GOV. BLEASE'S STATEMENT.

Issued One Last Thursday to the Voters of South Carolina.

Gov. Blease issued the following statement to-day:
Columbia, S. C., Aug. 29, 1912.
To the Democratic voters of South Carolina:

On Tuesday, the Democrats of this State decided in behalf of an honest, clean campaign.

Two years before, in an interview (on September 14th,) speaking of the primary election in the race for governor, Senator B. R. Tillman said:

"This is a remarkable illustration of what little influence our newspapers have. They have been so unfair and unjust that they are discredited by the people."

What he said then has been more than emphasized in this election, but I do not care to rehash the bitterness and the filth which South Carolina has passed through for the past three months, and I hope that it may be possible for me to forget and to forgive. God, in His all-wise Providence has protected me, and through the voice of the people, which is the voice of God, has given to me the greatest victory ever known to the world.

It would be impossible for human tongue to speak or hand to write what I feel and what I would love to say to my friends in South Carolina—to say that I thank them is indeed so little and insignificant that I feel ashamed almost to use that word. I thank them and from the bottom of my heart I say, praise God from Whom all blessings flow and may His choicest blessings rest upon my friends and our proud commonwealth; that He may give to me the power and the wisdom to serve my State and my people better than I have ever served them before, and to serve them with a heart devoted to the cause of humanity and Christianity. My friends, I thank you, may God bless you, and if I can ever serve you, command, and I will obey.

And to the many hundreds of good ladies, who have added their words of encouragement and their prayers for success, I say to them, I thank you and may God's choicest blessings ever rest upon you.

If I have said one word or done one single thing which you disapprove of, I beg your forgiveness and that you remember the circumstances under which I labored were most trying.

CHILD SAVED BY PET KITTEN.

Mother Warned by Meows and Finds Daughter in Danger.

Venice, Cal., Aug. 28.—A pet kitten saved 12-year-old Olive Henderson, of this place from probable death yesterday. The child and the kitten had gone for a walk, and after a time the kitten returned alone. When it saw the girl's mother, it began to "me-ow" and started away. Mrs. Henderson did not follow and the kitten returned to renew its complaining and again started away. At last the mother followed.

The kitten led the way to the end of an amusement pier, where the child was found hanging from a large spike. She had fallen from the pier and her clothing had caught in the spike.

Lifeguards rescued the girl. She was barely conscious and was unable to make an outcry loud enough to be heard by promenaders on the pier.

ON ROOF TO AVOID BURGLARS.

Policeman Rescues Ladies Who Imagine Robbers are in House.

Louisville, Ky., Aug. 30.—Mrs. W. I. Whitehouse, 17-year-old bride, and Lavinia Adams were rescued by a policeman at an early hour yesterday morning from the roof of the former's home, where they had marooned themselves to escape supposed burglars.

The two were startled by noises in the house and climbed out of a window onto the slanting roof, where they stood in the rain until their cries attracted a neighbor who notified the police.

Shooting at the Clock.

Strabane (county Tyrone) Urban Council is offering a reward to those who will give such information as will lead to the conviction of people who use the dial of the town clock as a target. The contractor for repairing the clock states that there are several bullet holes in the dial looking on the main street, one bullet having passed clean through the clock.

The chairman of the council states that when the tower was removed in which the old clock was fixed it was found that the weather vane was almost eaten away with shot holes. People used to fire at it to see it turn round. The amusement died out, but apparently it has been revived in regard to the dial of the town clock.—London Globe.

THREE KILLED IN EXPLOSION.

One of the Mills of Rand Powder Company Blew Up.

Knoxville, Tenn., Aug. 29.—Three men were killed and several injured in an explosion of one of the mills of the Rand Powder company at Marlow, 23 miles west of Knoxville, this morning. The dead: John Giles, Frank Barrett and George Newbrill. The injured are: George Walters, of Dossett, hand hurt; Henry Nelson, of Marlow, one rib broken; Downes, home not known, right arm cut.

The dead and injured men were laborers employed in the mills as mixers of powder. A quantity of powder had been loaded on a truck which runs into the mixing mills. As Barrett and Newbrill were leaving the building with the truck of powder John Giles was approaching them. When they reached a point a few feet from the building the powder in the mill exploded, wrecking the building and killing the three men who were near the trucks.

The mill in which the explosion occurred was about 30 or 40 feet in size. In it at the time of the explosion were 240 kegs of powder in crude form, all of which was destroyed.

Tomtit a Lamplighter.

