MULLINAX DIES OF WOUNDS.

Greenwood Oil Mill Man Shot by G. W. Long Succumbs.

Greenwood, Oct. 13.—L. P. Mullinax, manager of the Troy Oil Mill, who was shot Wednesday afternoon by G. W. Long, proprietor of the Troy Pharmacy while Long was acting as a special deputy, died Wednesday night in the Augusta hospital. Mr. Long, who had already surrendered to Sheriff McMillan, is still in the county jail. His attorney will apply for bail at once. The inquest was held yesterday afternoon at Troy. Solicitor Cooper was present at the inquest and W. H. Nicholson, of Grier, Park & Nicholson, was present representing the defendant.

Before the death of Mr. Mullinax, his father Mr. J. W. Mullinax, swore out a warrant for Mr. Harve Robinson, inendant, and Mr. J. B. Dowtin, the other deputy who was with Mr. Long, charging them with intent to kill. The death of Mr. L. P. Mullinax changed the charge and when the coroner's jury returned a verdict which did not include these two the charge against them was dropped. The report that they were in jail was without foundation. The two offered to surrender, but were advised to wait until the inquest had been held. Mr. Robinson, the inendant, is cashier of the Bank of Troy. Mr. J. B. Dowtin, the other deputy, was sworn in with Mr. Long to make the arrest of the negroes. The negroes were employees of the Troy Oil mill, of which Mr. Mullinax was manager, and this fact brought about the unfortunate difficulty.

TO MUSTER IN EDISTO RIFLES.

Old Company of Orangeburg to Go Back Into Service.

Orangeburg, Oct. 12.—A meeting of the Edisto Rifles has been called preparatory to the mustering in of the company on the 23d of this month.

This historic company disbanded a few years ago, the members not caring to serve in the 3d regiment, to which they were transferred from the 2d regiment. The company was to be mustered back into service several months ago, but from some unaccountable cause it has not been. However, pursuant to an order issued by Gov. Blease, Adj. Gen. Moore has advised Capt. J. P. Moseley that he will be in this city on the 23d instant, to muster in the Edisto Rifles.

CLINTON MAN HORSEWHIPPED.

J. G. Wham Administers Severe Thrashing to W. E. Nash.

Clinton, Oct. 14.—The citizens of Clinton were somewhat excited this morning when Mr. J. G. Wham administered a severe whipping to Mr. W. E. Nash in front of the First National Bank, in the heart of the city. For a long time, it is stated, there has been a growing spirit of enmity between these two men.

A few days ago Mr. Nash reported Mr. Wham for hauling dirt out of the public streets, and this morning the mayor of the town fined Mr. Wham $1 for this offence. This, it appears, infuriated Mr. Wham and a few minutes later on meeting Mr. Nash in front of the bank he drew his buggy whip, and on telling Mr. Nash that he was tired of his meddling with other people's business, began whipping him. After striking him twenty-five or thirty times Mr. Wham took his buggy and left immediately for his home. Both of these citizens were summoned immediately to mayor's court. A fine of $75 or 30 days on the chain gang was imposed upon Mr. Wham. Both men are prominent citizens, living just at the incorporate limits of the city, their farms adjoining one another.

LAWYERS IN FATAL COMBAT.

Former College Classmates Principals in Pilot Mountain Tragedy.

Charlotte, N. C., Oct. 12.—Thomas Kallum, lawyer and editor, shot and killed Henry Whitaker, a brother attorney, upon the main street of Pilot Mountain this afternoon. The homicide grew out of an old feud. Whitaker is said to have been advancing upon Kallum with a knife when the fatal shot was fired.

Both slayer and his victim were class mates at Wake Forest College. The dead man leaves a family.

Whitaker was 63 years old, tall and well preserved for a man of his years. Kallum was only 23 and a cripple, walking with the aid of a cane. He is editor of the Pilot Mountain News. Whitaker, it is said by eyewitnesses, advanced upon Kallum with an open knife. The latter warned him to stop, and after some hesitation fired, shooting Whitaker through the head, killing him instantly. Kallum surrendered immediately to the authorities. Bad blood had existed between the two men for some time, though the cause is unknown.

Culture in Relation to Control of Field Crop Insects.

