

EVERY WALK IN LIFE.

A. A. Boyce, a farmer, living three and a half miles from Trenton, Mo., says: "A severe cold settled in my kidneys and developed so quickly that I was obliged to lay off work on account of the aching in my back and sides. For a time I was unable to walk at all, and every makeshift I tried and all the medicine I took had not the slightest effect. My back continued to grow weaker until I began taking Doan's Kidney Pills, and I must say I was more than surprised and gratified to notice the back ache disappearing gradually until it finally stopped."

Doan's Kidney Pills sold by all dealers or mailed on receipt of price, 53 cents per box. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y.

Horse Street Railways.

With the exception of New York, the following cities are the only places in which more than five miles of street railway track are operated by animal power: Hutchinson, Kan., 7 miles; Santa Rosa, Cal., 7 miles; Chicago, Ill., 6 miles; San Francisco, Cal., 5 miles; Arkansas City, Kan., 5 miles; and Tucson, Ariz., 5 miles. The cable, which fifteen years ago had such bright prospects, is now antiquated. There are only two street railways operated exclusively by cable power.

Vaseline.

Everybody knows the great value of this remedy in the household, but everybody does not know that the imitations of it, which some second-class druggists dishonestly palm off on their customers, have little or no value. What should be understood by the public is, that it is not a mere question of comparative value between "Vaseline" and the imitations, but that the imitations do not effect the wonderful healing results of the world-renowned "Vaseline," and that they are not the same thing nor made in the same way. Besides this, many of the imitations are harmful irritant and not safe to use, while Vaseline is perfectly harmless.

Perfect safety, therefore, lies in buying only original bottles and other packages put up by the Chesbrough Manufacturing Co. Attention is called to their Capsicum Vaseline advertised in another column.

The average railway journey in the United States is twenty-eight and one-half miles.

An Old Field Weed. Many seeing that old field weed, the mullein stalk, never consider the good it is accomplishing in curing lung troubles. It presents in Taylor's Cherokee Remedy of Sweet Gum and Mullein the finest known remedy for coughs, croup, colds and consumption.

The lifeboats around the British coast during the last year rescued 680 people.

RIPANS TABULES

Ripans Tabules are the best dyspepsia medicine ever made. A hundred millions of them have been sold in the United States in a single year. Every illness arising from a disordered stomach is relieved or cured by their use. So common is it that diseases originate from the stomach it may be safely asserted there is no condition of ill health that will not be benefited or cured by the occasional use of Ripans Tabules. Physicians know them and speak highly of them. All druggists sell them. The five-cent package is enough for an ordinary occasion, and the Family Bottle, sixty cents, contains a household supply for a year. One generally gives relief within twenty minutes.

CAPSICUM VASELINE

(PUT UP IN COLLAPSIBLE TUBES) An antiseptic for and superior to mustard or any other plaster, and will not blister the most delicate skin. The pain-relieving and curative qualities of this article are well known. It will stop the toothache at once, and relieve headache and sciatica. We recommend it as the best and safest external counter-irritant known, also as an external remedy for pains in the chest and stomach and all rheumatic, neuralgic and gouty complaints. A trial will prove what we claim for it, and it will be found to be invaluable in the household. Many people say "it's the best of all our preparations." Price 15 cts. at all druggists or other dealers, or by sending this amount to us in postage stamps we will send you a tube by mail. No article should be accepted by the public unless the same carries our label, as otherwise it is not genuine. CHESBROUGH MFG. CO., 17 State Street, New York City.

A SERMON FOR SUNDAY

AN ELOQUENT DISCOURSE ENTITLED "DAVID AS A RULER."

The Rev. Dr. Edward B. Thurber, Pastor of the American Church in Paris, France, Describes the Life of the Psalmist From Sheepto to Throne.

