war, he established in Paris L'Homme Libre, a paper so bitterly anti-administration that it was suppressed. Soon after it reappeared in Bordeaux under the name of L'Home Enchaine. Clemenceau refused to be silenced in exposing government abuses growing out of the war. When the Bola Pasha and Caillaux revelations awakened France to her peril, revelations largely brought about by Clemenceau, the L'Tiger's" popularity became nationwide. President Poincare called upon the veteran statesman in November, 1917, when all France was depressed by the defeatist propaganda and her troops were suffering sorely in the field, to head a new war ministry.

Interpellated in the chamber of deputies as to what his "war aim" would be, the white haired premier replied: "My aim is to be a victor." He expressed at this time his opposition to receiving Germany into any society of nations which might be formed after the war, and declared:

"Men of great minds believe that words have the power to liberate. The word 'right,' the word 'justice,' the word 'liberty,' are words as old as man. Many thinkers believe some miracle, will suddenly end the war and produce a society of nations. I do not believe it. I am here for action. I can not see that a society of nations is the necessary conclusion of the present war." Later, however, he approved of the league of nations covenant.

"Day of Glory."

Speaking in the French senate in 1917 he declared: "We will fight until the hour when the enemy comes to understand that bargaining between crime and right is no longer possible. We want a just and strong peace, protecting the future against the abominations of the past."

"We have waited 49 years for this moment," he was quoted as saying on June 25, 1919, when the German note accepting the treaty of peace was received at Versailles. "This is life's biggest moment for me."

Shot by the 19 year old anarchist, Emile Cottin, on February 2, 1919, Clemenceau joked with the doctor who attended h'm. "The anarchists hunted the 'tiger' but they missed him," he remarked. Cottin was sentenced to death, but Clemenceau urged -Miss Helen Weissinger, a former commutation and the youth received Carlisle student, was a visitor in the ten years imprisonment. When President Wilson called to express his sympathy the aged statesman told him his "hide" was "too thick for a bullet to pierce."

> Upon the completion of the draft of the peace treaty by the supreme interallied conference, Clemenceau, who had presided at the historical gathering, bade his colleagues adieu with the observation: "I have done my best, I think it is a good peace."

Although a radical in French politics, Clemenceau had no use for bolshevism. Questioned about the Russian situation last December he said: "We not only will not make peace but we will not compromise with the government of the soviets. We have decided that we will be the allies of all peoples attacked by bolshevism." He at the same time expressed his confidence in the Anglo-Franco-American agreements and predicted a solution of the Fiume problem.

"The Fiume question has been agonizing," he declared. "Italy promised Fiume to the Jugo-Slavs but went back on her promise. France, England and the United States have sought a solution and the latest indications are that it will be reached. Only when this is accomplished can we begin to breathe freely."

MRS. L. E. HILL.

The subject of this sketch was born in Alabama September the twentieth, 1839, and died at her home in Bamberg August 19, 1919, having nearly reached her four score years. Mrs. Hill was, before her marriage, Miss Lieuvonia Daffin. She was only three years of age when her father died. She came with her mother to Colleton county, S. C., to make her home in 1850. She was married to Henry H. Hill August 13, Mr. and Mrs. Hill moved to Bamberg county just after the civil war. She was left a widow in 1876.

The children who survive her are: J. W. Hill, Bamberg; H. H. Hill, Columbia, S. C.; Mrs. M. C. Sandifer and Mrs. Alice Zeigler, both of Tampa, Fla. There are also a number of grand-children and great-grandchildren. Mrs. Hill was converted and united with the Baptist church early in life, and lived a consistent Christian life for more than three score years. On account of the disease which finally caused her death she was shut in for a number of years. She suffered a great deal. Yet, none went to see her who did not come away with a blessing for having been in her presence. She was unselfish in a great degree, cheerful even amidst suffering and her consecrated life impressed all who came in contact with her. The Lord always received the best in her heart and life. When the Red Cross called for workers during the great world war she responded by knitting fifteen sweaters, 55 pair of socks, a number of wristlets, besides teaching a number of people to knit and helped them with their work. She often remarked that she felt that the Lord had spared her life to knit sweaters and socks for the sailors and soldiers. Much of this work was done while she was suffering intensely.

A loving mother, faithful friend. consecrated Christian and useful church member finished her work and went to be with her Lord. HER PASTOR.
