Thursday, May 24, 1900.

Yonmans' little Senatorial boom did not amount to much. He will hardly enter the race against Tillman after being snowed under so badly by the convention.

The Palmetto Post figuratively sheds tears over the proposition to remove the dry dock from Port Royal. It seems to realize that the dock will undoubtedly be moved to Charleston.

What real benefit was the Atlanta Exposition of 1894 to the State of Georgia? Has that State increased more in proportion in population, wealth and new industries in the last few years than South Carolina? Give us some facts and figures on the question.

Won't some of these fellows who are clamoring for a State appropriation to the Charleston Exposition tell us what good the people of remote counties in the State will derive from the show? It's easy to say the Exposition will be of great benefit to South Carolina, but we want some facts. Be explicit, please.

The postal frauds in Cuba are a disgrace to our government, and bears out to some extent the charge that the United States only wanted to take charge of the government of the island to provide places for scalawags and carpet baggers. The "days of good stealing" in Cuba sounds much like South Carolina's experience during reconstruction.

We know nothing whatever about the natural advantages of either Port Royal or Charleston as to the location of a dry dock, but if Charleston can be made a naval station, it is the logical situation. Fact is, we could never understand why the government, in the first instance, should locate a naval station at a town of no commercial importance. It now seems settled that Port Royal is to lose the naval station, and Charleston ought to get it.

We are glad to say that from what we can learn a large majority of our people favor the levying of a tax to support a good graded school in Bamberg. Our present tax levy is very small—more than not taxed to death by any manner of means—and the small amount asked for to establish the school will not lay a burden on any one. On next Thursday we shall expect our people to roll up a good majority for the school. Any argument that we could use in its favor would be "thrashing old straw," and we would only add that, in our opinion, it is a matter of self preservation. Every property owner in the district will be benefited by the establishment of a first-class graded school here.

Some people in Washington gave the Boer delegates a public reception at which strong speeches of sympathy with their cause were made. Our government received them kindly, but declined to interfere, and the U. S. Senate very wisely refused them the privileges of the floor, although several Senators spoke in their behalf. In this we endorse the action of the administration. The English people are nearer our flesh and blood than any other nation, and it's as little as we can do to keep our mouths shut about their row with the Boers. They may be wrong, but there is an old story about a man who became rich minding his own business, and the United States is showing good sense in not meddling in affairs where we are not concerned.

We can see no reason why money arising from the levy of taxes on many poor people in the State should be appropriated to a scheme to benefit Charleston. The statement of the Charleston Evening Post that "the exposition will be a great affair for Charleston but it will be a greater for South Carolina, for all that is gained by the city is gained also by the State, and much will come to the State beside that will not be of any direct benefit to the city," is "too absurd a proposition for discussion." Since when did Charleston spend her money for an enterprise that would benefit some other section? If the exposition was not for the benefit of that city her citizens would not put their money into it, and it is simply outrageous to talk of appropriating the people's money for a show to help Charleston. Fact is, we see no good to be derived from the exposition in an advertising way. The business houses of Charleston will be helped by the building going on before and the boarding houses, hotels, street cars, etc., benefited by the crowd attending while the exposition is in progress, and that is about all. If Charleston can make a success of her show, well and good, but we shall fight the idea of a State appropriation to any such scheme, and the people of Bamberg county will back up in it. We have no ill-will against the city, and wish the exposition all success, but it is not right for other counties to pay taxes for an exposition which will not do them a particle of good. Let Charleston have her exposition, but let her people who are to reap the benefits foot the bills.

PEACE AND UNITY.

In an editorial in the State newspaper last Thursday morning about the work of the State convention we find the following:

We are sorry the occasion has arisen, but since it has, we are compelled to state our mind in regard to the attack made by our friend Mr. L. W. Yonmans on Senator Tillman. It was a grave mistake, and if Mr. Yonmans had consulted his friends in advance we are sure they would have told him so and discouraged the utterance. Our opinion of B. Tillman is pretty well known. We do not love him, do not admire him. We would like him, for State reasons, for reasons antedating 1890, to put himself in the wrong, to make himself subject to just censure by the Democracy of South Carolina. But—truth is truth—we have to admit, when put to it, that his course in the United States senate, while subject at times to just criticism of language and methods, has been representative of the Democracy of South Carolina and has expressed what was in the hearts of the people and what is in the conviction and conscience of this newspaper. We are sorry that an enemy of ours has thus disarmed us, but it is true that he has, and since the issue is raised, we must admit it. We would give a good deal to have B. R. Tillman take the record of John L. McLaurin. We would enjoy pickpocketing him as he has pickpocketed others. But we are denied this pleasure. We cannot abandon our own opinions because Tillman represents them. Tillman in the senate has represented, on the whole, our convictions, and we must admit the fact. We have piled up against him many reasons for the best vote we can give. South Carolina, whatever his motives, he has been faithful to his trust.

