

A SERMON FOR SUNDAY

A BEAUTIFUL DISCOURSE BY THE REV. DR. HOWARD DUFFIELD.

Subject: Heart's Ease—The Iron Has Never Entered the Soul of Those Who Expect Happiness to Be a Matter of Personal Choice.

New York City.—"Heart's Ease" was the subject of the sermon Sunday morning in the Old First Presbyterian Church, Fifth avenue and Twelfth street, by the Rev. Dr. Howard Duffield, pastor. The text was from John, xiv: 1 (Revised Version): "Let not your heart be troubled. Ye believe in God, believe also in Me."

Let not your heart be troubled? How could they believe in God and yet not believe in the world and yet not believe in the world alone. They were not men versed in the wisdom of the schools, and they were to be the teachers of novel, profound and revolutionary truths. They were impulsive, undisciplined and without social influence. Hitherto in every hour of difficulty a true friend had stood at their side to blunt the sting of their grief. Now they must address themselves unfriended to a mission such as men never attempted, and they must enter upon their adventure broken with bereavement and crushed with a consciousness of helplessness. How could they be otherwise than "troubled"? It is simple mockery to say to the heart which is strugling with the mystery of pain and loneliness that it should be "troubled."

Let not your heart be troubled? Either you have not measured my grief or the iron has never entered your soul. But he who spoke this sentence had taken the exact measure of the woe of those to whom he spoke, and he knew the wormwood tang of sorrows blackest draught. His acquaintance with grief was life-long. He knew grief not as a casual passerby upon the streets. He knew grief not as we know some neighbor by occasional sight. He was the intimate and inseparable associate of that grim companion. It was just because he knew the secret sorrow, its strange ministry and its wondrous outcome, that when he saw his friends standing at the threshold of the very life which he himself had lived, a life wrought out in loneliness and suffering and defeat and agonizing life of utter sacrifice, he would lift up his voice and say: "Let not your heart be troubled. Let your life be as the storm-swept sea, whose surface the tempest lashes into fury, while calm eternal and untroubled abides in the unfathomable depths."

Let not your heart be troubled? Others may be the heirs of unrest, who with their backs to the source of life, look out upon the ever lengthening track of their own shadow. They travel the way of life unattended. They carry the burden of life unhelped. They toil at the work of life unaided. They stand on the brink unfriended. A brood of troubles nests within such hearts. But for you, believing in God as your Father, and in Christ as your Saviour, life is as a journey home. A few more days of sun and sunshine; a few more wondrous passings of winter into spring; a few more hard endeavors in the seed plot of mortal soil; a few more hot strokes upon the field of earthly battle—then the flight of all shadows, and the blessed vision of the face of God.

Religion at Home. The religion of Christ is intensely practical. It is intended to be manifested in our home life, just as faithfully as at church. This is why we can generally obtain a true conception of the soundness of a man's faith by spending a few days in his own home. Many a man has a reputation for piety, when his home life will not bear close inspection. It is in the hum-drum duties of home that we are tried. The way we meet the everyday worries is a better test of our religion than the way we behave in church. It is comparatively easy to be sweet-tempered when we have nothing to vex us, but to keep our faces bright and our hearts light amid the unimpaired labors of weekday life we need to have the spirit of God dwelling in our hearts. Such living is necessary. Not only is it possible, but it is necessary for us if we would live up to our responsibilities. Our Lord expects us to be true to Him in our homes, as well as in church, and we are not fulfilling His commands when we fail to live every hour of every day in accordance with the high standard He has set before us.

It is an inspiring thought that we can take Him with us into the humblest daily duties. The busy housewife, as she goes about her task, making a home bright for those dear to her, is serving the Master just as truly and just as faithfully as the preacher in the pulpit. Let us encourage our hearts with the thought that he who consciously accepts every offering of faithful service of home as well as at church.—George D. Gelvicks.

Duty Above Life. Life is a matter of very small account to anyone in comparison with duty doing, whether a man realizes this truth or not. Whatever is worth living for is worth dying for, if dying be an incident to its pursuing. When the Roman General, selfless, was named against the danger of his returning from Egypt to Italy, to meet new trouble in his own land, his heroic answer was: "It is a small matter that I should move forward and die. It is too great a matter that I should take one step backward and live." Life is never well used when it is held dearer than duty. He who would tell a lie in order to live is willing to pay a great deal larger price for his life than that life is worth to himself or to others.—H. C. Trumbull.