PARIS.—The Rev. Dr. Edward B. Thurber preached a sermon in the American church here which has attracted considerable attention. His subject was "David as a Ruler; or, From Sheepto to Throne." The text was taken from I Chronicles xvii: 7: "Thus saith the Lord of Hosts, 'I took thee from the sheepto, even from following the sheep, that thou shouldst be ruler over My people Israel.'" Dr. Thurber said: "What a great distance from the pastures in Bethlehem to the throne in Jerusalem. The contrast between the shepherd boy and the King of Israel is one of the marvels of human history presents us. It is certain that no one is able to bridge such distances without the intervention of assisting conditions and forces. There must be acting factors in the life if the great results are secured. A man becomes a debtor to so much, to his environment, to favoring conditions, to friendly agencies, and sometimes to seemingly adverse circumstances. His own powers are stimulated, directed and assisted toward the good that is to be reached. The American Revolution had something to do in advancing Washington to his position in history; his early education, his ancestry, his religious feeling, the people among whom his lot was cast, were all factors in his career. The French Revolution was the great opportunity which the genius of Napoleon seized, and utilized. Many of our failures to come conspicuously to the front because the times are not ripe for a dramatic career. The wise man studies and understands how varying factors may be made to contribute to his progress and welfare. He comes to know how much depends upon the interest and services of one whom he may seek and serve, and who may seek and serve him. David's own soul called a multitude of agencies into service, for his career and their employment made his history possible, and gave to it that peculiar color and variety which charm us. The stars spoke to him, and through him they speak to us, as his thought and feelings are reported in the music of the psalms, which have been such a solace and inspiration to multitudes since his time. The fields, flowers and forests, the streams and scenes of nature, bird and beast, had their part in the poetry he felt and expressed in a literature that will last as long as language endures. His friendships, that ideal one with Jonathan, his associations with all classes and conditions of men, give us a unique and interesting personality. You cannot understand David until you take into consideration the nature of the tenderest within him, and measure the degree of the influences which entered into the formation of his character and career. There is a large mixture of contrasting and contradictory tendencies in him. These are manifested through the years of his eventful history. He was like a city that is being builded. The original low, marshy places must be drained and filled up, rough paths must give place to broad, straight, rutted roads, will be superseded by well constructed houses, palaces and public buildings; the crude and artistic will be replaced by the work of architects and artists, before the city can become beautiful and healthful. Through all the period of construction there will be present the contrasts and contradictions that mar and qualify the glory of the city. There are two things which would be apparent to a candid critic: that progress being made, and that the issue of endeavor will be sure and satisfactory. This contrast is presented through the course of David's life. If we look at some features which come before us conspicuously we will judge him severely; if we look at others we will say how admirable; and at the same time we will perceive that his way is onward from the sheepto to the throne. The man David is as variable as a child that feels his weakness and need, and yet stands before his father, that he may be taught and led, and again he is as haughty as a man who counts no one his superior. He upholds truth and righteousness as essential to manhood, and then under the influence of fear he deceives King Achish, who has befriended him. He shows a wonderful spirit of forbearance and forgiveness toward his enemy, Saul, and then he puts his friend Uriah to the peril of certain death. His love for Jonathan is wonderful and ideal, and then he yields himself to degrading loves. He needs to be taken out of these conditions of selfishness, sensuality, pride and the evil of a wrong life, if he was to become "a man after God's own heart."

We will miss all, however, unless we know about the foreign influence which pervaded, arranged, employed and directed all factors and conditions which entered into and contributed toward David's career. Without this dominating influence Jerusalem would never have been related with Bethlehem. We must also remember that the fruition of a great character would have been impossible without the presence of God. While all this is true we must bear in mind even the divine power did not contradict the choice of David or force his voluntary action. God dealt with him as a free and intelligent soul. He was called to enter into partnership with God, and he in turn prayed that God would be with him. He cried out for the living God, as the thirsty land cries out for the life-giving water, that it may blossom as the rose, and rejoice in the beauty and bounty of fruitfulness. It is with such an interpretation and qualification that we listened to, and understand, what is intended when God is represented as saying, "I took thee from the sheepto, even from following the sheep, that thou shouldst be ruler over My people Israel." God entered into and interested Himself in David's life, even as He would in our lives. God directed and utilized circumstances, made use of every opportunity in the interests of his progress. He made use of discipline, disappointments and apparent failures, of his sins and errors; in no way condoning them, but with a purpose to make them serve Him and work for David's promotion. Life takes on larger meaning, and that meaning is better understood when God is in our life. The little fountain up the slope of some Alpine peak has its significance, but when we make its ceaseless flow and contribution with the Rhine, which gives a waterway to a large country, it seems more important to us. When the Rhine flows onward, bearing the contribution of a multitude of rivulets and rivers through a wide domain, and gives its varied service "to the wealth and welfare of an empire, we give the name of a river larger confluence. It means much more to us. The coming of the King of Italy to France and Paris is something more than a personal visit. The King brings the good will of a kingdom. He represents the desire of rapprochement of two nations into reconciliation and friendship. The decoration of a city, the splendor of illumination, the march of soldiers, the manifested good will of a people, are the emphatic expression of the value of fraternity between nations.

