Wright Insists on Having His Jo Whiskers Right on Tombstone.

BARBER'S BILL IS $403.

Wealthiest Man In Putnam, Conn., Dreams He Cannot Enter Heaven Unless His Graveyard Bust Looks More Like Him.

Because he dreamed that he could not enter heaven unless with his beard parted on the bust on his $1,500 monument Phineas Gardner Wright, said to be the wealthiest man in Putnam, Conn., has had a sculptor trim the stone whiskers at an expense of $400.

Wright, who is a bachelor, seventyeight years old, erected the monument on his family plot in Grove cemetery three years ago. It attracted much attention because of the line he had inscribed upon the granite shaft just below his bust, "Going, but know not where." At the same time he had an immense grave dug and bricked up, he said, so that the earth would not crowd him and he would have enough room in which to turn over and move about, and with flat stones at the base

"Them's true words," said Wright, referring to the odd inscription, "but there ain't many folk what's got the honesty or the courage to say the same The negro fired several shots after thing." A short time ago Wright took the notion of having a gas pipe placed in the ground above his grave so that there would be no difficulty in finding the flat stone cover, but he concluded that people would think he was trying to get air after he had been buried, so he is having a five foot steel flagstaff, with a banner bearing his name, made to take its place. He has placed demijohns of gin and whisky in the grave so that he will not be lonely.

Wright's mother and sister are buried in the plot, and their names, birth and and it is said that the negroes up leath dates, with those of his father, who died at Stockton, Cal., in 1849 while gold hunting, are inscribed on the monument. Wright was born at the purpose of raising a row and Fitzwilliam, N. H., April 3, 1829, and being enabled to do damage under two years later his parents came to Connecticut. They were poor, and

PHINEAS G. WRIGHT AND HIS TOMBSTONE.

Then he carried the hod for 75 cents by buying lumber. He retired ten years ago after he had amassed a forreal estate and mortgages. Wright Barnett bore a bad reputation for says he was disappointed in love forty

He has provided that after his death this additional inscription shall be placed upon his monument: "Never beat by man, but by woman." Wright lives in a plain house with a niece, Miss Etta Crane, twenty years old, daughter of William Crane, a Hartford manufacturer.

She does the housework, shaves him, cuts his hair and washes his face and hands. She owns a $4,500 farm at Ellington, and Wright has made a will leaving all to her except $2,000 to the Putnam Congregational church, because his mother attended it, and $2,-000 to the Putnam hospital. An old monument, costing $600, which the present one displaced, he has offered to the city for a soldiers' monument, but it has not been accepted.

Wright's occupation is given in the Putnam city directory as "having no business but to mind his own."

Threw Shoes at Congregation.

Daniel Bowers, son of Jacob Bowers, said to be a wealthy farmer of Chester county, Pa., created a panic during the services in Grace Lutheran church. Entering the pulpit, he removed his overcoat and hat and tossed them at the foot of the pulpit. Then he took off his overshoes and flung them across the church. Calmly facing the thunderstruck congregation, he stood with his arms folded. Services were suspended, and it required the efforts of a policeman and several others to get him to the lockup. Physicians declared him demented.

Cremationists Dance to Buy Urns. The Waterbury (Conn.) branch, No. 32, of the Cremation Association of America gave a dance the other night to provide for a sinking fund. At the conclusion of the festivities it was announced enthusiastically by the president that enough cash had been taken in at the door to transform half a dozen members into ashes and buy them fancy urns besides. The announcement was received with cheers. The association will keep on dancing until the future welfare of all the members has been provided for.