Transfigured Beauty. Let our temper be under the rule of the love of Jesus. He cannot alone curb it.—He can make us gentle and patient. Let the vow, that not an unkind word to others shall ever be heard from our lips, be laid trustfully at His feet. Let the gentleness that makes us take offense at His all ready to excuse, to think and hope the best, mark our intercourse with all. Let our life be one of self-sacrifice, always studying the welfare of others, finding our highest joy in blessing others. By His grace the most commonplace life can be transfigured with the brightness of a heavenly beauty, as the infinite love of a divine nature shines out through our frail humanity.

Eternity can bring us no nearer to God than we are now. The great secret of peace and of power is mastered by him who comes to know that the comradeship with God, which shall become visible hereafter, is actual now. The pain, the strife, the wrong that burn this truth into the tablets of one's consciousness are disguised angels.

Believe also in Me. The realization of God that brings help to human hearts can never be grasped as a practical truth in any other way. A personal acquaintance with Christ carries with it a knowledge of the personality of God. All formulas are sorry makeshifts. Whoever is argued into faith may be argued out of it. If the foundation of your belief is a form of words, it will be overturned whenever a neater and more masterly phrase than yours is framed. "No man cometh to the Father, but by Me." By the way, the philosophical analysis one may arrive at some concept of God as "a power not ourselves that makes for righteousness." Through the labyrinth of speculative thought one may reach the conclusion that God is the unknown quantity in the equation of the universe. Along the path of a logical syllogism one may deduce the idea of God as "an absentee God sitting by and watching the universe go." But through Christ alone can one learn to define God in terms of fatherhood. In Christ alone can one learn that the earth life is a disciplinary process—a curriculum of parental love—its defects, its catastrophes, its pains, its mystery, its perpetual sacrifice, all energies under the control of infinite beneficence and compelled to achieve its purpose, for He, the best beloved of the Father, had a path of tears which ended at the cross, but from the cross He shed a light upon a path by which men find their way to the heart of God. From Him we learn that God holds this noor stricken world in the embrace of an inexhaustible sympathy and that He purposes to crown the fragmentary life of men with a divine completeness and symmetry. Christ is daily translated into the forms of our mortal life and expressed in the forms of our human experience. There is no seminary of theology like that on Calvary.

Let not your heart be troubled. Your mind may be, but your mind will never bring you into touch with God. If we feel after God we will lose Him. The relationship between God and ourselves is a tie of love, and true love is not the offspring of logic. The link between God and ourselves is that between father and child, and the mystery of parenthood and sonship evades speech and is measured only by experience.

Let not your heart be troubled. It is oftentimes saddened. It may be spent with grief—but let it not be palsied with melancholy. Let your life be as the storm-swept sea, whose surface the tempest lashes into fury, while calm eternal and untroubled abides in the unfathomable depths. Let not your heart be troubled. Others may be the heirs of unrest, who with their backs to the source of life, look out upon the ever lengthening track of their own shadow. They travel the way of life unattended. They carry the burden of life unhelped. They toil at the work of life unaided. They stand on the brink unfriended. A brood of troubles nests within such hearts.

But for you, believing in God as your Father, and in Christ as your Saviour, life is as a journey home. A few more days of sun and sunshine; a few more wondrous passings of winter into spring; a few more hard endeavors in the seed plot of mortal soil; a few more hot strokes upon the field of earthly battle—then the flight of all shadows, and the blessed vision of the face of God.

A Cure For Trouble. There is no better way of forgetting one's troubles than by attempting to relieve some one else who is in trouble. The more one thinks of his own troubles, the more power over him those troubles gain. When he is turned away for a time from himself in the effort to help another, personal trouble may perish from lack of attention and sustenance. However hard our own case may be, there is some one near us whose case is harder. In ministering to him, or in trying to give him comfort, we are likely to lighten his burden and our own.—Sunday-School Times.

How to Gain Strength. Power is gained rather by the effort to give to others than by the effort to get from others. Of the supreme being who was ever on earth, it was said that he was not to be ministered unto, but to serve. Whoever has the spirit of Christ gains strength in giving strength to others.

JUDGE LEWIS DEAD.

Ex-Justice of Georgia Supreme Court and Man Who First Nominated Bryan for the Presidency.

Judge Hal T. Lewis died at his home in Greensboro, Ga., Thursday morning after a long illness. For several months past he has been confined to his room on account of ill health.

Judge Lewis was the son of Col and Mrs. Mills W. Lewis, of Siloam, Green county, Georgia. He was educated in the common schools of the county, and was later sent to Emory College, where he graduated in 1870 with honors. Shortly after leaving college he studied law, was admitted to the bar and removed to Atlanta, where he opened a law office. Later he formed a partnership with Edgar H. Orr, who is now justice of the peace there. He was also assistant state school commissioner under Commissioner Orr. Before practicing law, however, he taught school at Clinton, in Jones county, for two years.

