

EXTINCT SCOTCH INDUSTRY.

A Fashion That Even Royal Patronage Could Not Save.

It is stated that by the year 1834 the annual value of the trade in Paisley shawls reached a total of $5,000,000, and this was not the high water mark of the trade.

In its final form these beautiful shawls were made reversible, having a pattern on both sides, and large numbers of such shawls were made in the second half of the nineteenth century, says a London special to The New York Sun. Queen Victoria was a great admirer of the work of the Paisley craftsmen and encouraged the industry over a considerable period by regular purchases, giving away a great many in the form of presents.

Fashion, however, proved too strong even for the patronage of the Queen and the trade languished to the point of extinction. Finally the skilled craftsmen who had woven these beautiful fabrics had to seek elsewhere to find a market for their industry. They turned to cotton, and it was their labor which laid the foundations of the cotton thread industry with which Paisley is now associated.

"There can be no dispute as to the origin of the Paisley harness shawl. Conjecture must be content to find reasons for the change in fashion which killed a thriving industry and made the Paisley shawl extinct save in collections," says The Times.

"The historian of the town has told the story of the rise and fall of the industry and of the men who made it. The shawl was evolved by a slow process of development. In the first place patterns were sewn on plain fabrics by the Paisley weavers and not till a later date were figures woven into the cloth.

"At the close of the eighteenth century the Paisley weavers reached the highest point of skill and applied their craftsmanship to the production of what afterward became famous as the Paisley shawl, which may be defined as harness work in which there is an attempt to reproduce in the loom the effects wrought by the needle in the Indian shawl."

Many kinds of shawl were produced in damask, crepe, canton and chenille, but the introduction of what afterward came to be known as the real Paisley shawl may be assigned to the end of the second decade of the nineteenth century. For the production of this article it was necessary to use yarns which had been specially prepared. The warp consisted of fine silk, around which was spun a coating of the finest cashmere wool. The shawl was woven face downward, and all that the weaver had to guide him was a confused mass of floating threads, calling for the closest attention if the work was to be properly done.

The "shawl" thus made had a great vogue and was almost universally selected as a present not only for weddings but on many other occasions. Those who are fortunate enough to possess such shawls or who have had the opportunity of inspecting the fine examples to be found in public collections can not fail to recognize the beauty of many of the patterns employed and the great skill in weaving shown by the old craftsmen of Paisley.

KENTUCKY TREASURE HUNT.

Search for Slave Dealer's Buried Money Unsuccessful.

A party of Illinois men, headed by a Mr. Smith, was in Smithland Monday searching for hidden treasures on the old Weaver property, says a Smithland, Ky., dispatch, to the New York Sun, but after a day's toil they gave up the quest, with nothing but sore muscles and aching limbs to reward them for their labors.

According to Mr. Smith, his great-grandfather, John H. Smith, who owned the property in ante-bellum days, died here just after a trip to New Orleans, where he sold a boatload of mules and negro slaves.

The money he received for the "produce" was supposed to have been buried about the premises and was never found. The property is now owned by Judge Abell, who readily granted permission for the search and excavation.

WOMAN THREM BRICKS.

Broke Windows of American Church in Paris.

Paris, Oct. 16.—Bricks recently were thrown through a beautiful stained glass window of the American Protestant Episcopal church here and stones were thrown through a dining room window of the rectory of the Rev. Dr. Watson. Miss Minnie Vail, aged 45, formerly of New York, to-day was arrested and to the examining magistrate admitted she had broken the windows. She said she was a suffragette but added that she had private motives for her conduct.

Miss Vail declined to accept passage to America and an examination of her mental state was ordered.

BOBCAT BATTLES WITH GOATS.

Latter With Jaybirds as Allies Came Off Victors.

A battle royal was witnessed recently by two game hunters, Judge A. J. Derby and Fred E. Newby, says a Hook River dispatch to the New York Sun. They were returning to Sonny along a narrow ledge at the side of Mitchell's Point, when they came upon two Angora goats fighting with a bobcat.

"We were attracted by the noise," says Judge Derby. "The big cat would run a short distance, stop and spit at the goats, which, however, charging with their heads down, gave him but little rest. The cat was continually spitting and the goats gave little short, sharp bleats at intervals."

"The running fight continued for several hundred yards across the side of the mountain, when the cat bounded onto a high ledge, leaving the goats standing at the bottom, stamping their feet in anger."

"A flock of jaybirds, seeming to be allies of the goats, alighted in a dead tree at the back of the ledge, chattering and mocking at the tired cat, bolder ones of them flying down and pecking at his head."

The two Angora goats that inhabit the wilds of Mitchell's Point are the property of E. Locke, an orchardist living east of the point. They left their domestic haunts several years ago and began to make their home in the mountains. They now sleep upon a high, narrow ledge, where it would be difficult for a man to ascend, on the side of the rocky cliff overlooking the Columbia. Judge Derby and Mr. Newby think the cat attacked the goats, and they turned the tables on him.

High Prices in Buenos Ayres.

South Americans are about the only people who do not raise a protest against the high cost of living in the United States.

"We cannot kick about the high prices in America," said Dr. A. R. Calvo of Buenos Ayres, "because we pay much higher prices in our own country, particularly in the city of Buenos Ayres. This applies principally to the upper classes, for among the working classes living is relatively as cheap as, if not cheaper than in the United States. But in Buenos Ayres it costs more to live than in Washington, New York, or any other of your cities. This is true also of the larger cities in other South American countries. In Lima, Peru, for instance, fresh eggs cost 10 cents apiece, and poultry is so high that only the rich can afford to have it on the table."

