Each company showed up well. The splendid line held in company front formation was the deciding factor that won for company "B" the laurels of the day. The officers of this company are: Captain Ernest Horne; First Lieut. Lawrence Peebles; Second Lieut. George Muckenfuss; First Sgt. Franklin Campbell. It is a noteworthy fact that company "B" was the winning company last year and Captain Horne was the winner of the individual prize. He was then a corporal in his company. Company "A" came second in the contest.

The contest to determine the best drilled cadet was a very grueling one. The judges found it hard to eliminate any one of the 40 contestants. The last two cadets to remain in line were

Sgt. Raye was finally declared winner of this much coveted contest.

After the company and individual drills the judges awarded the sabre and medal to the respective winners. The battalion then went on dress parade and the school year, for the cadets, was closed.

No Worms in a Healthy Child
All children troubled with worms have an unhealthy color, which indicates poor blood, and as a rule, there is more or less stomach disturbance. GROVE'S TASTELESS chill TONIC given regularly for two or three weeks will enrich the blood, improve the digestion, and act as a General Strengthening Tonic to the whole system. Nature will then throw off or dispel the worms, and the Child will be in perfect health. Pleasant to take, 60c per bottle.Colds Cause Grip and Influenza

Home Service Report.

Returned American soldiers, in large numbers, are handicapped, some partially or totally disabled by disease. They have come home bringing new problems and new responsibilities to the government and the institutions they have fought to save. Their welcome has been the utmost outpouring of the country's gratitude and love, of true friendship on the part of our citizens. The responsibility of the state to care for its disabled fighting men is now recognized throughout the world to an extent unknown before the latest war. In the modern view the country must not only endeavor to restore these men to bodily health, but must endeavor to make good the material loss on the economic side. Men who have risked their lives for their country justly deserve and expect the highest consideration and care as the nation has decided to give them. Yet there is much to be done, and while the responsibility of the government for the measures to be taken is supreme, there is need and opportunity for the cooperation of other agencies in the care of these men.

On May 7th I received a wire from headquarters urging immediate acceptance of hospitalization by Eddie O'Brien, former ex-soldier of Bamberg. Earnest effort was made at locating, advising and making necessary arrangements for his departure. An attendant from Atlanta accompanied him to the public health service hospital at East Norfolk, Mass., where he will remain under careful treatment for some time.

Since a development in the patient of a proper outlook and ambition for the future is indeed considered to be one of the most important parts of a restorative hospital work, which must reach the mind as well as the body, it is to be hoped that Eddie will return completely restored to sane health—able to care for himself and dependent parents, both of whom are in ill health.

The following extracts from a letter from headquarters was recently received: "Wish to thank you for your cooperation and assistance in securing compensation and hospitalization for Edward. It has been a very difficult matter to secure for him the benefits to which he is entitled from the government, but I trust he will have no further difficulty in receiving all that is due him. As a patient in the hospital Edward is entitled to total temporary compensation."

Ex-service men continue to apply for pay-backs, allotments, compensation fees, etc. In awaiting action, claimants must be patient and consider the number of claims presented, and the number of inquiries which the bureau must face as its daily work.

Home service workers know, but the public must also understand that ex-service men who do not avail themselves of the opportunities offered by the government do so at a grave loss to themselves, their communities and county at large.

In order to create locally this force of healthy public opinion, handbooks and other approved literature may be had upon application. Home service is an expression of the quickened ideals of the nation.

I have an elaborate analysis of the field of social service and how to meet these needs, prepared by the southern division of the A. R. C. It might be helpful to an active committee in organizing and promoting community activities, such as sanitation, child welfare, recreation, family welfare, systematic visitation and improved conditions in jails, almshouses, etc. All agencies must work together if the whole field is to be developed and if the community is to receive the full benefits of organized good will of its citizens.—Julien Counts Easterling, secretary H. RESOLUTIONS.

Whereas, God in His infinite wisdom and providence has seen fit to remove from our midst our beloved member, Mrs. Margaret Byrd:

Therefore, be it resolved,

First, that the members of the Missionary society of Trinity Methodist church of Bamberg, S. C., have in her untimely death lost a faithful member and esteemed friend and a generous and unostentatious helper in mission work, both foreign and home.

Second, that we shall miss her constant presence at our meetings.

Third, that her gentle, unassuming Christian character will leave lasting influence upon those who came in contact with her in the work.

Fourth, that we, as a body, tender to her bereaved family our heartfelt sympathy.

Fifth, that these resolutions be published in our home papers and a blank page in our minutes be inscribed to her memory.

Co-operating for Growth

The dollars of our savings depositors are multiplying—the number of people who are opening savings accounts at our bank is increasing—and the accounts of our old depositors are growing.

Our books show an increase in savings deposits of 42 per cent. since the first of January. Deposits of $122,180.81 at the close of business, December 31, 1919, had reached $174,582.28, at the close of business, April 30, 1920.

We know that every growing savings account and every new savings account means that the owner of that account is progressing. The figures of our growth show that the service we have rendered has proved efficient and helpful.

But it is our aim to be of even greater service, and to enlarge upon the service we are now rendering at every opportunity. We believe that the patronage and cooperation of our friends which have been so largely responsible for the progress we have already made will also be important factors in the growth we are looking forward to.

It will be our endeavor to continue to deserve your support. Thank you for the help you have given us.