After remaining in Atlanta for several years he moved back to Greensboro, where he practiced law until he was appointed associate justice of the supreme court. In 1896 he was elected as a delegate to the national democratic convention from the state at large. He sprang into national fame at the Chicago convention by nominating William J. Bryan for the presidency of the United States. His speech caused a great scene in the auditorium, and there was a stampede for Bryan.

In 1897, when Judge Spencer R. Atkinson retired from the supreme court, Governor W. Y. Atkinson appointed Judge Lewis to succeed him. He was later elected for the regular term of six years without opposition. In 1880 Judge Lewis married Miss Hallie Poulain, of Green county. Three children survive Judge Lewis, two sons and one daughter.

Judge Lewis resigned from the supreme court last October a year ago on account of failing health.

"LILY WHITES" SCORED.

Sub-Committee of National Afro-American Council Takes Action.

The sub-committee of the National Afro-American Council, at a meeting in Washington Thursday, decided to hold the next meeting of the council at St. Louis, September 4, 1904, and appointed a committee of five to appear before the platform committee of the next national republican convention to urge that it take vigorous action in reference to the practical denial in a number of states of suffrage to the negro.

The following resolutions were adopted:

"We are opposed to the unrepublican principle of drawing the color line in the republican party, which has been inaugurated in certain states to the detriment of the party and the injury of some of the most uncompromising supporters of its policy in the past, and we believe that the proposed reduction of representation in the national republican convention would be an injustice which the party should not perpetrate.

"We take this opportunity to express our gratitude to the president for daring at all times to stand up for impartial justice and the manhood rights guaranteed by the constitution and the laws based thereon. We have never asked special consideration in any matter affecting the common rights of citizens, and sincerely believe that he has not sought to give us such. He has treated us just like other citizens; we have never asked for more and will not be satisfied with less."

A resolution was adopted requesting the senate to confirm the nomination of Dr. Crum as collector of the port of Charleston, S. C.

ADMIRAL SCHLEY ENDORSES PE-RU-NA.

Pe-ru-na Drug Co., Columbus, Ohio:

Gentlemen: "I can cheerfully say that Mrs. Schley has taken Pe-ru-na and I believe with good effect." W. S. SCHLEY, Washington, D. C.

ADMIRAL SCHLEY, one of the foremost notable heroes of the Nineteenth Century. A name that starts terror in the heart of every Spaniard. A man of steady nerve, clear head, undaunted courage and prompt decision.

Approached by a friend recently, his opinion was asked as to the efficacy of Peruna, the national catarrh remedy. Without the slightest hesitation he gave this remedy his endorsement. It appeared on later conversation that Peruna has been used in his family, where it is a favorite remedy.

Such endorsements serve to indicate the wonderful hold that Peruna has upon the minds of the American people. It is out of the question that so great and famous a man as Admiral Schley could have any other reason for giving his endorsement to Peruna than his positive conviction that the remedy is all that he says it is.

The fact is that Peruna has overcome all opposition and has won its way to the hearts of the people. The natural timidity which so many people have felt about giving endorsements to any remedy is giving way. Gratitude and a desire to help others has inspired thousands of people to give public testimonials for Peruna who heretofore would not have consented to such publicity.

Never before in the annals of medicine has it happened that so many men of national and international reputation have been willing to give unqualified and public endorsements to a proprietary remedy. No amount of advertising could have accomplished such a result. Peruna has won on its own merits. Peruna cures catarrh of whatever phase or location in the human body. That is why it receives so many notable and unique endorsements.

Address The Peruna Drug Mfg Co., Columbus, Ohio, for free literature on catarrh.

Money Invested in Printing.

The average capital of those engaged in the printing business is $12,574; the average value of their products is $14,569. These figures compared with those of a previous decade show that in a period of ten years an increased capital is required to produce the same or even a smaller value of products; this is largely caused by an increase in wages and a decrease in working hours. In 1850 a compositor in New York received $9 per week; ordinary job compositors now receive $19.50 per week, and operators on machines from $24 to $27, depending on the time of day or night they take their shift. In the opinion of many large operators, the number of wage earners has actually increased, rather than diminished. The introduction of machine composition has been of decided benefit to the employe, offering a new field for endeavor. There are few unemployed men in the printing trade, as is shown by the fact that when in 1900 the Typographical Union was called upon to supply 150 men for a special job of city printing, only 100 could be obtained, and these with difficulty.—From Scientific American's Special Number on "Modern Aids to Printing."