There is not much more to say. Senator Tillman, in consonance with an old habit of his, accused the newspapers of a "conspiracy of silence" regarding his course in congress. The State has printed everything concerning him which has been sent out by the Associated Press, a concern which has been most favorable to him than otherwise. It has not chosen to keep a Washington correspondent to puff him or his colleagues; it is not and will not be the organ of any man. It has not chosen to conceal the best vote we can give nor every expression of his—it does not regard that as necessary or desirable. But it is engaged in no "conspiracy of silence" against him, and it can on occasion do him justice.

Editor Gonzales has been an unrelenting fighter since 1890, and the one man in South Carolina whom he preferred to defeat above all others was B. R. Tillman. Perfect harmony characterized the convention, and now one may thoroughly believe that the day of political tolerance has dawned in South Carolina. We must confess to surprise at such remarks from the State, but the surprise is an agreeable one.

An Epidemic of Whooping Cough.
Last winter during the epidemic of whooping cough my children contracted the disease, having severe coughing spells. We had used Chamberlain's Cough Remedy very successfully, and our children naturally turned to it at that time and found it relieved the cough and effected a complete cure.—JOHN E. CLIFFORD, Proprietor, Norwood House, Norwood, N. Y. This remedy is for sale by all druggists and medicine dealers.

Beckham is Governor.

WASHINGTON, May 21.—The United States supreme court today decided the Kentucky governorship case in favor of Democratic Gov. Beckham in both the quo warranto and the equity proceedings. For want of jurisdiction the court dismissed the writ of error from the Kentucky court of appeals. The opinion was handed down by Chief Justice Fuller, and a vigorous dissenting opinion was delivered by Justice Harlan, the only one to advocate reversal of the Kentucky court's decision. Justices Brewer, Brown, and McKenna also dissented from portions of the opinion.

In dismissing the writ of error the chief justice said the court should be the last to overstep the bounds limiting its own jurisdiction, and that in the determination of cases of this character, contests for State offices must necessarily be settled by the political branch of the government. That branch had acted in the Kentucky case when the general assembly took jurisdiction. There was no appeal from the assembly's decision which was favorable to Goebel and Beckham, except to the tribunal of the people, which tribunal, the chief justice said, was always in session. He also said the case was purely a State case—that Kentucky was in the full possession of its faculties; was a member of the Union, and that there was no emergency at this time calling for interference of the general government to enforce constitutional guarantees or to put down domestic violence.

"For more than 100 years the constitution of Kentucky has provided that contested elections for governor and lieutenant governor shall be determined by the general assembly."

"The highest court of the State has often held, and in the present case has again declared, that under these constitutional provisions the power of the general assembly to determine the result is exclusive, and that its decision is not open to judicial review. Many of the States have similar constitutional provisions and similar statutes."

EAGLE POND, May 26.
I had always imagined that this little body of water received its name as other local appellations are made, because of the presence near it in some remote period of the past of those cruel and rapacious birds, which some stupidly ignorant blunder in ornithological truth selected as the emblem of this great and free American nation. My surprise can be imagined, therefore, when at the annual picnic of the Govan Graded School, held here on Saturday last, I was informed by a gentleman well versed in local nomenclature that the place takes its name from a certain Colonel Eagle, who owned all this country round about previous to its formation, and in the early days of the republic. Colonel Eagle, so tradition says, was a very rich man, and, besides owning leagues of fertile land, was also the master of a hundred or more slaves who tilled his wide domain. He lived in a fine mansion which crowned the summit of the wooded hill which is now the picnic ground. On a then level strip of land stretching away from the base of this hill was situated his stables and other outbuildings, his horse and cow lots, his sheep fold and pigsty, and beyond there a row of trim cabins—the quarters of his black slaves. The clear, cold waters of the pond now ripple over the site, and I am told that in the centre of the little lake there is practically no bottom, and myriads of fish disport where once gambolled the frisky lamb, the tricky mule, the clumsy kine, and the happy negro. In the space of a few seconds the transformation was made, and what was one day firm land became a bottomless pond of water. Somewhere about 1781 this section of country was convulsed by a terrific earthquake shock, more devastating than that which swept through here thirteen years ago. As the result of this seismic wave the bottom dropped out of the populous, building covered plain, and Eagle pond was formed. It is not related whether the negroes, the kine, the mules, the horses and the pigs were also engulfed, but it is to be hoped that there was a warning tremor of the earth, and that all escaped in safety to higher ground. The course of the earthquake can easily be traced for miles by means of a chain of similar "sinks" some of which contain water, while others are mere depressions in the ground. It is probable that the water comes from some gigantic underground lake, or possibly a river, for there is neither outlet or inlet to the pond, drought rarely effects it, and it is only after continued heavy rains that its waters rise and overflow its banks. The water is pure, and cold, and limpid, and while other varieties of fish are found there in abundance, I am told that trout cannot live in its depths. So much for Eagle Pond and its strange, weird history.