These and recent movements of a similar kind are the utterances of that longing for the federation of nations in a spirit of adjustment which will make for the prosperity and peace of all people. The movements in themselves may seem simple, but they are not child's play, when we recognize what large designs and hopes they express.

This little life of ours takes on greatness and grandeur when we recognize that God enters into it, with His wisdom. David was to carry out the fact and sense of the Divine Presence that brought to David inspiration and strength. We take our inspiration partly from ideals, but also from co-operative agencies that help us to translate ideals into life. God took David from humble beginnings and led him away, little by little, from the sheepto toward the throne. The boy was to come into possession of thoughts, ideals and purposes that would force him onward from point to point; for many things are to be expected from the company a man keeps, the friends he chooses, the great souls he permits to influence and help him. David chose God, God chose him, and a fellowship was formed that determined a career. How much is to be expected from such an association! This was a real presence. It is a real presence which God desires us to know and realize. One says of a great fact, that we are usually practicing the presence of God and lives under Him to Christ." The doctrine concerning the Holy Spirit is a teaching about the real presence of God with man. The words of our Lord in the parable of the vine and the branches represent the relation between Him and His followers. It is more than any earthly love, fellowship or friendly relation. How much these contribute to make our lives purer, better and longer. You and I ever more think we could have been, because we have had those who loved us, and gave to us the ministry of their love. How much it means when the soul is related with God by His abiding presence! How much more comes out of our lives because of this union! Mr. Hurley in his remarkable biography: "Life is a great and noble calling; not a mean and groveling task, that we are to shuffle through as we can, but an elevated and lofty destiny." The man begins more fully to understand himself and the good he should strive to reach when he admits to his mind and heart a stream of new perceptions, feelings and influences which must come, when he allows God to take him out of the crude, the sinful and lead him forward. This God shapes life and destiny. The great poet represents Hamlet as taking in this thought and saying: "Let us know, our indiscretions sometimes serve us well, when our deep plots do pall; and that should teach us. There's a divinity that shapes our ends, Rough hew them how we will." Were it not for the intervention of the divine wisdom and will, all of our ends and purposes would fail, just for the lack of the divine goodness and power which they require! David was only rich and sure of the best, as God was with him; this presence involved a glory, blessedness and fruition beyond the measure of man's mind. The shepherd boy, with all his limitations, is so reinforced by God that he comes to royal position and power. This divine presence is not only with David in the sheepto, but continues through the long way of his entire and chequered career, toward the good which is in God's thought. The Heavenly Father never left or forsook him. There were great difficulties to face, such as belong to every strenuous, religious life, and they needed to be surmounted. Many a man may climb before a mountain, but one must stand the sleep ascent and make use of the means that are to be taken if he reaches the height and the other side. The difficulties which David must meet and master are great. There were episodes and experiences in his life which to human view seemed to say: "Give up expectation and endeavor, for you cannot win the crown." It is true that he had been called of God and anointed by the prophet Samuel when he was a lad, but he afterward left the sheepto, so that he became a tried and successful soldier; the plaudits of the multitude had rung in his ears, but his apparent success excited the anger and envy of Saul. David became an outlaw, a hunted fugitive, and his life was in direct peril. How could he become a king! Yet God was with him; this was his assurance of success. God was with him in his darkest night, in his greatest distress, in his most difficult and dangerous experiences, when friends were hopeless and no words of assurance and cheer came from any human source, but amid all this he was making progress, amid the labyrinth of a mysterious providence, toward the throne he was to occupy. This, then, is the word for us to-day. The God of David will be with every one who commits and covenants with Him. In His wisdom we shall be wise; in His strength we shall be strong. In His love we shall find our love will live and grow. When He is our life we will know how much life means. In the outlook which Jesus Christ presents to us we will know that we are going forward to a wisdom, love and life that are immortal. God was with me, Him I have known in all of the relations of life where His presence can be of service. That of which He desires of every one of us is a more unrestricted yielding to His presence and power.

