that city that Ambassador Wiedfeldt might be recalled because of the incident.

The services for Mr. Wilson in his home were private, attended only by President Coolidge and the relatives and close friends. Then, through the silent city the funeral procession moved slowly to Mount St. Alban, where stands the unfinished Protestant Episcopal cathedral. In the Bethlehem chapel gathered a throng of notable personages of this and other countries, and all about the altar and the casket were heaped the many floral wreaths, shields and clusters that expressed the sorrow of nations and organizations and individuals. The casket was carried in by three soldiers, three sailors and two marines—the same men who bore the coffin of President Harding last August. Among the honorary pall bearers were former associates of Woodrow Wilson in college and in official life. Bishop Freeman conducted the simple services, the choir sang as recessionals "The strife is over, the battle done, the victory of life is won; the song of triumph is begun." Then, after the chapel had slowly emptied, a slab in the aisle was raised and the casket was lowered into the vault beneath. Accompanied by the members of the family, Mrs. Wilson entered the crypt, and as the final part of the burial service was recited there came from without the music of taps, sounded by Staff Sergeant Witchey of the Third cavalry, on the same bugle he used in sounding taps at the tomb of the Unknown Soldier on Armistice day of 1921. The call was echoed by another bugle far across at the shrine at Arlington.

WHEN the senate resumed its sittings Thursday after the three-day recess the fight to get Secretary of the Navy Denby out of the cabinet was renewed with vigor. The Democrats and some of the insurgent Republicans were determined to pass the resolution asking the President to call for Denby's resignation. That gentleman issued a long defense of his course in relation to the oil leases. "When I came into office," he said, "I was very shortly convinced that the oil reserve lands which had been set aside by congress for the benefit of the navy were being drained by privately owned wells adjoining those reserves. My conviction, that these lands were being drained was based upon a number of reports and statements of those who knew the governmental and other experts."

He told how and why the transfer of the naval oil reserves to the Interior department was made and about the provisions for storage tanks at points where the naval experts thought they should be located. In conclusion he said: "I affirm that the leases were legal and did carry out the expressed will of congress. They prevented the further loss of millions of dollars' worth of oil. They placed oil on the coast and in the Hawaiian islands, where it could be reached quickly in case of emergency. They greatly increased the power of the navy to defend the United States, which in its essence is its principal duty."

Albert B. Fall having refused to testify further before the senate committee on the ground that he might incriminate himself and that the committee had lost its authority to continue the inquiry, the committee decided, on advice of Special Counsel Straw and Pomerene, not to permit him to testify unless he waived immunity. This presages drastic action against Fall later. Subpoenas for many other witnesses were issued and it was said the committee was to bring about further startling disclosures.

William G. McAdoo arrived in Washington and it was understood that he would be given the chance he asked to explain to the committee the nature of the services he gave to Doherty in return for $150,000. No one doubts that those services were entirely legitimate, but McAdoo's best friends do not deny that his candidacy for the presidential nomination has suffered a severe blow. In similar case is Theodore Roosevelt. His connection with the oil affairs was of the slenderest, yet it is said that his gubernatorial boom in New York state is waning fast. Not justice nor fairness, but unreasoning public sentiment rules in both instances.

DAVID LLOYD GEORGE has aroused a lot of animosity by a badly timed interview in which he tells of his recent discovery of "a secret compact" signed in April, 1919, between Woodrow Wilson and former Premier Clemenceau concerning the occupation of the Rhineland. He said: "I always have been attacked as the villain in the piece. I have just received the documents from the foreign office. The French now wish to publish an agreement between Mr. Wilson and M. Clemenceau and desire me to agree. This is a little late to ask my consent. I never have seen the documents before."

The British foreign office says Lloyd George's story is inaccurate; that the French government wished to publish a "Yellow Book" containing certain documents connected with the drafting of some articles of the treaty of Versailles and asked the permission of the British government; that the latter as a matter of courtesy first sent the proof sheets to Lloyd George, and that he did not reply or return the proof sheets. M. Clemenceau and Andre Tardieu warmly deny the truth of Lloyd George's statements. The former says: "If Lloyd-George will produce a secret agreement between Wilson and me, I will pay the reparations." Tardieu told the chamber of deputies: "The text that Mr. Wilson accepted on April 20 at 4 p. m. in conversation with M. Clemenceau and myself had been in the hands of Lloyd George as well as those of Mr. Wilson for 15 days. It was the same text that Lloyd George, absent from Paris on the 20th, accepted on the morning of the 22d after a last resistance. The clauses in question became articles 428 to 432 of the treaty of Versailles."

