Millions for Peanuts.

It was told in this column on Saturday about the success of Colonel John E. Donaldson, of Bainbridge, with peanuts and velvet beans; and some weeks ago a farmer of Shellman gave account of his success with peanuts. A firm in Bainbridge is now advertising that its mill will buy all the peanuts and velvet beans brought to it in 1917. In fact, the cotton seed mills have put on attachments for peanuts, and a market is assured. The demand is great.

Now, what about peanuts in Texas?

In the sandy lands of Texas, where the boll weevil cut off cotton production, farmers are going considerably into the peanut industry.

The nuts make from 25 to 100 bushels per acre, according to fertilizer and cultivation.

Mr. R. E. Coleman, manager of the Cotton Oil company, Comanche, Tex., turned his cotton seed mill into a peanut plant. The oil is extracted like cotton seed oil. During the season of 1915 the Comanche mill crushed between 900 and 1,000 tons of peanuts, handling over 66,000 bushels. Over 60,000 gallons of peanut oil were produced, and shipped out in tank cars, and over 500 tons of peanut cake and peanut meal were made. The United States has been importing large quantities of peanut oil, but in the future the Southern States can supply the demand. The peanut oil outclasses cottonseed oil, but the interest will not conflict. It is a new industry, and Mr. Coleman says it will prove a profitable one.

Peanut oil is used principally in the manufacture of butterine; it is also used as a salad oil, substitute for olive oil, in canning sardines, and the lower grades used in making soap. They have now in Texas shell plants. They hull the peanuts and ship them to manufacturers who turn out candy, peanut butter and salted peanuts.

The peanut meal is similar to cottonseed meal as a feed for stock. It is as rich in protein as cottonseed meal. Peanut hay is also valuable.

Georgia farmers are appraised of the fact that the soil best suited to the peanut, or groundpea, is one of a sandy, loamy nature, light and grayish in color. Soils of more clay carry more iron, staining the pea as to color, but not injurious for agricultural purposes, such lands producing heavier yields.

The climatic requirements are

A Kentucky Breakfast.

A New York man paid his first visit to the South, and found himself one night at the home of a hospitable Kentuckian out some ten miles from Lexington. He slept the sleep of the just and was awakened early the next morning by an old colored man, who asked him if he would like to have a breakfast in his room.

"Oh, I don't know," said the New Yorker. "What have you for breakfast this morning?"

"Ain't but one kind of Kentucky breakfast," the old negro replied with a grin.

"And what might that be?" asked the man.

"Jug of liquor, er nice steak an' ar dog," came the answer.

"For heaven's sake, what is the dog for?"

"He's to eat the steak," was the ready reply.

long seasons without frost. And this is why Georgia mills are now turning to Georgia corn. The corn has time to mature in the field and there is no need of premature gathering as in the West, sometimes causing the grains to sour.

Dr. W. R. Terry had success with peanuts. Read below his experience:

Would you care to try peanuts? Here is the experiment of Dr. W. R. Terry, of Shellman: He says that he planted 300 acres in peanuts on his farm this year, from which he gathered 10,000 bushels of peanuts and 100 tons of peanut hay. The peanuts are worth on the market 90 cents a bushel, which will bring him $9,000. He has sold 100 tons of the peanut vine hay and received $2,000 for it. Dr. Terry says that he runs 40 plows and that he did not plant over four acres of cotton to some of his plows. The doctor is an enthusiast on the possibilities of the peanut as a money crop, and says that the boll weevil invasion has no terror for him.

The Empire Cotton Oil Mill at Bainbridge is adding a peanut crusher to its line and is in the market for 10,000 tons of peanuts. Manager Carter is inducing Decatur county farmers to grow peanuts next and promises a ready market. This is all encouraging. The farmer is asking "What can I do?"

Plant peanuts for one thing. Raise hogs for another thing. Raise beef cattle. Cowpeas sell high and corn brings a good price. We need not starve.—Macon Telegraph.

A Nature Fake.

"What's bothering you, old man?" Jones asked his friend, the scientific gardener.

"It's no use," sighed the wizard; "I may as well give up. I got started a few years ago on a new idea. I took a head of cabbage and crossed it with a white potato and grew eyes on it; then I crossed that with a cornstalk and grew ears on it; then I crossed that with a squash and grew a neck on it; then I crossed that with a cocoanut and grew hair on it, but hanged if I can figure out what to do for a nose and a mouth!" —Chicago Ledger.

Sure Way to Get Job.

"Can you cook?" Mrs. Worried asked the applicant for a job in the kitchen of a Boston home.

"Can I cook?" the girl repeated scornfully. "Why, madame, with me cooking your meals your husband'll stay home every night to be sure of being up in time for the breakfast I'll get him."

She got the job.—Boston Transcript.