Without humility religious progress is impossible. Pride is the destruction of the principle of progress; it whispers to us continually that we are all that could be desired, or it points our attention to high positions and ambitious efforts beyond the scope of other men. Yet the true growth of the soul is not to be measured by our attempting many extraordinary duties, but by our power of doing simple duties well, and humility, when it reigns in the soul, carries this principle into practice. It bids us halt, and to us hard or distasteful work, by doing it as a matter of principle. It enriches common acts of neighborly and social kindness with that intensity of moral effort which is due to every act of which the deepest moving power is the love of God.—F. D. Huntington, D. D.

Honoring the Father. I saw a beautiful thing not long ago. It was a brilliant, successful man, widely known, paying honor and giving loving attention to his father. The father had always been a man of humble parts; he had never been known as a brilliant or particularly successful man. But he has been a good man, and a good father, and, now that the son has come to honor, there is nothing that he can do too good or show his gratitude to and respect for his father. It is a beautiful sight.—Sunday School Times.

"Keeping Still." Many a man whose life has had in it a good deal of trouble and opposition would have saved much if he had learned in his childhood the lesson of "keeping still." The hard word hurts it will not make it easier to make an angry reply. If you do not answer at all, it stops right there; if your tongue cannot be restrained, you know that the rest may be. Patience sometimes serves a man better than courage. You will find again and again that the way to keep out of trouble is to keep still.—The Christian.

ITALY'S CORK FORESTS.

Almost Completely Destroyed—Spain the World's Chief Resource.

The cork industry, which is quite an important one, will receive a fresh impetus, a new process having been discovered by which large pieces can be made out of small ones, so that cork waste can be utilized in large quantities. This is all the more important, as the price of cork increases steadily, both on account of the growing demand and the lessened supply of the raw material. Formerly Italy was a large producer of cork, but a great part of the splendid cork-oak forests has already been destroyed. In some provinces—as, for instance, in Calabria—the trees have been felled and used for charcoal making; in other provinces they have been cut down on account of their high potash contents. Larger forests of cork-oak trees are existing in Spain, Portugal, France, Algeria and Tunis. None are found in Asia Minor and only rarely in Greece and European Turkey, although the climates seem to be favorable for their growth. The area covered by these forests is estimated at 300,000 hectares (741,300 acres) in Portugal, 250,000 hectares (617,750 acres) in Spain, 280,000 hectares (691,800 acres) in Algeria and only 80,000 hectares (197,750 acres) remain in Italy. While Spain still furnishes 32,800 tons of cork annually, the production of Italy has decreased to 4,000 tons. The value of the Spanish exports of cork amount to $6,000,000 per year, against less than $250,000 for Italy. Only Sicily and Sardinia are still producing cork to any considerable extent in Italy, while the former great oak forests of Calabria are almost totally destroyed. It seems incomprehensible that this destruction has been permitted. The trees easily reach an age of 200 years. They yield cork in the 30th year and continue to do so every seven years. Seventy-five years ago the English demand for cork was supplied exclusively from Italy. The destruction of the remaining forests goes on uninterruptedly, and nobody seems to try to prevent it or to plant new forests, in spite of the fact that Italy possesses the most favorable climate and soil for the cork-oak, the most favorable conditions for its growth being found in the volcanic soil of the peninsula.—Detroit Free Press.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured by local applications as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever. "Fossil Wonders of the West."

The Century will publish in the near future a series of papers on "Fossil Wonders of the West" by Henry Fairfield Osborn, Da Costa professor of zoology in Columbia University, paleontologist of the United States Geological Survey, and curator of paleontology in the American Museum of Natural History. The articles will treat of recent discoveries and advances in our knowledge of the ancient history of America, based on the explorations and rich finds of the American Museum in the Far West, and it is promised that the facts presented will be in the nature of a revelation to the scientific world.