It appears that the former prime minister has done the cause of international amity a disservice and has not displayed his customary tact.

COLLAPSE of the revolt in Mexico seemingly began when the federal forces in a fierce battle took the town of Cordoba from the revolutionists and moved on Vera Cruz. That city, which had been the headquarters of the insurgents, was promptly evacuated by them and occupied by the government troops. De la Huerta and his chief advisers fled on an oil tanker, and are said to be at Merida in Yucatan. The rebel troops retreated toward the Isthmus of Tehuantepec, closely pursued by Obregon's cavalry. The loyal Yagui Indian troops had a prominent part in the battle of Cordoba. Admiral Magruder with the United States cruiser Richmond is at Vera Cruz co-operating in efforts to restore normal conditions there.

VENIZELOS has resigned as premier of Greece, turning that post over to Kafandaris, who formed a new ministry, but the venerable patriot is still dominating the policies of the government. In order that Queen Marie of Rumania may not stir up trouble on the ground that her son-in-law, King George, has not been given a square deal, Kafandaris has rejected the suggestion of Henry Morgenthau that the status of the Glucksburg dynasty be settled before the plebiscite is held to determine the form of government.

PRIME MINISTER MACDONALD of Great Britain says the British recognition of the Russian soviet government is absolute and without quibbles. He also says both Russia and Germany must be admitted to membership in the League of Nations and that he believes France will consent to this. Concerning British relations with France, he says the "hesitating and negative attitude" of the British government has been abandoned. Already, at his suggestion, the French government has agreed to quit its support of the separatists in the Palatinate and the Rhineland. This automatically answers a strong protest sent last week by Berlin to Paris complaining of the French aid to the separatists and demanding that conditions in the Palatinate be re-established in accordance with the treaty. Germany also asks the withdrawal of the customs measures in the occupied territory.

Italy and Russia signed a commercial treaty on Thursday and Mussolini thus recognized the Soviet government. He will soon appoint an ambassador to Moscow.

ALEXIS I RYKOV was elected head of the Russian council of commissars to succeed the late Lenin. The rumors of a split in the soviet government have crystallized into reports that a considerable part of the army, controlled by Trotsky, is in revolt and that it is planning to march on Moscow when the spring thaw sets in early in April. The rebellious garrisons are said to be co-operating with Ukrainian troops that are preparing for a reign of terror and a slaughter of Jews in southwest Russia.

SO FAR as the house ways and means committee is concerned, the new tax bill is completed and ready for reporting to the house this week. The Republican members of the committee agreed to stand together for the Mellon surtax and normal tax rates, and approved definitely the sections embodying a reduction of 25 per cent in individual income taxes payable in 1924 on 1923 incomes. The present jewelry tax rate of 5 per cent is unchanged, but will not apply on articles valued at $40 or less or on watches valued at $60 or less.

THE conference on measures to aid the wheat farmers and banks of the wheat region, under direction of President Coolidge, drew up a program of which these are the salient features:

1. Creation of a $10,000,000 corporation to furnish financial aid to banking and agricultural interests, an undertaking endorsed by the conference of financiers and business men from the Northwest invited by the President.
 2. Passage of the Norbeck-Burness bill providing for an appropriation of $50,000,000 for a loan fund to be administered by the secretary of agriculture and two commissioners for the financing of crop diversification by wheat farmers.
 3. Extension to the end of this calendar year the period in which the War Finance Corporation may make advances for agricultural purposes.
- E. W. Decker, Minneapolis banker, and C. G. Jaffray, president of the Soo title, were suggested as managers of the $10,000,000 corporation, and it was intimated that President Coolidge would increase the tariff duty on wheat from 40 cents to 45 cents a bushel if, as he hoped, the tariff commission should approve such increase.

Villanage?
Villanage was a system of land tenure introduced into England after the Norman Conquest (1066 A. D.) whereby the occupants of the soil were kept in a condition of servitude and were permitted to hold land only on condition of performing menial service for their lord and superior. Such persons were called villans (of or pertaining to the vill), whence is derived the common English word villain. Villanage, although never formally abolished in England, ceased to exist in the sixteenth century.

Yes, Why Not?
"If the world's chemists and the world's engineers would hold annual meetings in a friendly spirit, for the salvation of mankind! If they could agree together that to exercise their ingenuity on the perfecting of destructive agents for the use of governments was a crime; to take money for it a betrayal of their species! If we could have such exchange of international thought as that, then indeed we might hear the rustle of salvation's wings. And—after all—why not?—John Galsworthy."