This is the season of the year when cultural methods for controlling field crop insects pests must be seriously considered. Most of the pests with which we had to contend during the past season are beginning to make preparations for winter quarters. The cotton boll worm will burrow about two and a half inches into the soil of cotton and corn land and then change to a chrysalis and remain during the winter. The corn stalk borer remains all winter as a larva in the base of corn stubble below the surface of the soil. The black bill bug remains as a pupae in the base of the corn stubble during the winter. The cotton and corn root lice are protected by the ants in undisturbed fields and like the cotton leaf louse, they maintain themselves on wild food plants in the early part of the year before the crops are up and in fall and early winter after the crops are harvested. Chinch bugs and the beetles of the southern corn root worms find winter shelter in rubbish, dead grass, and weeds that remain in the fields. It is therefore self evident that neglected fields during the fall and winter are the best "incubators" for the pests that are to menace our crops next year. If the same crops follow each other on the same land, the conditions for insect propagation are favored still more because their preferred food is placed right before them so that they need not even have to hunt for it. These are the conditions, therefore, that if not given any forethought, will give us endless trouble next year.

A system of fall and winter culture together with the planting of crops that will act as cleansers against weeds that serve as food plants and which themselves have considerable immunity against insects, is the important question before the farmer right now. Among the plants that are relatively free from insect attacks are the vetches, cowpeas, clovers, and rye. Here then are excellent plants to be used for cleansing cover crops.

The boll worm is controlled by winter plowing which breaks up or exposes his earthen cell. If the corn stubbles are plowed under in winter, the corn stalk borer moth cannot get out. To control bill bugs the infested stubble should be plowed up and destroyed. Cleansing crops destroy the weeds that support our root and leaf lice, and also destroys the place suitable for winter quarters for the chinch bugs and southern corn root worm beetle. If we take a bird's eye-view of all the recommendations made for controlling field crop insects together with the planting of cleansing crops, it resolves itself into rotation, deep fall plowing, and the planting of winter cover crops. These recommendations are in line with those of the leading agricultural workers of the South. The methods of culture and the system of rotation may vary to suit the circumstances. In a nut shell the following is a typical rotation for the control of field crop insects on the average farms of the South:

Field 1. First year—Corn, Cowpeas, Oats. Second year—Oats, Cowpeas, Cover. Third year—Cotton, Cover.

Field 2. First year—Oats, Cowpeas, Cover. Second year—Cotton, Cover. Third year—Corn, Cowpeas, Oats.

Field 3. First year—Cotton, Cover. Second year—Corn, Cowpeas, Oats. Third year—Oats, Cover.

A Gubernatorial Challenge.

The following letter has been received at this office, which may be of interest to the public:

STATE OF SOUTH CAROLINA,
Executive Chamber.

Columbia, Oct. 10, 1911.

To the Editor of the Journal:
A friend of mine has forwarded me your paper of the 9th, in which you speak of me as a "villain."

"I spent part of three days in your city last week. Why did you not come to my face and tell me this, instead of your cowardly action in printing it in your paper?"

I will be in your city again at your county fair, stopping at Argyle hotel. If you desire to make this statement be man enough to make it to my face and not be a slurring (sic) coward and strike me in the back.

COLE L. BLEASE.

The expression referred to is contained in the following paragraph:

There is fine material in South Carolina politics just now for a comic opera with Cole Blease as the villain.

Of course, Mr. Blease may take this as he likes, but there are, probably few readers of the Journal dull-witted enough to think a suggestion of the governor's fitness to play the part of a villain in a comic opera dramatization of the present political situation in South Carolina, is "speaking of him as a villain."

There are perhaps people who think Mr. Blease a villain or worse, but we have seen no newspaper that has stated its opinion of him to this effect. Certainly the Journal has not done so.

We shall have to ask his excellent excellency to accept our regrets to his invitation to meet him at the Argyle hotel in this city or elsewhere. We would not intrude our unappreciative presence or attempt to interrupt for a moment the continuous performance he gives wherever he goes of his favorite burlesque, which might be entitled, "Governing a Great State," but which he renders with a seriousness and an importance that produces an unconscious satire.

We are little concerned about Mr. Blease or his acts or his talk, but when a man as ridiculous, as comical, as grotesque, as droll, as absurdly vain as he is gets into the limelight he is sure to furnish better material for newspaper paragraphs than for serious denunciation, much as he would prefer the latter style of treatment.—Spartanburg Journal.