"The price of eggs in Buenos Ayres—fresh eggs, of course—is little less than in Lima. Beef commands a price of 50 cents a pound, and other meats are proportionately high. A man in the professions cannot live comfortably for less than $700 to $800 a month, if he does any entertaining at all. One cannot get hotel accommodations, such as can be had in Washington, say, for $6 a day, for less than $12 to $15."—The Washington Post.

TO PULL SHORT MILEAGE.

Railroad Commission's Action Puts Books and Cash on Parity.

Columbia, Oct. 16.—Orders for railroads to pull short mileage between competitive points, thus putting mileage book holders on a parity with cash fare passengers, were issued to-day by the railroad commission, Commissioners Richards and Hampton voting for the resolution, Mr. Caughman opposing it.

The commission set the second Thursday in December for hearing representatives of the T. P. A. and the Southern Railway on the request of the traveling men to force the Southern Railway to keep back doors of passenger coaches open.

WOMAN SHOT BY HER HUSBAND.

Remonstrated with Him for Hunting on Posted Land.

Raleigh, N. C., Oct. 16.—Charles Stuart, of Buncombe county, N. C., to-day shot his wife and to-night she is dying in a hospital at Asheville. The trouble grew out of the fact that she remonstrated with him on learning he intended to go squirrel hunting on posted land.

The Way it Was.

It was a cold day in December and the superintendent of a charitable institution was examining a number of poor children as to their claims for more comfortable clothing. Margaret was under examination. She was pinned up quite securely in a thin shawl.

"Have you any clothes at home?" she was asked kindly.

"No."

"What have you got on?"

"Please, this is me aunt's shawl, an'—me dress is next, an' then comes I."—Everybody's Magazine.

CONWAY MAN LOSES ARM.

Heroic Effort of Miss Edna Mae Stephens Probably Saved His Life.

Conway, Oct. 17.—Robert McCracken, the superintendent of the "Snow Hill" farm on the outskirts of town, happened to a horrible accident at the farm ginney Tuesday afternoon. While attempting to unchoke one of the gins his hand was caught in the saws and torn into shreds. As he staggered from the gin house to his home his cries for help were heard by Miss Edna Mae Stephens, of the High School faculty, who requested the wounded man to sit down. She quickly and tightly clasped the arm above the wound and practically checked the flow of blood from the arteries until medical assistance could be secured. Mr. McCracken was rushed to a local hospital where it was found necessary to amputate the arm at the shoulder. The self-possession and quick action on the part of Miss Stephens probably saved Mr. McCracken's life.

THE SPIRIT OF WASTEFULNESS.

It is Manifested in Fire Losses, Says Redfield.

Philadelphia, Oct. 16.—"The appalling yearly loss by fire in this country is only one of many manifestations of a spirit of wastefulness which has become an ingrained part of American thought and habit," declared William C. Redfield, Secretary of Commerce, in an address this afternoon before the National Fire Prevention Conference.

The American people, the Secretary said, must be taught to open their eyes before losses occur instead of after. He advocated the organization of a staff of demonstrators that would be at the service of a body similar to the fire prevention conference, whose duty it would be to go about the country addressing Legislatures, labor unions, civic bodies and other organizations on the general subject of wastefulness.

TWO ARE KILLED IN ACCIDENT.

Train Crashes into Wagon at Dalton, Ga., with Fatal Results.

Dalton, Ga., Oct. 16.—W. E. Benjamin and his wife were killed and their four children and Mrs. Roscoe Williams were injured when a south-bound Western and Atlantic train late to-day struck the wagon in which the party was riding near here. All the injured will recover.

MONKEYS ON HOSE.

Latest Zoological Effect in Dress Makes Men Gasp.

In the multitude of wonderful and fascinating sights with the advent of the split skirt, none has attracted more attention than an innovation in Fifth avenue yesterday, when the parting folds in the skirts of several women promenaders disclosed a mischievous monkey clinging near the calf line of millady's stocking. Of course, they were not real, live monkeys.

They were only "worked in" the stockings in colors, after the fashion of the white mice, snakes and other zoological efforts shown in stockings not long ago. The monkey is brown in color, with a white bald face and is set in a background of solid color, including black, white, purple and other shades.

The sight of monkeys swinging around on a woman's stocking is having a peculiar effect in some quarters. A man in the Waldorf, who sat gazing on a pair of the latest things in stockings, became petrified and evidently could not move, even after the woman wearing the monkey stocking left.

When he was aroused from his state of coma by a floor manager he trembled all over and perspiration rolled off his forehead. He admitted that he was not sure of what he had seen and felt easier when the sight was confirmed.

Peck & Peck are responsible for the monkey hose, and they declare they are selling quite a few pairs. One of the clerks in a Peck store said yesterday, with something of disgust in his voice, that if the fad for animals on stockings continued, it would only be a question of time until giraffes on stockings for tall women and hippopotami for portly women would be the vogue.—New York Herald.

BIG FIRE RAGES IN SHANGHAI.

Ten Thousand People Have Been Rendered Homeless.

London, Oct. 16.—A central news dispatch from Shanghai says a great fire has been raging for five hours today in a northern suburb of the city, half a square mile of which has been destroyed. Ten thousand people have been rendered homeless. The fire now is under control.

COLORED COUNTY FAIR

A colored county fair at Denmark November 12th, 13th, 14th and 15th, 1913. This will be the sixth annual fair of the Bamberg County Fair Association.

The object of the Association is to stimulate our people to a greater interest in agricultural, mechanical and other vocational pursuits and thereby in a tangible way lead them to labor for the things pertaining to the higher side of life.

The Association has purchased ten acres of land out from Denmark for Fair purposes and are erecting thereon an exhibit building thirty by seventy-five feet. This of course brings upon us a pretty fair expense. This we are hopeful of meeting by the strong aid of our white friends, who have always aided us in this great industrial uplift.