There is generally some quite simple explanation of amystery—if it can only be found out. The lamplighter at Greenford, near Ealing, has been puzzled for some time past by finding one of the lamps lighted every day, although he had duly turned it down. He suspected no spooks, but mischievous boys, and so he prepared an ambush. To his astonishment, as he was watching, up went the light with never a boy in sight, and then he discovered that the unauthorized lamplighter was a tomtit which had a nest in a corner of the lamp, and in getting into it was in the habit of hopping on to the ring of the incandescent by-pass. Many years ago the writer of this note remembers a spell of mystery in the shape of the mysterious ringing of a bell at intervals during the night. No human agency could be detected, and the mystery grew deeper. Possibly the Psychological Research Society might have been appealed to had not chance revealed the fact that the ringing was caused by a rat, which used the wire as a jumping off place. Spooks are composed of very varied materials.—Wesminster Gazette.

REUNITED AFTER 19 YEARS.

Father and Daughter Come Together Through an Advertisement.

Cleveland, O., Aug. 28.—After having been separated 19 years, S. D. Wagner, of Bluffton, Ind., and his daughter were reunited here last night. Their meeting came after a telephone conversation when Wagner in Bluffton heard Edna speaking in Cleveland in a woman's voice that, when he had last heard it, had been that of a baby.

When the child was two years old the mother died, and the father placed Edna in a Cleveland orphanage whence she was transferred to that of the Sisters of Charity in Toledo. She was taken from there by a preacher who kept her several years at his home in Henry county, Ohio.

Thence she came to Cleveland, and it was here some one told her of an advertisement for his lost child which had been made by S. D. Wagner, of Bluffton. She called Wagner by long distance, soon established her identity and the reunion plans followed.

BIG HUSBANDS BEST.

Look Out for the Small Man With a Sharp, Thin Nose.

Big men make the best husbands and little men with sharp, thin noses are especially to be avoided, according to Mrs. Anna Murphy, chief police matron, in her official report to Chief of Police McWeeny.

Mrs. Marie Leavitt, clerk of the court of domestic relations, also forwarded a report in which she jolted the little men.

"Big men, whether it is in business or in matrimony, are easier to get along with," wrote Matron Murphy. "They are more likely to be easy going and less irritable and more generous. The little man is more likely to be nervous and fidgety."

"A man with a sharp thin nose is apt to be a scold. Where a man of small stature is endowed with a nasal organ of this sort you have a bad combination. There you have a prize faultfinder. He will rail at everything from the way the steak is cooked to the way his socks are darned."

Mrs. Leavitt added this:

"The small men greatly outnumber the big men in the cases that come before this court. Most of our cases are for non-support, and on this complaint the little unskilled man is the worst offender by far."—N. Y. World.

BOY BANDIT ARRESTED.

Brags About Holding Up Station Agent and Apprehension Follows.

Hammond, Ind., Aug. 28.—Mitchell Kosachiah, 15, who said his home is in Philadelphia, was arrested here last night, charged with having robbed John Lynch, Highland station agent, of the Erie Railroad, of $100. Lynch said the boy pointed two revolvers at him and forced him to hand over the money.

Later Kosachiah appeared at Hammond and gathered about him a crowd of others youths. He treated his companions to soda water and nickel shows.

"I am on my way West to kill Indians," the youngster told the crowd of admirers. "Just to continue in practice, I 'tuck up' a station agent out in the country a little way. Gee, that fellow was scared! He handed over his roll without a word."

"When I get tired of this place I am going to Chicago to buy a cowboy's outfit. Then I will go West." His arrest followed his bragging.

The Outwitting of Mr. Witt.

There is a butcher in one of the small Northern Indiana towns who is a sort of village cut-up, whose name is Witt. Witt delights to play jokes on the lads that come to his shop for their mother at meal time and at odd times of the hot summer days, for the shop always is cool, made so by the huge icebox in which the meat is kept. But Witt was outwitted one day by a sharp little youngster who was generally in the van when anything was to be "pulled off" by the village boys.

Johnny and some of his boy companions were hanging around the butcher shop, taking advantage of the coolness emanating from the refrigerator.

"Say, Johnny," said the butcher, as a smile played over his face, "you take this fly paper, put it on the floor, and stand on it, and I'll give you a nickel."

"Sure ting!" exclaimed the lad. "Decorate the counter here with the coin, so's I'll know you'll come troo, and give us the fly-catchin' stuff."

The butcher put the nickel on the counter near the boy and then handed him the fly paper. Johnny took the paper, turned it stick side down on the floor, stamped all over it until it was glued down tight—and then grabbed the nickel and "beat it."—Indianapolis News.
