WHEN UNCLE SAM GETS BUSY--

THERE won't be so much for you and me to do. But that time is not here yet. The first guns must be trained on the enemy by ourselves—Individual Effort—Cooperation—Public Opinion—the Power of the Press—the Commercial Club—these are the big guns that should be brought to bear on this question. But it's only a matter of time until Uncle Sam will join with us in this war against "mailorderites." The President of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World, in speaking before the Federal Trade Commission recently, openly condemned the advertising of the mail order houses, saying in part: "There is no reason why the catalog houses should be allowed the medium of the United States mails when all reliable publications have refused to accept their advertising." This Federal Trade Commission has promised to stop all unfair and dishonest publicity. So let's do our part until the big forces are enlisted on our side.

STORMS WALDORF ASTORIA.

Police Reserves Charge Crowd and Several Persons are Injured.

New York, Feb. 24.—A crowd of approximately 11,000 persons, mostly women, who had attended a mass meeting in Madison Square to protest against the high cost of food, stormed the Waldorf Astoria hotel late today, shouting they were starving and demanding to see Governor Whitman. When informed the governor was not there, but at another hotel, they refused to believe it and started a demonstration which necessitated the calling out of police reserves to disperse them. Several persons were injured in the disorder that followed. Four arrests were made.

One of the speakers at the Madison Square meeting had asked how many persons would be willing to go to the governor's hotel. Several in the crowd who took this as a signal to march, started away and soon an excited throng was moving up Madison avenue. At Thirty-second street, the marchers turned into Fifth avenue. One man, pointing at an automobile, shouted that no one had a right to ride automobiles when others were starving. The machine was stopped and instantly several persons boarded the running board and tried to drag the owner from the car. Policemen drove away his assailants.

Unable to Quiet Crowd.

Three policemen who tried to turn the marchers away from the Waldorf Astoria, were swept aside. Although reinforced soon afterwards by a number of porters and other employees of the hotel, they were unable to quiet the crowd. Traffic was blocked in all directions. One woman cried:

"We want to see the governor. We want bread. Our babies are starving."

The reserves arrived while she was speaking and formed a line in front of the hotel entrance. They vainly argued with the crowd and finally were forced to charge. One woman later was found unconscious in the street, where it was said, she had been knocked down.

While the police were dispersing the crowd in front of the Waldorf Astoria a committee which had been appointed at the Madison Square meeting called on Governor Whitman at the Hotel St. Regis. Several hundred of those who participated in the demonstration at the Waldorf Astoria assembled in the front of the St. Regis. The governor received the committee in one of the parlors of the hotel and told them he would support Mayor Mitchell and the other city authorities in every way possible in relieving the situation.

Count on the Governor.

"You can count on the governor and the State legislature to help to their fullest capacity," he said.

"If the corporation counsel should draft a bill which would meet your approval and which would be acceptable to the legislature, can you tell us just how quickly the city would be enabled to use the money to purchase food?" the governor was asked by one of the committee in reference to possible appropriation by the city. "The bill would go in Monday night," replied the governor, "and ought to come out signed and available to the city by Wednesday."

The governor told the committee he was "afraid things are too high," adding also that he was "afraid they are going higher."

"Such a condition," he said, "probably will prevail as long as there is such a foreign demand for our victuals. But we will do the best we can in the legislature to help the city relieve its needs."

There was no music and neither shouting nor hooting, as the marchers, bearing only a few signs and banners touching on the high cost of living, proceeded toward Madison Square in a score of processions.

Marched Quietly.

Nor was there any disorder when the women reached Madison Square. Only a few policemen were there, but reserves were held at nearby stations. The women marched quietly to places assigned them by those in charge of the meeting. Occasionally there was cheering when the speeches began, some of which were in foreign languages. One of the first to address the crowd was Adolph Blumenstein, a thirteen-year-old school boy.

"We want the high cost of living to go down," he said. "You can't support a family of five or six children on $17 a week with potatoes at 8 cents and onions at 15 cents a pound. Some people want preparedness, military training in the schools, too. But I ask you what is the use of this if we have nothing to eat to train on? We want food, not charity."

Housewives' Meetings.

The meeting in Madison Square followed many assemblages of housewives earlier in the day in all parts of the greater city. Meanwhile the district attorney and other officials were investigating storage house conditions as well as available railroad facilities for receipt and distribution of foodstuffs.

"The situation," District Attorney Swann declared tonight, "shows there is a premium put on speculation and gambling in the necessities of life."

He added that he did not propose to turn over to the federal authorities the information gained by his staff until he had learned whether New York county was entitled to any seizures that might be made and also if he has authority to prosecute those gambling in foodstuffs.

Although seventy-two carloads of potatoes were in the yards of one railroad company here today, only eleven carloads were unloaded, the district attorney's investigators reported. Similar conditions, they said, had existed here for several days past.

Agents of the federal department of justice visited Jersey City today and inspected three large cold storage plants there said to be filled with provisions of all kinds. They also examined the books of the companies, but gave no intimation of the purpose of their visit.