There was a very fine turnout at the picnic, and from random talks that I had with the farmers present, I learned several new things. For instance, I had demonstrated to my satisfaction the fact that an ever-bearing mulberry tree, ten years old, will fatten a hog to killing size and weight with the addition of a little corn just before killing time, and an intermediate pasturage on a field of peas and pindars. The mulberry gives a fine flavor to the pork, and as the tree is a hardy one, and will begin bearing at two or three years of age, it would pay our farmers to set out mulberry groves. Sheep will thrive well in this section of the country; they require but little care, except at lambing time, their wool is a staple and always saleable product, and because of the mildness of our winters "Spring lambs" can be brought to a marketable size and weight at a time when, in the Northern markets, they will command prices that will pay richly. I have talked sheep farming to many of our planters, and am usually met, when I urge the establishment of a fold and flock, with the stereotyped objection:

"There are too many worthless dogs in South Carolina to make sheep farming pay."

Then, because of lessons learned elsewhere, I combat this argument with a piece of intelligence which may be news to many of my readers. Sheep and goats will fraternize and herd together, and if they are reared in companionship from lamb and kid age up will become staunch friends. The sheep is timid and falls an easy prey to a mutton-loving canine. The goat is a fighter from "way back, and a muscular old "Billy" is more than a match for the most blood-thirsty sheep-killing dog that ever lived. Take a flock of one hundred say, one-fourth being goats—nannies or billys—and the three-quarter sheep portion will be immune from the fangs of the mutton-eating cur, for the goats will battle for their woolly brethren till the last rattle out of a box, and woe be it to the canine who tangles a flock of sheep thus protected. There is very little profit in the common goat, but if a farmer will start his flock of sheep guardians with native nannies and Angora billys, he will in a short time, grade up his stock until, as fleece producers, they will become more profitable than the sheep. It is true that sheep thrive best in mountainous countries, and are more subject to disease in low, flat, moist sections like ours, but sheep farming has been made to pay in South Carolina in the past and can be made to pay again if it is begun and followed intelligently.

Last week I had occasion to make a long drive among the Edisto swamps here Midway. I passed through hundreds of acres of grass-carpeted savannahs, upon which large herds of meat cattle could be profitably grazed. Triumph of Law in Williamsburg.
KINGSTREE, May 21.—Court convened here today, Judge Gage presiding. The first case was against the negro Hamlet McGill for rape, or attempted rape, on a nine-year-old white girl, an account of which has already been published in the papers. He was already defensed by Mr. J. Hirsch, assisted by Capt. Kelly, both of whom were appointed by the court to do so. Solicitor Wilson conducted the prosecution in his usual forcible style, and the case was given to the jury late this afternoon. They were out about 30 minutes and returned a verdict of guilty. The negro seemed to be perfectly indifferent to the court proceedings, and I do not believe he yet realizes the awful reality that is before him. He was sentenced to be hanged Friday, June 15th. He never moved a muscle when the death sentence was passed on him and remained stoical and immovable to the last.

LOUISVILLE, May 21.—Gov. Taylor late this afternoon issued the following order: To Gen. D. R. Collier, Frankfort, Ky.

The supreme court of the United States having decided in favor of Mr. Beckham, nothing now remains to be done except to dismiss the militia and surrender your office to your successor, appointed by Mr. Beckham. You are, therefore, directed to at once dismiss the militia and to surrender your office to your successor as soon as the mandate of the supreme court is filed, or sooner if you wish. Tender the militia my kindest regards and sincere thanks for their brave, manly and patriotic service. W. S. TAYLOR.

TAYLOR MOVES OUT.

FRANKFORT, Ky., May 21.—A force of men was employed at the executive mansion tonight packing up the private effects of the Taylor family, who tomorrow will leave for Louisville. While there will be no inauguration, there, will be a Democratic jubilation later. The demonstrations here were kept up until a late hour tonight. A public meeting at the court house was addressed by Gov. Beckham, Adj. Gen. Castleman and others.

The Taylor troops, at 4 p. m., relinquished possession of the property they have been guarding since the assassination and left Frankfort tonight.

Gov. Beckham gave out a long interview tonight, expressing gratification at the "triumph of law and order over lawlessness and desperation." His highest ambition as governor, he says, will be to restore law and order in the State.

The Republican State officials, other than governor and lieutenant governor, are holding a conference here tonight. Ex-Gov. Bradley says the contests over the minor offices will be carried up to the United States supreme court also.
