

THE MAN AND THE DOG.

Throughout All Times They Have Been Friends and Companions.

Dogs are a tremendous subject. To write their history would be very largely to write the history of the human race, for practically wherever the human race is or has been there are and ever have been dogs. All down the centuries, in every country of the world, the friend of man has followed at the heel of some master, has rejoiced extravagantly in his favor, has abased himself utterly under the cloud of his displeasure, and, ever ready and ever eager to forget all differences, has reckoned the maintenance of good relations as the greatest thing in the world.

And so, from back in the past, when dog had no real history, when he is known to have existed at all only because of the rude carving on some solid rock overlooking some wild sea, from those dim times the one characteristic of the dog that seems to have come down to the present along one wonderfully unbroken road is his faithfulness. Five thousand years before the Christian era, the Egyptian peasant, as he watched each year for the happening of the great miracle, the rising of the Nile, noticed that its gracious waters began to trickle over his parched land just at the time that a certain glorious star appeared above the horizon. And so inevitably did the rising of the Nile follow upon the rising of the star that, to the present, the star's faithfulness could only be compared to the faithfulness of his dog, and thus Sirius came to be called the Dog Star. Thus, even at that time the dog had established himself firmly as the friend of man, one whose faithfulness was so unchanging that it formed a just comparison for the rising of a star.

True, there were and are certain eastern people to whom the dog, all his devotion notwithstanding, has failed to make appeal, amongst whom he is still regarded as an outcast. For the most part, however, and amongst most people, the dog has had no difficulty in establishing his position as the friend of man, and in maintaining and adding to his reputation in this capacity. Instances are so famous and so many, so utterly looked for and taken for granted, that any narration of them amounts almost to pathos. Dog devotion has afforded a subject to the artist again and again, a story for the writer, and a record for the historian, right down to the present time.

And now, during the past four years, the dog race that all over the world his faithfulness to the best traditions of praises are being sounded. The story of the war dog and his doing is gradually being pieced together. From the very beginning of the war, as one writer has expressed it, dogs "had a paw in it." When the Germans invaded Belgium, the harness dogs, which up to that time had been used for hauling milk, vegetables, and other produce, began to assist the refugees in getting their children and household goods out of the invaded country. Later they hauled light artillery, and carts laden with blankets, bread, hay, and scores of other things for the comfort of the soldiers and their horses. Dogs did sentry duty in the trenches, patrolled No Man's Land, carried dispatches through barbed wire entanglements, amid a hail of bullets, and above all, added to the laurels of their ancestors through the ages by seeking out and helping the wounded everywhere, on the far-flung battlefields of Europe and beyond.

Never was there a time, so it would seem, when the place of the dog in the affections of the human race ought to have been more secure. And yet, side by side with all this recognition of what the dog is and deserves, there still stands, and apparently easily maintains itself, the system of the vivisectionist. It is a system which must, of course, ultimately fall, because, amongst other reasons, of its simple depravity. But, for the present, this depravity is covered up for the multitude under the terrible plea of "progress;" whilst the devastating charge of "sentiment" is hurled at all and sundry who take exception to the practice. "There are many things worse than sentiment," said a famous English judge, not long ago, "and one of them is cruelty." Ingratitude is another.

"Well, after all," remarked Tommy who had lost a leg in the war, "there's one advantage in having a wooden leg."

"What's that?" asked his friend. "You can hold up your bloomin' sock with a tin-tack!" chuckled the hero.—Boy's Life.

Tillie—"Did you notice that the fortune-teller used the spade cards a great deal in telling fortunes?"

Bessie—"Well, I suppose she used the spade to dig up the past of the people whose fortunes she told."—Washington Star.

Safety First.

Edith—"When it comes to love, I wouldn't give a thought to how much man is making."

Maud—"Neither would I, dear. What would primarily interest me would be how much he had already made. There's no use taking chances.—Boston Transcript.

"I never thought a boy of mine would turn out that way."

"What's the matter?"

"I sent him to college, and he'd rather get his lessons than make the football team."—Detroit Free Press.

You Do More Work,

You are more ambitious and you get more enjoyment out of everything when your blood is in good condition. Impurities in the blood have a very depressing effect on the system, causing weakness, laziness, nervousness and sickness.

GROVE'S TASTELESS CHILL TONIC restores Energy and Vitality by Purifying and Enriching the Blood. When you feel its strengthening, invigorating effect, see how it brings color to the cheeks and how it improves the appetite, you will then appreciate its true tonic value.

GROVE'S TASTELESS CHILL TONIC is not a patent medicine, it is simply IRON and QUININE suspended in Syrup. So pleasant even children like it. The blood needs Quinine to Purify it and IRON to Enrich it. These reliable tonic properties never fail to drive out impurities in the blood.

The Strength-Creating Power of GROVE'S TASTELESS CHILL TONIC has made it the favorite tonic in thousands of homes. More than thirty-five years ago, folks would ride a long distance to get GROVE'S TASTELESS CHILL TONIC when a member of their family had Malaria or needed a body-building, strength-giving tonic. The formula is just the same today, and you can get it from any drug store. 60c per bottle.

ARE YOU THERE MR. BUSINESS MAN

WITH THE GOODS ALL DELIVERED, READY FOR FALL

Or is it the long-haul-far-away-off-market you bought yours from that's got you worried that you may not be ready in time for fall trade? As we were saying, it's all come true.

GOODS STILL CLIMBING UP HIGHER AND HIGHER.

And if you are not there already we are still well prepared to help in cost saving on your merchandise. You will want twice the amount of goods you did last fall, and if you speed up and get your brain working on all cylinders you will fully realize the great importance of seeing or writing us about your fall and winter needs for many more goods in all lines of Dry Goods, Hosiery, Underwear, Overalls, Pants, Rubber and Rain Coats, Ladies' and Misses' Cloaks, Comforts and Blankets, they will all be much higher and the good qualities will all be gone entirely.

Every buy now for fall and winter and even next spring, too, is a safe investment and almost a sure bet—we still have the goods you should be buying now. Experience has long ago taught us when cotton jumps one cent a pound Dry Goods go up two or three cents a yard. Get busy and remember that this is of vital importance to you. Goods jumped skyward along with cotton last week and will go up higher than the airships in a few more weeks and yours will be another sad story of a foolish man fast asleep at the switch again.

Your credit should be good to secure our fall terms and we pay full railroad fare both ways to customers buying their fall season's bills, and if you cannot come and see us yourself we will send our salesman with samples to see you. Is there anything more you could want than this? Get in communication with us at once. Write, wire or phone us at our expense quickly—we are most anxious to save you money and worry while there is still time and goods. We are waiting to hear from you.

Connect your trolley with us and save troubles.
